Picture Sparks Wide Controversy

This photograph, taken split seconds after shooting of U.S. President Kennedy in Dallas last Nov. 22, has sparked world-wide controversy. In foreground is president's car. Circled in background is man in doorway of building from which shots were fired. Many think man resembles Lee Harvey Oswald, accused assassin. See stories Page 3.—(AP Photofax)

Two Yes Votes, One No

In three referendums and a byelection in Greater Victoria yesterday, this is what happened:

- Approval was given for expenditure of $8,737,354 for construction of 176 new school rooms in District 61.
- Approval was given for expenditure of $158,379 as part of the purchase price of an administration centre for the school board on the Lansdowne campus.
- Fred Hawes won the Oak Bay byelection.
- Esquimalt ratepayers turned thumbs down on a proposed $383,000 swimming pool.

Horror at Church Party

FIRE DANCE ENDS IN BLAZING DEATH

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Six Samoans presenting a fire dance at a church party died Saturday night in a blaze apparently touched off by their flaming torches.

Scores of persons were injured, with at least 60 being taken to one hospital.

One witness said the audience panicked when flames ran up a stage curtain. They rushed for the doors and there was wild fighting to get out of the building.

Firemen called it a "horrible massacre" and said the street in front of the building, All Hallow's Church at Oakdale and Newhall Streets in San Francisco's Bay View district, was smeared with blood.

Firemen said one of the participants in the fire dance lighted a torch near a stage curtain and the curtain blazed up.

Ernie Burciga, standing nearby, attempted to put out the flames with a hand fire extinguisher.

Witnesses said there was an apparent connection between the extinguisher stream and the flame. The blaze, they said, seemed to follow the extinguisher stream up the curtain and flames fanned out on rafters over the crowd.

Buck Dedmon said the audience then panicked and rushed for the doors. There was wild fighting to get out of the building, he said.

Panic spread among 200 present at the performance given by the Samoan Benevolent Catholic Society. Flames spread up a curtain near a stage in the building adjoining All Hallow's Church.

Eyewitnesses said spectators fought to get out of the building as flames spread across rafters.

At least 60 were taken to one hospital and an undetermined number to three other hospitals.

DOUSED IN GASOLINE

The fire apparently broke out as a dancer, wearing a loin cloth, tried to light a knife wrapped in cotton and doused in gasoline, for use in the traditional fire dance.

The Samoan fire dance is a turbulent dance in which male dancers twirl razor-sharp knives about their bodies. They add color to the dance when performed at night by hooking flaming torches onto the knives.

A spectator, Tuese Ahkiomg, 25, said there was an explosion as the dancer tried to light the sword, and instantly the "whole building was a blaze."

World Crackers

Teasie Takes Tonsure

LONDON (CP)—A fashionable hairdresser, who owns 16 shops in London left Saturday for Morocco where he intends to go into a monastery.

Peter Raymond, 53, known to the 20,000 women who visit his hairdressing shops every week as Mr. Teasie Weasie declared: "I think the world has gone crackers."

At London airport, where he sipped a double scotch, Raymond said he has a general mistrust of the world.

"One can no longer speak the Queen's English," he commented. "What is wrong seems to be right; teen-agers have become wreckers."

Raymond said he would consult a "wise man" who lives in the Atlas Mountains of Morocco and would not return to Britain until, as he put it, "my mind clears."

Seven Mangled In Air Crash

CIUDAD VICTORIA, Mexico (AP) — Former New Orleans mayor and U.S. diplomat deLesseps S. Morrison, his young son and five other persons were killed when their chartered two-engined plane crashed in dense fog Friday.

The bodies were picked up in a mountain cornfield Saturday by a rescue squad sent to the scene 27 miles from Ciudad Victoria after a Mexican official flying overhead identified the wrecked plane.

A spokesman said the bodies were mangled and unrecognizable.

Also aboard the plane in addition to Morrison, a 52-year-old widower, and his seven-year-old son Randy, was socialite divorcee Mrs. Carolyn Cataldo Vandergrift, and her seven-year-old son Christopher.

Others were pilot Hugh Ward of Brownsville, Tex., Ovide J. Cemac, a Houma, La., businessman, and Riley Pellegrin of Montegut, La., an employee of a towing firm owned by Cemac.

Mrs. Vandergrift, 35, originally from Martinsville, W. Va., was married to Charleston, W. Va., businessman James Vandergrift. Since a divorce five years ago she has maintained homes in Washington, D.C., and Golden Beach, Fla.

Foes of de Gaulle?

Politics Enters Kidnapping

PARIS (AP) — A series of telephone calls Saturday night indicated the kidnappers of Mrs. Marcel Dassault had political motives or that foes of President Charles de Gaulle were trying to exploit the kidnapping for political purposes.

Police threw all their resources into a hunt for the three men—two gunmen and a driver—who carried out the pre-dawn abduction of Mrs. Dassault, 63, the wife of a millionaire French nuclear warplane builder.

Anonymous callers contacted two Paris evening papers and the French Press Agency, in each case purporting to speak for the kidnappers.

$2,000,000 RANSOM

In the first case the caller told Le Monde the kidnappers wanted a ransom of $2,000,000.

Then France-Soir was notified that Mrs. Dassault would be freed in 70 hours if ex-Gen. Raoul Salan were released. Salan is serving a life term for leading the anti-Gaullist terrorist Secret Army Organization in Algeria.

A similar call to the French Press Agency said the secret army had levied a $2,000,000 penalty against Dassault for "high treason."

The caller said the sum would be put into the secret army's war chest to finance anti-government activities or to compensate the government's "victims."

But there was no way of tell-

Rubbish Research

VANCOUVER (CP) — The city has decided to pay 10 university students each $13.37 a day to accompany garbage trucks on their rounds. The students will count the number of garbage cans and describe the amount and kind of refuse they contain as part of a survey being made by the B.C. Research Council.

Situation Bad

Laotian Neutralists Battered by Reds

VIENTIANE, Laos (AP) — A Communist-led army maintained pressure on battered neutralist troops in the north-central highlands of Laos Saturday and the neutralists' commander Gen. Kong Le said their situation "is very bad."

FLYING TRIP

Kong Le made a flying trip to their administrative capital from his temporary command post at Ban Na, about 100 miles northeast of Vientiane, for emergency conferences with Premier Prince Souvanna Phouma and two rightist generals.

A company of 152 military policemen arrived in Saigon by air from Fort Chaffee, Ark., to provide additional security for Americans in the face of increasing Communist terrorism in that capital of South Viet Nam.

Russia Asks Laos Parley

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet government has formally proposed the convening of a full 14-nation conference on Laos in Geneva some time in June, Tass reports.

Meanwhile the newspaper Izvestia accused the United States of "gross violations" of the 1962 agreement guaranteeing Laos its independence and neutrality.

Cyprus

Longer Duty Tour Faces UN Force

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — Secretary-General U Thant was reported Saturday to be planning to ask the Security Council to double the life of the UN peacekeeping force in Cyprus.

The council set up the force — including more than 1,000 Canadian troops — for a three-month period that ends June 27.

Diplomatic sources said Thant intends to recommend by June 8 that the council keep it going for still another three months so as to allow more time for carrying out UN objectives for Cyprus.

They said he so informed countries in the operation Friday, and asked if they would continue to participate.

Thant had a private meeting with delegates from the nine countries—Canada, Britain, Denmark, Finland, Ireland, Sweden, Australia, Austria and New Zealand.

He was said to have told them he had an optimistic report on Cyprus from his special representative there, Galo Plaza Lasso, who passed through New York this week on a short trip home to Ecuador.

Thant said Plaza told him some fortifications had already been dismantled in Cyprus and all the roads were clear, except one through Kyrenia Pass.

Port Alberni Strike

Meeting Called By Peterson

PORT ALBERNI — Opposing factions in the office workers' strike, which has idled more than 2,700 men in the Alberni Valley, will meet Labor Minister Peterson in Victoria Monday morning.

The meeting was called Saturday by Mr. Peterson on the request of William Lowe, international vice-president of the striking Office Employees' International Union, following a letter from MacMillan, Bloedel and Powell River Ltd., to all of its Alberni Valley employees.

Two other strike developments occurred yesterday:

- The union was reported ready to set up picket lines in front of Mac-Powell operations in Nanaimo and Powell River.
- The CPR said it had, in effect, suspended five men for refusing a job at the struck Mac-Powell pulp plant in Alberni last Thursday.

'MISLEADING STATEMENTS'

Mr. Lowe told the Colonist the Mac-Powell letter to employees, signed by board chairman J. V. Clyne, "made many misleading statements in our opinion.

"It presented a salary scale the union had never seen before," said Mr. Lowe.

He said the scale was "different" from all previous figures, so he phoned Mr. Peterson asking for a meeting at which "the company could again clarify its position, which apparently has again changed."

The union leader said many details were lacking in the letter. One example was that a salary range was given for typists but the letter did not say how long it would take a typist to get from one end of the range to the other.

NO HOLIDAY DEMANDS

Mr. Lowe said the letter claimed the union wants changes in statutory holidays and vacations when it does not.

"We asked for the meeting because we have to know where the employer stands," he said.

He added he was unable to say whether the new salary figures could be a basis for settlement.

The meeting will begin in Mr.

Let the People Decide Best Flag for Canada

Though the Daily Colonist takes the editorial stand that the Canadian Red Ensign should be retained as Canada's flag, it recognizes the right of every Canadian of voting age to express his personal and free views on the matter.

The Colonist firmly believes that the choice of a national symbol is something that cannot and must not be left in the hands of politicians to decide under partisan duress.

The only way to remove this issue from the realm of politics is for a national plebiscite to be held, in which every Canadian citizen can make his or her own desires known to the government.

Colonist readers who support this view are urged to complete the coupon form below. Simply clip it, sign it and enclose it in an envelope addressed to The Rt. Hon. Lester B. Pearson, House of Commons, Ottawa. No stamp is necessary.

Dear Prime Minister:

I am in favor of a national plebiscite to decide upon the selection of a Canadian national flag.

Official Claims:

Pilot's Letters Home Altered by Magazine

WASHINGTON (AP)—A high U.S. defence department official contends that Life magazine, in reprinting letters written by a pilot later killed in South Viet Nam, edited and changed them in such a manner as to completely alter the sense of what he originally wrote.

Assistant Defence Secretary Arthur Sylvester made public a letter he wrote to the editor of Life magazine in which he said he was "appalled" at the manner in which the magazine handled the letters of air force Capt. Edwin G. (Jerry) Shank Jr. of Winamac, Ind.

OBSOLETE PLANES

The letters, which Shank wrote to his wife before he was killed in combat late last March, were published in Life magazine and elsewhere. They were the basis of contentions the United States is using obsolete planes in the Vietnamese conflict.

Sylvester, chief Pentagon spokesman, said the Shank letters had been edited but were printed as though they were complete.

"If it had been desired to discredit the T-28 airplane, then certainly the editing as it appeared in Life would have accomplished that objective," Sylvester wrote.

A spokesman for Life said he would prefer not to comment until the Sylvester letter has been received.

In Winamac, the pilot's widow denied Sylvester's charges.

Mrs. Shank said only one word of the letters written before the pilot was killed was printed incorrectly by the magazine and that was because editors could not read her husband's writing.

WORD FOR WORD

"Other than that, those letters have been word for word," she said. "If this is all they (Pentagon officials) can find to pick apart, I don't think they have much to stand on."

RAF Types Re-Unite

First reunion of the men of the wartime No. 32 Operational Training Unit RAF which operated from Patricia Bay Airport was such a big success last night, organizers plan to stage a reunion every year.

About 65 of the 2,000 original men of the unit and their wives, who returned to British Columbia after the Second World War attended the event at the Net Loft.

SMILE SHOW

The British Commonwealth Training station was set up in 1941 and operated until 1944 when the RCAF took over.

Chairman of the reunion organizing committee was David Huggins, 1657 Richardson.

ONLY MAN

The only man who served on the unit during the war and is still serving in B.C. is Flt. Lt. Dennis Bate of RCAF Station Comox.

A. E. Richman, Saanich parks superintendent was the first of the original personnel to return to Canada immediately after the war.

Flag Debate Lunacy

With Canada at Crossroads We Bicker Over Bunting

By PIERRE BERTON

TORONTO (TNS)—Surely nothing could be more symptomatic of the general lunacy into which this country is sliding than the heated debate now flaming across the land on the subject of a Canadian flag.

In this 97th year of its existence, the nation stands quite literally at the crossroads. Never before has it been plagued with problems so importunate or perils so minacious; never before has it been faced with opportunities so challenging. These are going to require all our intellects, all our energies and all our precious waking hours for several years to come.

Crying Need

Yet what occupies us above all else and to the threatened exclusion of all else? The imminent Balkanization of the country? The inexorable engulfing by the American economic ocean? The crying need for a modern constitution? The genuinely terrifying dilemma of the permanently poor? The God-given opportunity to build the nucleus of a world police force?

None of these. We are arguing, if you please, about a nineteenth century symbol—arguing bitterly, as if the whole future of this tortured and fragmented land rested in some magical fashion on a piece of colored bunting flying from a mast.

Seek Solace

A drowning nation, we clutch at this straw as if it were the solution to all our problems. We seek the solace of The Flag as small, thumb-sucking children crave the comfort of a blanket—and the parallel, I suggest, is an exact one.

The Canadian newspapers in unison have reported that Mr. Pearson intends to "stand or fall" on the matter of a flag design. It is reported, so help me, that this pressing question may be the great issue on which an early election will be fought.

Thrown Out

If this is true Mr. Pearson ought to be thrown out of office on his ear. We are already in danger of becoming the laughing stock of our children and our children's children. This latest idiocy, if it is not repudiated, will make the history of this decade read like a chapter out of Mr. Magoo.

There are several issues on which a Prime Minister could with honor elect to stand or fall. The little matter of whether we should sell the Columbia River to the Americans for a quick buck is one of them.

New Partners

The question of a new federal partnership with Quebec is another. The [illegible] difficult but necessary concern about a national medical scheme is a third. There are, in addition, by my count some 283 other anxieties now troubling our Canadian society on which a fighting Prime Minister, if he ever chose to take any kind of a stand, could take a stand. The matter of a flag design is not one of them.

The trouble with the flag question is that it casts a kind of supernatural aura over the real sickness of our time. People insist on confusing the symbol with the reality. "This is not the flag we fought for," a Canadian Legion stalwart is quoted as saying of the new design (and on the front page, too). But I was not under the impression that we fought for any kind of flag.

I have nothing against flags personally, but I must admit to a sneaking feeling of pride on occasion at being able to boost to foreigners that I lived in a land that had none. It made me feel a part of the future even though I knew in my heart of hearts that the absence of a flag did not really connote any lack of nineteenth century nationalism on my country's part—only a lack of that twentieth century unity which a flag symbolizes.

If we must have a flag to run up the mast, I would opt for the United Nations flag, which might suggest to the world that we Canadians place a universal nationalism ahead of the old-fashioned kind.

Peterson Calls Talks

Peterson's office at 9 a.m. Before it begins, delegates from the four big unions which have refused to cross the picket lines will present a brief on the dispute to the minister.

BRIEF APPROVED

The decision to write and present the brief was taken yesterday at an emergency meeting of the IWA and electricians, papermakers and pulp and sulphite unions. Details of the brief were not disclosed.

Mr. Lowe declined comment on the possibility the strike might spread to Nanaimo and Powell River.

SPREAD POSSIBLE

William Gregg of the International Longshoremen and Warehousemen's Union, a Port Alberni executive member of the Nanaimo-Alberni labor council, warned earlier the spread is possible if the office strike is not settled soon.

He said the rank and file of the striking union is "militant" and wants the Mac-Powell mills in the two centres struck.

PICKETS SLATED

A picket line would be set up at the Nanaimo's plant gates while strikers in boats would picket at Powell River, where the firm owns most of the land and could order land pickets away.

Such a picket line would require the support of the Masters and Mates Guild, which has refused to bring in ships behind the picket lines here.

The pulp and sulphite union already has stated it would honor a land picket line in Nanaimo.

Mr. Gregg was the first to disclose the Thursday incident involving the CPR employees.

He said the members of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen refused to take out empty boxcars which were inside a picket line but a CPR spokesman in Vancouver said the men were suspended for refusing duty and "there was no picket line at the time."

One of the five men, who refused to give his name, told the Colonist there was a line . . . "I know a picket line when I see one."

The CPR official said the length of the suspension had not been determined and added CPR supervisory personnel moved trains from the struck plant yesterday.

'THEY'RE SO MAD'

Mr. Gregg added: "There is a rumor that the CBRT may pull out the whole Island, they're so mad."

Mac-Powell issued only one statement during the day, that it is considering its legal position with regard to the Port Alberni picketing.

NO WORD TO FAMILY

The family said it had no word.

Marcel Dassault, 72, slightly injured when the gunmen pistol-whipped him and their chauffeur, Louis Dubois, 48, was reported in a state of shock. Dassault's firm is the maker of the Mirage IV, France's supersonic atomic bomber.

EDGE OF WOODS

The kidnapping occurred outside the elegant apartment house where the Dassault's live on the edge of the famed Boulogne Woods.

The Dassaults were returning from a dinner party at the home of friends. As their big American-made sedan stopped and they alighted, two hooded men approached. When the couple protested the two men quickly slugged Dassault and the chauffeur and grabbed Mrs. Dassault.

Don't Play Blind Man's Buff With Doubtful Patent Medicine

By JOSEPH MOLNER, MD

Dear Dr. Molner: What causes eczema and what can be done about it? My son has it on his hands.—MRS. R.R.

Eczema is a scaly eruption of the skin—but that does not mean it is always the same, or results from the same causes.

In babies, it is frequently the result of a food allergy.

In adults, and you didn't mention your son's age—eczema can mean any number of things. If on the hands, I strongly suspect a contact dermatitis, or skin ailment resulting from something he handles or touches. This, in fact, is in the nature of an allergy.

Don't try to guess what these skin troubles mean. Go to a dermatologist.

Sometimes people try half a dozen kinds of salves and medications before they give up and go to a specialist. By that time they often have so much irritation and secondary infection that the doctor has a difficult time working back to find out the original trouble.

In the interests of saving money as well as being cured quicker, consult a dermatologist before you've played blind man's bluff with patent medicines.

Dear Dr. Molner: Is it harmful to take a teaspoonful of epsom salts in a glass of water every night? I have been doing this for years, as a preventive to high blood pressure. I am 75.—B.H.

Epsom salts is irritating. If your system tolerated the irritation, you've been fortunate. It will not have any effect on high blood pressure. I would try going without the salts for a month—and see whether you don't feel as well, or perhaps better.

Dear Dr. Molner: My problem is I eat starch, sometimes two pounds or more a week. When I try to get off the habit for two or three days I start craving it again. Please tell me in what ways it harms a person. I am worried sick.—MRS. M. B.

I'm beginning to wonder how many starch-eaters there are. It would be interesting to know how the habit starts.

However, there isn't any resulting harm except that starch piles up a lot of calories, and could interfere with the appetite when it comes to getting other diet necessities—protein for one. And the fruits and vegetables which provide vitamins and minerals, for another.

There's no harm in it, except to the degree that it would help make you fat, or interfere with eating other more desirable food.

If you aren't putting on weight, and if you eat milk, meat, cereal, green and yellow vegetables, and fruit, then don't worry about the starch. But if you are getting fat—the starch is helping do it. This is a habit, like smoking or drinking, which you could stop if you set your mind to it.

Gunmen Have Souvenir Of Their Own Crime

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Two gunmen cancelled their own screen tests by stealing the cameras and film.

After taking $30,845 in a holdup at the American Fletcher National Bank branch in suburban Cumberland, they carried off two movie cameras that had been recording the scene.

Kennedy's Death Story

Europe Still Skeptical

LONDON (UPI) — Widespread skepticism persists in Europe—on both sides of the Iron Curtain — whether the "pure facts" have been or will ever be revealed on the assassination of President John F. Kennedy.

Scarcely a day passes, six months after the event, that some new version or theory is advanced in a European newspaper, magazine, lecture or broadcast.

Except for the activities of two Americans who actively promote the now-it-can't-be-told hypotheses on Kennedy's death, the confusion and perplexity do not seem to be centrally organized.

The two Americans, on a seeming perpetual lecture and writing tour of Europe, are New York lawyer Mark Lane and ex-Communist Thomas Buchanan, now working for a consultative engineering firm in Paris. They maintain that the Kennedy assassination was part of a "plot" and that Lee Harvey Oswald and Jack Ruby were but a part of the story.

For different reasons, the suspicion that all has not been told extends from Russia through Communist-ruled Eastern Europe and across the Iron Curtain into Western Europe with its free press.

Kennedy's assassination is kept alive in Moscow by publication of comment from abroad suggesting the death was the result of an organized plot.

RUSSIA REPRINTS

The Soviet press has reprinted what Lane and Buchanan have said and written to create an apparent conviction among Soviet readers that American authorities are concealing essential facts.

A typical example in Moscow was publication on April 26 in the popular weekly Nedelya of Buchanan's article.

"It follows from Buchanan's report," it said, "that President Kennedy was the victim not of a single maniac but of a conspiracy. Buchanan's article raised the main question: Who could benefit from Kennedy's death? His answer is clear.

POWERFUL GROUPS

"The powerful groups of Texas oil magnates who invested hundreds of thousands of dollars in war industries, who are interested in armament orders and in retaining tax privileges . . . The author comes to the conclusion that monopolistic circles sweep out of their way all those who can hinder the realization of their economic and political goals."

Even the ultra-conservative Swiss press apparently remains unconvinced on the official version of Kennedy's assassination.

The Zurich weekly Zuercher Woche, which already has printed Buchanan's report, will soon start a new series Why Could This Happen? by American-born writer Hans Habe, now living in Switzerland.

Habe toured the United States before and after Kennedy's killing. He raises questions still teasing many European readers of the official account.

The Belgian magazine ABC this week expressed the hope that "the mystery surrounding the assassination of President Kennedy will one day be solved. This is of great importance not only for America but also for the rest of the world."

Dallas Man Identifies Self As Famed 'Man-in-Doorway'

DALLAS, Texas (UPI)—Billy Lovelady, an employee of the Texas Schoolbook Depository, identified himself Saturday as the "man-in-the-doorway" in a photo taken moments after President John F. Kennedy was shot.

"I recall standing in the doorway and I have about 20 witnesses who were there near me," he said. "They will verify it was me."

Many newspapers in Europe published in weekend editions an American photograph taken a split second after Kennedy was shot last Nov. 22. The picture purported to show a man looking like Lee Harvey Oswald, the accused presidental assassin, standing in the doorway of the Depository.

Newspaper descriptions said the man "bears an extraordinary resemblance" to Oswald.

The newspapers said "if the man in the doorway is Oswald, who, then, fired the bullets which killed the president?"

TESTIFIED

Lovelady, a stock clerk in the Depository, said he gave testimony about the photo to agents of the Warren commission investigating the assassination. He said he also co-operated with the FBI.

He said both the FBI and the Warren commission investigators were satisfied it was he and not Oswald in the doorway.

Asked whether there was any resemblance to Oswald he replied, "I'm fatter in the face. It was me in the doorway," he said. "If anyone doesn't believe it, they will just have to take my word."

Immigration Act

Man Held 96 Days Without Charge

TORONTO (CP)—Eric Claude Hooper, 27, of Buffalo, N.Y., spent 96 days in jail here before he was taken into court, a legal aid lawyer said Friday.

Lawyer Allan Mintz said a charge was not laid against Hooper until he heard about his presence in Don Jail and issued a writ of habeas corpus. He said Hooper should have appeared before a magistrate 24 hours after his arrest.

SPECIAL INQUIRY

Hooper is charged under the Immigration Act with refusing to answer questions April 17, his 51st day of detention, when a special inquiry was conducted by immigration department officials inside Don Jail.

Mr. Mintz said Cooper had refused to answer the questions until he had consulted a lawyer.

Under the law he had every right to do that, Mr. Mintz said.

Hooper came here Feb. 15 to see his son who lives in Toronto with Hooper's estranged wife. The next day he was arrested and has been in Don Jail since.

He appeared before Magistrate Robert Dnieper Friday and pleaded not guilty to the charge. He was remanded to Monday.

'Mods,' 'Rockers' Start New Rash of Violence

LONDON (UPI) — British teen-agers began their second weekend of violence Saturday with an attack on a group of popular music singers and a mob fight near Queen Elizabeth's castle at Windsor.

Police from Manchester in the north to Windsor in the south were called out in full force to cope with the latest outbreak of teen-age "rumbles."

The street battles were a continuation of the fight that brought havoc to the seaside resorts of Margate and Brighton last weekend.

BEAT UP QUARTET

In Bristol, a dozen teen-agers in two cars chased a Liverpool music quartet, the Merseyside Four, through the city's street.

After a five-mile pursuit, the teen-agers swerved in front of the entertainers' car, forced it to stop, ripped off its door and beat up the performers.

The group's bass player, Robert Montgomery, was kicked. Bristol police, backed by dogs, arrested two youths in breaking up a mob of several hundred youths. One youth said, "We've got another meeting fixed . . . on Monday night."

In Windsor, police used dogs to disperse a mob of 500 teen-agers who gathered for a fight not far from the castle, where Queen Elizabeth is in residence.

ROAR INTO TOWN

Leather-jacketed "Rockers" roared into town from London on motorcycles in hopes of finding some action against about 1,000 Beatle-suited "Mods" who were holding a dance at a local tavern.

Police near Blackpool broke up a fight between about 200 Rockers and Mods on the beach resort's "Golden Mile." One mod was taken to a police station with a badly bleeding hand and three girls were arrested.

Fund Dropped

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Six months after the slaying of Lee Harvey Oswald, a Junior Chamber of Commerce has dropped a campaign for funds to educate Oswald's children because of adverse and sometimes abusive public reaction.

The past president of the St. Matthews Jaycees, Hite Yenawine, said he had received numerous, highly critical telephone calls and letters following a newspaper story on the undertaking.

Peace Rally On Malaysia Scheduled

KUALA LUMPUR (Reuters)—A three-power peace summit meeting among Indonesia, Malaysia and the Philippines—expected at Tokyo in June—was announced yesterday by Salvador Lopez, Philippines mediator in the Malaysian dispute.

He said details, including the date, were being worked out.

Friday Malaysian Prime Minister Tunku Abdul Rahman told the Malaysian Parliament Lopez had conveyed Malaysia's terms for a summit meeting to Indonesian President Sukarno who accepted most of them.

No mention was made by Lopez or Rahman about provisions for the withdrawal of Indonesian forces from Malaysian territory — the main barrier to peace negotiations.

Sudeten Bid Squelched

RICHARD BOWER, Editor-in-Chief

Words to Heed

SIR WILLIAM BLACK, the man who incurred American wrath by selling buses to Cuba, has questioned Washington's way of doing international business.

In a recent interview with a British journalist, the 71-year-old chairman of Leyland Motors summed up the Cuban deal this way:

"This has become an emotional situation and there is only one way to handle it — to be unemotional and stick to the facts. We have been selling buses to Cuba for 15 years. Last July we arranged to sell them 450 buses, giving them an option for a thousand more.

"The Cuban order is in fact a small one, representing only about four days of our annual output. But we take the view very strictly that a small customer wanting one bus is as important to us as our biggest customers."

Sir William then got down to the broad question of ethics: "We are perhaps the only country in the world still trading according to what we like to call the rules of cricket. No other country does, and I am not reproaching them.

"The Americans moved into Pakistan last year and gave them a loan on condition that they spend it in the States. And our big market for buses in Pakistan disappeared like snow in the sun. Of course, the Americans were right by the new no-holds-barred rules of international trade.

"Some people might think that we should compete in the same way and urge the government to do so. I think we'll fare better in the end sticking to our view of that old-fashioned word — integrity."

There is much to be said for Sir William's view, and his words should be heeded, not only in Britain but in the United States and Canada and by every other country whose national welfare depends on foreign trade and whose economic boundaries are widening with every new day.

The furtherance of good international relations depends to a very great extent upon the existence of good international trading practices.

Restrictions upon one, in fact, automatically restrict the others—and certainly today Western nations at least should realize that they can no longer afford the luxury of cutting each other's throats (economically speaking) in some dingy international bargain basement.

Not Worth Flying

MANY of the thousands of persons who crowded the downtown streets for the Victoria Day celebrations last Monday commented unfavorably on the condition of the city's decorations strung across Douglas Street.

The bunting currently being used for this purpose has seen its best days — many years ago — and the faded, tattered, dirty and nondescript pennants and flags waving apathetically in the breeze, detracted from rather than enhanced the holiday atmosphere.

At a time when the city fathers have given the downtown merchants and other property owners a splendid lead in the colorful repainting of exterior walls, and when the city is pulling itself up by the bootstraps with a series of new building and renovation jobs, it seems a pity that for the sake of a few new strings of flag patterns the effect should be spoiled.

Faded and battle-scarred flags are in order as hallowed possessions of service units, but city bunting has no historic association, and its sole purpose is to add color and gaiety to festive occasions.

These old decorations are trotted out year after year — each time a little more decrepit — and each time people say "What dirty looking things. Why don't they renew them?"

On the occasion of the B.C. centennial a few years ago the City Council spent a lot of money on a collection of life-size balloon figures which would not remain inflated, and this may have discouraged the aldermen from further decorative expenditure.

If, however, the City cannot buy, beg or borrow some more attractive bunting than that at present in use, it would be better to do without it altogether.

But we hope that before the next celebration comes along, the City Council will have seen fit to buy a new collection.

Reversible Boycott

AFRICAN leaders of the British colony of Basutoland, a country to which the United Kingdom has recently given a degree of self-government as a first step toward the granting of full independence, have instituted a wide appeal against the continuation or widening of economic sanctions against the Republic of South Africa.

This is not because the Basutos now approve of South Africa's apartheid policy but because if the boycott now imposed by a number of African states is maintained or extended, Basutoland will face economic disaster in that it is almost wholly dependent on the Boer republic for its trade.

Nor is it the only African country to see that the boycotters will be the ones that will suffer most if this pressure move against South Africa goes on for much longer.

Already the boycott has rebounded severely in some East African republics. One independent African country is now receiving $560,000 less in tax revenues from a large diamond mine because it no longer allows the company to import South African mining equipment. The company now has to seek its needs elsewhere at far greater cost.

Another East African country once exported soda-ash to South Africa. But since independence the soda-ash plant has shut down leaving 10,000 workers and their families without income.

South African anthracite used to go to an East African cement factory. Now the industry has to import it from Asia. The resultant increase in production costs brought about by the higher price of Asian coal has now caused the cement plant to lose one of its major customers — who now buys South African cement.

These are just a few examples of how the boycott has boomeranged against those who have instituted it.

Little wonder that Basutoland is worried.

Thinking Aloud

"... of shoes, and ships, and sealing wax ..."

By TOM TAYLOR

THAT champion of the squared ring, Cassius Clay, says it's time for all people of African descent to return home.

And then they could have their own culture, their own flag, and their own religion. I should hope the flag at least wouldn't give them bother.

Flags, as we are noting these days, can be ticklish things, and presumably African tribes have their preferences too.

By home, Mr. Clay means Africa, naturally, and he sets the fashion by seeking a plot in Ghana on which to build a house.

But only to live there three months of the year, which rather weakens his advice to his fellows. If one goes home one stays all the time, excepting vacations perhaps. And he himself, we are told, has become a Moslem, which suggests perhaps he should be settling in Arabia.

It is an interesting idea he has, though, applied in general to the human scene. Let everyone go back to the land of his forbears and all will be well with the world.

The quarrel about the Red Ensign, for instance, would be solved.

There would be no need of a UN either, presumably, since everyone would stay in his own bailliwick thereafter, and with no intruders to disturb the atmosphere the Security Council would be redundant.

The proposition isn't too simple, however. It might be difficult to determine what is one's original homeland. Most races, certainly the white ones and doubtless others too, are an amalgam of various strains and national homes. Pondering my own heritage and the early incursions appending thereto I get more mixed up the more I delve back into history.

And of course, if we all sought to return to the land of Adam we'd be in somewhat of a stew, physically as well as theoretically. I doubt Iraq, if that is the place, could hold us all.

Nor coming a little closer to modern heritage, although still well back, could Palestine include us in the flock? Israel is bursting at the seams as of now.

They say of my own native heath, for instance, that there are five times as many expatriates, including in this all those with even a tincture of the blood, than presently exist in that small geographical area. Sardines couldn't equal the crush if they were all to go "home."

And what about Canada? This return migration assuredly would settle the national flag issue, for there would be no nation left. Only the Indians, who however probably wouldn't object. Likely enough they wish we'd never usurped their domain in the first place.

The idea would come hard also on folk who enjoy a dual descent, not to mention those with half-a-dozen ethnic backgrounds. Where would they go? Who would let them in if each simon-pure racial strain was to become self-sustained with no outsiders allowed?

Still, it's an interesting thought Mr. Clay has promulgated. Peace might actually come upon the globe if his theme was enlarged as it has been above.

Each, to his own and no one poking where he didn't belong.

But then, alas, man never did stay put, right from the beginning.

And I'm afraid he didn't live at peace either, even then.

Well, it was worth a few moments' dreaming.

Scotland Rejects Sabbath Boredom

By CECIL NORTHCOTT, from Edinburgh

THE traditional Scottish Sabbath, which for generations has moulded the Scottish style of living in every part of the world, is about to change its image.

From being a day when men were expected to "rest all the day from their own wordly employments and recreations" it is to become a day "to be used gladly for the glory of God and in service to our fellows." The Church of Scotland, at its current Assembly in Edinburgh will seek to register these changes.

For the past 30 years the Scottish Church has been trying to find a common mind on "Sabbath keeping," and the arguments have become a battle of words and deep convictions between the Highlands and the Lowlands. The crofters of the glens and isles are still rigid Sabbath keepers casting a jaundiced eye on the Scots of the plains and the cities who appear to be disobedient to the Fourth Commandment.

It was Highland pressure a year ago that made the General Assembly of the Church turn in its tracks and command a fresh consultation before committing itself to a new look at the Sabbath. It is Highland custom that will not change even now though the new look commands the general support of Scottish churchmen.

The report presented to the Church rebuts the customary assertion that the Sabbath in Scotland is all "gloom, hypocrisy and repressiveness" and claims that in the absence of feast days in the Scottish ecclesiastical calendar "the soul of Scotland would have been starved but for the space of leisure for religious observances." It quotes Dr. Arnold Toynbee who sees in the Sabbath a day when for one 24-hours a man shall "remember his Creator and live the life of an integral human soul."

And it makes the bold claim that the Scot round the world owes his "intellectual, moral and religious standing" to what the Sabbath has done for him.

But the Fourth Commandment is not enough today for positive preaching and positive practice about the proper use of Sunday. It is not enough for the modern Scot to tell him, "Thou shalt not." He wants to know the reason why, and also to gain some guidance from his religious mentors on the right use of his Sunday.

The old legalism is rejected but Sunday is still to be a day of worship, and the Church is urged to be more flexible in its times of worship. There is nothing particularly sacred about eleven in the morning and seven in the evening. In many city parishes in Scotland there is already only one period of worship on summer Sundays so that the young Scot may make for the lochs and the sea-coast in the afternoon.

Sunday, which is no longer just a break in hard monotonous manual labor, is seen as a day for "serious reading" and "family life." It is a day to overcome "modern man's chronic temptation to superficiality" by a weighty book or two, and by the development of the "meditative mind." Fathers should make Sunday a family day, and not regard it solely as a day when they get double pay for their work.

While the report rejects "commercialized entertainment" on Sundays it comes out strongly in favor of "physical recreation" and warns churchmen that the boredom of the Sabbath is one of the breeding grounds for mischief and delinquency amongst Scotland's youth.

Scottish parents are urged not to hedge Sundays about with restrictions for their children, and to deal with their teen-agers with a generous tolerance and not to impose their own preferences. And teenagers are reminded that in modern times keeping the Sabbath holy means that "noise which is neither painful nor wearisome to them may very well distress others."

As an alternative to the licence and libertarianism of the "Continental Sunday," the new Scottish Sunday will, the report believes, commend itself to the Christian conscience of Scotland. It rejects the legalisms of the old order but believes that the discipline of the new is in keeping with the style of modern Scotland.

From Colonist Files

THOUSANDS of spectators witnessed "a revival of the old Gorge days . . . at the Navy, Army and Indian Regatta under the direction of Ald. H. W. Davies, chairman of the city council celebrations committee," 25 years ago.

Events included 11-man war canoe races, five-oar whalers, canoe-tilting, single-paddle canoes, four-oar lapstreaks, logrolling, greasy pole, double sculls, single lapstreaks, kayaks and a costume swimming race across the Gorge.

In Vancouver, "the palatial new $12,000,000 Hotel Vancouver, described as the finest in the British Empire, was opened . . . to replace the old brown stone structure that has served the public for more than half a century.

"We are assured that there is no better hotel in this continent and British Columbia is justly proud of it," said Lieutenant-Governor Eric W. Hamber.

HUNDREDS of Indians representing practically every band and reserve on Vancouver Island and adjacent islands had arrived in Victoria to take part in the Empire Day celebrations, 50 years ago.

"They have been arriving in parties, mostly by canoe or launch, but a number by train. They are practically all of them camped on the former Indian reserve in the section on the waterfront between the E. & N. bridge and Point Ellice bridge.

"Empire Day has always been an occasion of great moment to the Indians of the Island, and many of them have been annually making a pilgrimage to Victoria for many years.

"The behavior of the Indians on their yearly visits to Victoria has always been a subject of most favorable comment from Victorians . . ."

Victoria Day events included a horse and motor car parade, baseball, the Gorge Regatta, horse and motorcycle races, lacrosse, a water carnival and fireworks at the Gorge and a band concert and fireworks at Beacon Hill.

Her Majesty's birthday was "right royally celebrated by citizens and visitors in the Queen City of the Pacific Province," and the festivities were pronounced a "grand and brilliant success in every respect," 75 years ago.

"As was expected, visitors were attracted from near and far. San Francisco contributed its contingent of sightseers, and every city of the Sound was well represented. From the east, as far as Winnipeg, came other pleasure seekers, and all agree that the tournament of sport was well worth coming to see.

"The celebration as a financial investment for the city was a capital business move, while it was the means of giving thousands pleasure, and of advertising the attractions of Victoria in every quarter of America . . ."

The Queen's Birthday "was perhaps more thoroughly and completely regarded as a general holiday than any festive occasion which has ever been observed by the population of this colony," 100 years ago.

"Encouraged by the countenance and example of our popular governor, the people abandoned themselves wholly and heartily to enjoyment, evidently determined, for one day at least, to give the go-by to the cares and toils of everyday life."

The National Flag of Canada

Our Readers Express Their Varied Views

We all know the views of the French Canadians backed up with a few bombs and also demanding that our Queen be kept away.

Mr. Pearson now informs us that the "New Canadians" would prefer another flag. Have they said so? If they have is there anything else they would like changed in our country?

Apparently our flag is to be discarded to suit Mr. Pearson's politics, and without even a plebiscite to determine the wishes of those Canadians who fought in two world wars under the Red Ensign. Without the sacrifices and loyalty of those men the swastika might be flying over this land!

If the Red Ensign is to be thrown out it would be nice if the present government could be thrown out as easily.

"Keep Our Flag Flying"

I would like to draw attention to the inherent symbolic features of the two flags, the Union Jack and the proposed maple leaves.

The Union Jack possesses an outstanding Christian symbolization that no other flag could possibly have.

It consists of three (numerical symbol of completeness) crosses (symbols of sacrifice) and stands for impartial law and order before God, and wherever it has flown those ideals have been striven for, even though due to human weakness (or imperfection) they may not always have prevailed.

Regarding the maple leaves: They, by comparison, are sterile —almost insipid, and though possibly adequate as a provincial emblem, simply cannot adequately qualify as a national one.

Symbolically — the only thing certain about leaves is that they will fall, and the redder the sooner!

This is but another shortsighted attempt by an ambitious professional politician to appease Quebec, and history demonstrates that appeasement inevitably fails.

Mr. Pearson's obvious failure to place the choice before the people of Canada by plebiscite constitutes the betrayal of all Canada, and reveals how much he really cares about the Canadian people at large.

Incidentally, viewed within the context of the Alberni affair, it clearly demonstrates that Quebec can trust Mr. Pearson but B.C. cannot!

So the Red Ensign is OUT, according to our prime minister! O.K. Mike, if that's the way you want it. But maybe YOU'LL be out, too. What's the matter with the old flag?

Australia and New Zealand still have the Jack in the corner, with many thousands of foreign immigrants there, and they are not making any fuss over it. Our present flag is known and respected in every part of the world and many thousands of us helped to keep it up in the last two wars. But those three maple leaves on a white background, with two blue bands, would be a sorry substitute for the vibrant beauty and rich traditions embodied in the Red Ensign. WHY NOT LEAVE IT ALONE!

I've voted Liberal ever since the first time, some 67 years ago, and if this blasphemous thing goes through I'll have to throw my blue polka dot tie in the garbage can—and my next ballot in the sewer. No, no, Mike—think!

BERT A. HOWELL,
2064 Marrion Street.

The history of the Union Jack represents a wealth of antiquity and deeds unequalled by any other national emblem on earth. It is of Divine origin, no less, declaring as it does the "company of nations" foretold by God's Covenant with Abraham, now known as the British Commonwealth of Nations, enacted by Parliament, Dec. 11, 1931, of which Canada is a member.

Canada is, nominally, a Christian nation, and the Union Jack is the Christian's banner, irrespective of denomination or party, because it enshrines the cross of Christ and other sacred symbols, as well as the history of the Commonwealth.

All this, and more, expressed in the Red Ensign, is Canada's proud heritage. Here is displayed the Coat of Arms (specially ordered for Canada by King George V) the Fleur-de-lis, thus honoring the early French pioneers. Altogether it is our national autograph, officially adopted by order-in-council in 1945—not to be dragged in the mire of a political scrimmage or made the target for subversive sources that are doing their utmost to wreck the Commonwealth.

The Ensign proclaims to the world and to the benefit of its citizens, all the authority and graces of its government. With a background so richly endowed, what folly to exchange it for a three maple-treed emblem or any modern device, however attractively adorned.

C. M. CADWALLADER,
2875 Delatre Street.

One cannot help but despair for the future of mankind when forced to listen to such childish displays of emotionalism as exhibited by various individuals and organizations in connection with selection of a Canadian flag. If those who have such strong feelings about what kind of flag is chosen would just direct a portion of their energy into attempting to solve the social and world problems which beset us, we might see some progress in areas which carry the key to our very survival. It is particularly disappointing to see an organization like the Canadian Legion which surely should have some awareness of the importance of current issues, spending its time worrying about what sort of flag Canada should have. What earthly difference does it make? The possibility that a government could stand or fall on such a petty issue is inconceivable.

PATRICIA MURRAY,
3950 Tudor Avenue.

The exaggerated chauvinism of Quebec in the claim of her superior right to bring the other provinces of Canada under her dictation is to be expected, since for so long her mentors have shown quite clearly that only by dividing can they hope to rule, or conquer the country.

The outrageous demand that Canada—after all these years —should change the flag by which she is recognized the whole world over, is comparable to declaring Canada a 'freshly' conquered country.

Perhaps the idea of changing the flag now—if accomplished—would satisfy the ingrained hatred that has been fermented for so long against Great Britain. The Great Britain, who, in jointly drawing up the British North America Act, treated Quebec—or the powers that control Quebec—with the clearest form of justice which said province now appears to consider 'old' fashioned.

Let Canada keep, and proudly fly her own flag, the Red Ensign. To change it now and fly in exchange a piece of disguised tapestry would make Canada a laughing stock the whole world over, and a sheer mockery of the pledge of—O! Canada, we stand on guard for thee.

ELLEN HART,
Clipperfield, East Sooke.

I have listened to many lectures and read many articles on the subject of the flag. I am a Britisher and proud of it. As far back as the First World War the Union Jack was the national flag many times according to history, one the thin red line, the Battle of Trafalgar, many other of the main battles too numerous to mention. The Union Jack has flown all over the world but it has never gone down to defeat. Many a time when defeat seemed inevitable the Jack was raised, the bugle sounded and the British regiments won the victory. If we study history, who are the people who have made this country what it is?

We only need to go to the Veterans' Hospital and find out where they came from. According to Teleopinion the Union Jack is of England; there seems to be a certain amount of animosity against the British. If it had not been for the British army we would not have had a country.

I feel sorry for the young people of this country. If they studied the history of Canada it may change their views.

Novel Approach Radical Departure from Compulsory System

Campbell Offers 'Do-It-Yourself Metro'

By IAN STREET

It looks as though Greater Victoria is being offered the opportunity for a "do-it-your-self" approach to providing area services.

This is a radical departure from the normal procedure which involves forcing metro services upon an area where the problems have been allowed to assume monumental proportions before anything is done.

It is certainly a novel approach to suggest that a body to administer joint services for an area like the capital region should be the creature of the local government.

But the idea is fresh and imaginative. With a reasonable degree of co-operation on all sides the proposal should work.

There is no doubt that the climate of public opinion in Greater Victoria has mellowed, though even today mention of amalgamation sparks an emotional response in some sections of the community. Metro, too, remains a dirty word.

Dan Campbell, recently appointed minister of municipal affairs, is all for trying the new approach.

It boils down to something like this:

There are certain problems common in the entire region.

CITY HALL COMMENT

Disposal of sewerage is one. Pollution of our beaches, result of the lack of adequate facilities affects everyone.

If all the municipalities agree that here is a problem common to all (and I can't see how they could argue otherwise) then it follows that they should work together to provide the solution.

Therefore form a sewage disposal district along the lines of the existing Greater Victoria water district, which is controlled by elected representatives of the municipalities.

This could be done, but it would mean just one more board to add to our growing total.

There is an obvious answer, as Mr. Campbell pointed out a couple of days ago; bring several joint services under a single board and have the councils appoint their own elected representatives.

This would provide a semi-autonomous body, like the water board, but still one that is fully responsible to the electorate.

Such a body could meet an immediate and urgent need for new services and at the same time reduce the number of boards already in existence.

If there has to be a sewerage board for Greater Victoria as it certainly seems there has to be, why not make it a body that would also handle water distribution?

And once that step is contemplated it could be extended to cover other needs such as area parks and regional planning, both sore spots under the present system.

There is a simple rule for deciding which service should be included: everyone should agree that it is a problem which affects them.

Not so easy to solve is the problem of how unorganized territories should be represented on the area board.

This is a headache even at the preliminary stage of inviting representatives of all local areas to a proposed one-day workshop to discuss joint services.

There are no elected representatives, other than MLAs, in unorganized territories and the minister will probably have to invite representatives of ratepayers groups.

The main attraction of Mr. Campbell's plan, in the eyes of local councils, no doubt will be the fact that it doesn't require another "metro" level of government.

Local identities would be retained and the councils would continue to function.

Mr. Campbell is likely to find that his greatest difficulty lies in convincing his colleagues in the provincial cabinet that they should adopt the more radical approach.

If he is successful the system developed here in the next few years could serve as a model for the Lower Mainland and other rapidly expanding areas in the province.

Now President in Own Right

Johnson the Great

By HENRY BRANDON
From Washington

What strikes me most after two months' absence from Washington is how light-hearted and confident this usually excessively crisis-conscious capital feels today under President Johnson's leadership: How much its ingrained skepticism has been swept away by an intoxication with the president's earthy Americanism, his human spontaneity, his power display in "getting things done."

Johnson's seemingly inexhaustible kinetic energy now ranks with such awe-inspiring natural wonders as the Grand Canyon. But it all adds up to the important fact that he has now become president in his own right.

He looms so large on the stage that at least for the time being public consciousness of the late President Kennedy has receded far more rapidly than most people had expected, and Johnson's once frequent references to him have also passed into history.

How much political pulling-power the Kennedy name still has will be tested by the attempt of Pierre Salinger, former press secretary to the late president, to run for the Senate in California. For he is trying to make the most of his association with President Kennedy.

Johnson, who is his own sort of one-man public relations firm—but in blue jeans rather than grey flannels—continues to keep an extraordinarily high popularity rating: 75 per cent give him their approval.

Kennedy Image Recedes

This he achieved not simply by being oblivious to presidential dignity nor by being so uninhibited in the use of corn that the commonplace becomes the unique and inimitable, but by proving that he is a man who gets things done.

His performance is a demonstration of what a superb politician with long experience, with indefatigable industry and an intrinsic sense for the use of power can achieve.

Among Americans I think he is not really a popular figure, but an understandable one. They do not particularly care about style but about substance, and so far on that score he has done remarkably well.

His two great aims—and they are of far-reaching historic significance—are:

- To weld the United States which is still a confederacy, into a union. As a man with an unmistakable honeyed southern lilt, who has also strong support in the north, there is no one who has a better chance of accomplishing this. His appeal to reason the other day in Georgia showed both statesmanship and courage.
- To establish a better understanding between the White House and Congress.

At a time when the U.S. is passing through one of its great historic tests—the Negro revolution—it is not surprising, therefore, that a great majority is anxious to see this kind of leader succeed. It is also reassuring that the economic boom looks as if it will hold up for the rest of the year and that the detente between East and West continues.

The crucial turning-point in Johnson's position was his personal success in averting a railway strike. "It wasn't collective bargaining, it was compulsory Johnson," an official remarked later.

Unlike Kennedy, he did not question his advisers about the details of the strike issues, but merely asked what the consequences of a nation-wide strike on the country would be. By dangling carrots and wielding the stick in the best Rooseveltian manner, he finally relieved the country of this nightmare of economic troubles.

This success also gave him that final inch of confidence in himself which he still needed. It led him to drop his grave self-conscious dignity, and to act entirely as himself. His speeches are still more pep talks than declarations of policy.

Except for what are more day-to-day problems, he does not have to think of new policies yet. He shrewdly chose to be the executor of the Kennedy legacy and he is managing this with great aplomb.

The only serious cloud on the horizon is Indo-China, where the situation is barely stabilized. How the Johnson manner of running things would surmount a serious crisis nobody knows. He has been extremely fortunate so far that no grave crisis has queered his pitch. Something everyone in Washington is well aware will not continue for long.

Meanwhile it is not surprising for him to ask, as he did last week, putting his arm around the Republican Senator Dirksen: "Don't you think I am quite a President?"

Even President Kennedy, if he has a chance to watch from somewhere, would, in his wry, detached way, have nodded.

They Fear Party That Never Loses

By DENNIS BLOODWORTH, from Singapore

Japan's conventional political parties face with some trepidation the prospect that the Sokagakkai Buddhist movement will fight for a large slice of the parliamentary cake in forthcoming elections. The Sokagakkai, who hold 16 seats in the Upper House in Tokyo, will field nine extra candidates in partial elections due in July, and 30 candidates in the next general election for the Lower House.

Founded some 30 years ago by a schoolteacher who was victimised and killed on the orders of Janpan's militaristic government, the Sokagakkai sect bases its doctrine on the dogma of Nichiren, the aggressive 13th century non-conformist monk who started the Hokkeshu Buddhist sect and preached that national salvation depended upon the purity of the national religion (which only he could judge).

In 1962 the Sokagakkai, which already held 280 seats in local assemblies, increased its block in the Upper House from six to 15. It claims 12,000,000 followers, enjoys a wide appeal among the masses for its championship of the poor and its promises of happiness through material and spiritual wealth.

All parties fear the movement, and the Communists have lost many supporters to it, notably in big industrial trades unions. The numbers of candidates it puts up for election are like writing on the wall, many believe. For it has one formidable characteristic: where it contests: it wins.

Appeal Bill Given Nod

OTTAWA (UPI)—The Commons Friday gave final reading to a Criminal Code amendment to provide the right to appeal to a higher court a judge's decision refusing a prisoner a writ of habeas corpus.

The government and opposition parties voted unanimously to approve the bill.

A 1959 decision ruled a prisoner had no right of appeal from an order of a judge refusing a discharge under habeas corpus proceedings, nor could the prisoner go before another judge in an attempt to win a discharge.

Good for Guinness

By CLYDE GILMOUR

Actress Kate Reid of Toronto, New York and London was already soundly established as a gifted and versatile performer long before she began winning her current acclaim in Broadway's smash-hit production of Dylan, Sidney Michael's probing comedy-drama about Dylan Thomas, with Sir Alex Guinness in the title role.

Now Columbia has released the Dylan original-cast album (mono DOL-301, stereo DOS-701, three LPs). It offers substantial proof that Miss Reid's talent is indeed formidable, even for the ear alone—and for the vivid imaginary theatre which these six hi-fi side so richly fill with life and movement.

Guinness as the flamboyant, despairing Welsh poet and Miss Reid as his cruel and loving Irish wife, Caitlin, are a superbly matched pair.

On discs as on the stage, of course, it's a Guinness show and the famous Briton is at the top of his form; but the contribution made by his Canadian colleague is also memorably touching and funny and full of creative subtleties.

The whole cast is excellent, and Columbia has a brochure so informative and illuminating that it may well serve in future as a model of its kind. Reproduction: front-row centre.

. . . cruel and loving

Two more of Conductor Herbert von Karajan's recent complete recordings of the nine Beethoven symphonies, done with the Berlin Philharmonic, have been issued as singles by Deutsche Grammaphon. They are the Sixth on LPM-18805 and the Seventh on LPM-18806.

Bruno Walter's marvellous treatment of the pastoral Sixth for Columbia is still my favorite, but Karajan's account of this atmospheric work has its own glories, and his Seventh is one of the finest in the catalogue. Decent sound, and tidy surfaces.

Great pianists are nobly represented on recent LPs covering a wide range of music.

On RCA Victor 2636, mono or stereo, Arthur Rubinstein responds with warmth to the sunny pleasures of Mozart's Concerto No. 17 in G, with two of Schubert's songful Impromptus as a generous solo-piano encore. The ample orchestra in the Mozart is conducted by Alfred Wallenstein.

On Columbia mono 5941, or stereo 6541, Vladimir Horowitz plays a major sonata by Beethoven (the "Pathetique," No. 8 in C minor) and shorter pieces by Chopin and Debussy, most of which he has never before recorded. The net result is a complete and varied recital—and a superb one.

On RCA Victor 2714, mono or stereo, Leonard Pennario concentrates his pyrotechnical skills on eight transcriptions — Virtuoso Favorities is the album's title—of music by Johann Strauss, Mendelssohn, Saint-Saens, Shostakovich, Prokofieff, Ravel, Kriesler and Gounod.

The effect is rather like 50 minutes of encores, but there's no denying the brilliance of the performances and the ring and clarity of RCA's sonics.

Cyclone Kills 60 in Pakistan

Bald Heads Can Be Re-Thatched

By DR. ALFRED BYRNE

LONDON (LST) — Growing fresh hair on bald heads is no longer the domain of quick—or quack—trichologists, nor a figment of the imaginative adman's fancy. It definitely can be done provided the new hair is your own.

How to bridge that gap on top, or rather, have a skilled specialist do it for you, was expounded in scientific terms by Dr. Norman Orentreich, a distinguished dermatologist of New York University, at a symposium on the subject held here recently.

REDISTRIBUTION

The speaker showed that filling the waste spaces on the middle-aged scalp is mainly a matter of distributing the 100,000 hair follicles that constitute a man's crowning glory.

Heredity and the "androgenic" hormones combine to make the hair line recede, but in seeking to find out why some skin disorders involve certain areas of the body and not others, Dr. Orentreich found that hair-bearing skin grafts from the sides and back of the balding head could be transplanted to the desert spaces, where, moreover, they took.

He turned his discovery into a technique, now being learned by doctors from all over the world. This consists of punching out areas of hair-bearing skin on the well supplied portions of the scalp, and fitting them like tiles into identically-sized holes punched into the scalp where hair has stopped growing.

U.S. School Dropouts Ruin Second Chances

BEAUMONT, Calif. (LAT)—A $300,000 state program to teach life-sustaining work-skills to youths who have dropped out of school has itself become a victim of the dropout problem.

During the first six months of the program at Oak Glen forestry youth camp, 10 miles north of here, 101 of the 194 youths enrolled have dropped out. Of the remaining 93, a group of 11 completed the full six-month course last week.

Ustinov Speaks

Mr. Amazing Makes Light Of Versatility

By DON ALPERT

HOLLYWOOD (LAT)—Rare is the all-around performer. Rarer still is the general practitioner who also acts, directs, writes and would sweep the joint if necessary.

Such a person is Peter Ustinov, whose girth is exceeded only by his versatility.

Ustinov was rapping up John Goldfarb, please Come Home at 20th Century-Fox when we talked. He was wearing flowing robes and not as flowing beard for the role of King Fawz, harem-keeper supreme. J. Lee Thompson is directing the Shirley Maclaine-Richard Crenna comedy.

English-born Ustinov also has Topkapi ready for United Artists release and leaves for Europe soon to co-star in Lady L for MGM. He is doing the screenplay for MGM's Lady L in addition to having written 15 plays, six other film scripts, a like number of books plus other statistics too vital to mention.

While others are overwhelmed by this versatility, Ustinov isn't.

"I honestly never think about it," he said. "It all seems to me a different aspect of the same job. It's been done like this throughout history. I don't know what's so extraordinary about it.

"There are quite a few people who could do these things but don't. I think they're afraid of what I call the trade union mentality of today. I notice when you enter the United States, for instances, there is a long line to fill out with your name, an extremely long dotter line for your address and practically nothing for your profession.

"I'm thinking of how idiotic it is that people have restricted themselves to become experts. The facts that the term 'renaissance man' exists and is linked to another period shows how far we've retreated. In the old days when there wasn't television people had to amuse themselves.

"I'm convinced everyone has more talent than they show, but it isn't expected of them."

Still, isn't the writer-actor a rare combination?

"The most intelligent writers in the past were actors," Ustinov said. "Shakespeare, Moliere. People forget in their infinite ignorance.

"Today we live in an air-hostess philosophy. The whole country has been impregnated with it. People don't die anymore, they pass away. In the air-hostess way, they will announce: "Ladies and gentlemen, we are now losing life."

"Why should I restrict myself and feel miserable that I haven't done something? I only wrote a novel because I felt I had a story that should be told and it couldn't be put into any other form.

"I run my life rather like a gun-dog with a twitching nose. I've cultivated my instincts. I think it's possible to do that. You can either accept the life you're given or create a world of your own within the general framework of the other one.

. . . renaissance man

EARS DEAFENED

"Our ears are deafened to the idea of original creation. The first thing to do is break through that barrier. I'm very glad when my children don't agree with me. I think much more can be learned by disobedience than obedience.

"On a political level this is easier to discuss because it is an area in which there is more to discuss than in any other. In point of fact I don't believe half of what I read in the newspaper. An intelligent person lives his life by reading between the lines.

"Things aren't what they seem to be very often. Our business (the British) of selling buses to Cuba is our statement of independence and has nothing to do with selling buses and Cuba. There's no use preaching democracy and then being surprised with disagreement."

SHORT, POINTED

Ustinov's thoughts range as far as his interests. Usually, his answers are short and pointed. He has his say and assumes a self-satisfied smile.

For instance, on schooling:

"Half my education was having to go through a slum every morning at the age of 13 with top hat and striped trousers. I had all sorts of things thrown at me. No one had to explain why one's hat was dirty when he arrived at school."

Also:

"In school in England I was asked who was the world's greatest composer and I was heard to say Mozart and I was told Beethoven and I was heard to say 'I prefer Bach to Beethoven' and I had to write 'Beethoven is the greatest composer' 100 times. This taught me a lesson about adult stupidity—one which ordinarily would have taken me longer to learn."

MUST BE CURBED

On an early report card a teacher wrote: "He shows great originality which must be curbed at all cost."

Is it difficult to play unsympathetic roles?

"How do you know that I'm not a disagreeable person and the trouble comes from the agreeable roles that I am forced to play? Actually, I rather enjoy playing Nazi generals and believing I'm right. It gives one the possibility of tilting at something one dislikes. If you're an actor you've got to be a devil's advocate."

And on the positive side?

"I once had a line to say in a television play—one of the best lines ever written: 'Patriotism serves as the last refuge of the scoundrel.' I often think of that."

ALCOHOLISM ESTIMATE

The Alcoholism and Drug Addiction Research Foundation of Ontario says there are more than 90,000 alcoholics in the province.

Dietrich in action in Moscow

Grandma Marlene Wows the Russians

MOSCOW (UPI) — Marlene Dietrich wowed the audience at the Moscow Variety Theatre Friday night with a sexy rendition of old love songs in her first appearance in Russia.

The audience called the 62-year-old grandmother back for 11 curtain calls and then applauded until she came out again—this time returning from her dressing-room barefoot and wearing only a dressing gown.

"I cannot sing any more, but I am coming back with new songs and I will learn Russian and sing to you in Russian," she said.

"I guess I have a Russian soul. I cannot speak Russian, which is very sad. I can tell you I have always loved you, loved you for your great writers, poets and composers and the Russian soul."

Miss Dietrich went to Leningrad for a week's engagement but planned to return to Moscow May 29 for a series of engagements. She has been welcomed by the Soviet government because of her outspoken anti-Nazi views during the Hitler regime in Germany.

Death of a Play!

HONG KONG (UPI) — An attempt to present Arthur Miller's play Death of a Salesman in Chinese will be made here by Chung King-Fai, Yale-trained drama instructor at the Hong Kong Baptist College.

Honest Ed Invests in Culture

Strange 'Angel'

By DONALD GRANT

TORONTO (UPI) — Edwin Mirvish is a strange man—he is involved in the hectic and uncertain theatre world to make money.

His philosophy can be summed up in a few words: "A theatre is like a business . . . if it doesn't return a profit, it will die."

Like everything else he does, "Honest Ed" Mirvish emerged on the entertainment scene with a bang.

When it was revealed that the aging Royal Alexandra Theatre would be torn down to make way for progress—a parking lot—Mirvish bought it for $215,000, spent $400,000 on lavish decorations and renovations, and . . . poof . . . an elegant showplace that is the pride of Toronto.

SOUND INVESTMENT

"I didn't want to see the Royal Alexandra die . . . and I thought it would be a good, sound investment," said Mirvish, whose bargain department store (Honest Ed's) grossed $14,000,000 last year.

Although the Royal Alex lost money during its first season under new ownership, Mirvish is confident his investment is safe. But to be one the safe side he announced recently that he will take over direct management and be responsible for acquiring the productions that appear there.

Mirvish, who quit school after completing Grade 10 and began his business career as a clerk in his mother's grocery store, admits to little knowledge about the artistic side of theatre, let alone about the management end.

Toronto Theatre Lives Again

"I'm going to find these things for myself. Sure I'll probably make mistakes, but who doesn't?"

His conception of a theatre is that of a status symbol—a place where people go because they believe it to be fashionable. "I want the Royal Alex to be the place to go, the place to be seen at. I want to gives the cunstomers all the glamor and excitement of New York or Paris."

The best way to drag people away from their television sets, Mirvish believes, is to give them big name performers. "Once they are inside the theatre you have to provide good entertainment, but big names get them to the box office."

With both these points in mind he recently completed arrangements to open his fall season with a pre-Broadway production of a Jean Anouilh drama, Traveller Without Luggage. Starred in the play is Ben Gazzara, whose Broadway and Hollywood triumphs placed him in the category of one of the top actors of the day.

Mervish, who has already started counting the profits from the Anouilh play, hopes soon to have an added attraction for theatregoers. He is negotiating with the owners of Sardi's, a famous New York restaurant, to open a branch in Toronto—in the basement of his theatre.

Interested in catering to all tastes, a varied lineup of productions has been signed for the coming season. Included in a subscription series with the O'Keefe Centre is Any Wednesday and Barefoot In The Park, two current Broadway hits. Also scheduled is a Scottish concert, several dance companies, and possibly Britain's D'Oyly Carte Opera Company.

Mirvish's objective is to keep his theatre in operation year-round. "Theatre is habit forming," he said in his most businesslike manner, "It should be open 52 weeks a year."

Guild Offers New Play

The Victoria Theatre Guild will present Lawrence Roman's Under the Yum Yum Tree, June 5 to 13.

Winter Works Program Most Successful Yet

Federal Labor Minister Allan J. MacEachen said yesterday last winter's municipal winter works incentive program was the most successful since the program started in 1958.

Mr. MacEachen said the program had provided jobs for 163,583 men, an increase of 18,558 over last year, which had been the previous highest.

Business Good

Exhibitors All Smiles As B.C. Fair Closes

VANCOUVER (CP) — The third British Columbia Trade Fair, bigger and more successful than ever, ended Saturday with just about everybody happy over the results of the last 10 days.

"Just walk around and look at those exhibitors," Godfrey Holloway, fair manager, said Saturday. "They're all smiling."

VERY WELL

"They've done very well here."

Just how well 140 exhibitors, displaying goods from 40 countries, did during the fair will take a month or more to determine.

And the full effect of the displays that showed everything from Oriental cars to Communist carpets will not be known by the individual exhibitors for months or even years.

EVERYBODY HAPPY

But Mr. Holloway said there were some dissatisfied exhibitors after the 1958 and 1961 fairs but this year he has found none.

Also:

A Japanese motor company sold 30 cars and 16 trucks since the fair opened.

An Indian display handled 200 inquiries by importers interested in establishing distributorships here for various merchandise;

SOLD OUT

A Spanish display was sold out completely;

The Bulgarians, the only Communists displaying at the fair, will meet with the B.C. Liquor Control Board Monday to discuss the possibility of selling Bulgarian liquor in LCB stores here.

George Wilson, an assistant to the French trade commissioner, said he is very pleased with the fair.

"We have had hundreds of inquiries from interested buyers and after the applications are processed many of these buyers will begin importing French goods.

Most of the orders came from 10,000 buyers who came here from the United States and Canada.

Campbell Wins Support

Saanich Information Committee, which has played a prominent role in recent municipal elections in Saanich, warmly applauds Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell's call for greater co-operation at the municipal level.

Gordon Campbell, president of the Saanich group, said yesterday the decision was taken after the minister's views on joint municipal services were discussed at a meeting Friday night.

Is Mining Boom a Myth?

Harry Young's Business Topics

The Magazine of Wall Street, which takes a lot of unexpected angles on financial affairs, this week asks the question, "How much reality . . . how much myth—in new base metal boom in Canada?"

The answer it provides to its own query is that the accent is strongly on the myth.

"Out of 8,000 mining enterprises in Canada in the last decade, only about 150 are active and in production at the present time.

PURE GAMBLING

"Clearly, buying mining stocks in Canada is pure gambling and seems hardly worth while in the face of the heavy tax placed on the American investor in Canadian stocks by the Pearson government."

The magazine adds that most of the frenzied stock trading at Toronto and Montreal was in "penny" mining stocks, few worth over a dollar.

LONG DORMANT

"Most of these are long-dormant properties of dubious value in which there has been little activity in recent years.

"The whole Timmins incident has served to show more clearly than ever the very speculative character of dealing in Canadian mining securities."

It adds the odds are stacked against the small investor, and adds that Toronto Exchange is not nearly as efficiently regulated as the majority of stock markets in the U.S., and leaves the investor with a lack of genuine facts and figures with which to gauge values of mining shares.

TOUCHY POINTS

The Canadian mining stock man will agree that the Magazine of Wall Street has struck on a lot of touchy points, and to some degree is factual.

On the other hand, in lumping the Canadian mining industry under a single banner, it is doing an injustice to a highly important segment of Canadian economic life, and is also ignoring the fact that some of the great financial money-spinners, have been, and are continuing to be Canadian mining stocks.

IRON ORE

International Nickel—kingpin of the nickel world; Consolidated Mining and Smelting—biggest zinc refiners; Noranda—huge copper complex; Falconbridge—to which all the Ventures enterprises have been tied; Hollinger and Labrador—giants of the iron ore business, are only some of the great Canadian mining corporations which have made fortunes for the lucky shareholders who have "stayed with them."

The Magazine of Wall Street has not even a passing remark to make about the huge British Columbia mining revival created by the hungry Japanese market.

Certainly there are lots of mining exploration companies which fail to realize the hopes of their sponsors, but the percentage of prospects that ever make a mine is small in any country.

On the other hand the Magazine of Wall Street is performing a useful service to Canada if it can persuade the Canadian stock exchanges and the underwriting groups to insist that more adequate information is given to investors in new promotions, and so cut down the number of "duds" that are foisted upon a credulous public.

NEED FOR CHANGE

The Investment Dealers' Association of Canada must be prepared to make changes in its policies to fit in with the financial revolution that is taking place in Canada, said Lou Williams of Hagar Investments, chairman of the IDA Pacific Division at the annual meeting in Vancouver this week.

The Victoria broker said the IDA had appointed a sub-committee to study the recent Royal Commission report on banking and finance on the aspects affecting the investment industry.

Mr. William's successor as Pacific division chairman is A. G. Thompson, of James Richardson and Sons, Vancouver, with W. E. Thomson, of Pemberton Securities, as vice-chairman and John Evans, of Greenshields, as honorary secretary. C. P. Rutherford, of A. E. Ames and Co., is Vancouver Island representative on the executive committee.

HARD ON MANY

The flag issue has temporarily turned the political heat off the Canada Pension Fund, but the new proposals which appear to have brought all the provinces into the fold, is still causing concern to many different groups of people.

Most perturbed of all are the self-employed who run small businesses from which they are able to extract less income than comes to the average wage-earner.

Under the terms of the proposed plan self-employed persons will not only have to meet the employee's premium of 1⅛ per cent of wages up to $5,000 a year, but also the employer's matching 1⅛ per cent on the same amount of income.

Only those self employed persons who make less than $1,000 a year—and how many will that involve?—will have the option of staying out of the plan.

Several groups of self-employed persons have already been formed to look after their interests. Small businessmen feel that the burden of the new pension premium will not only give them expensive protection but will further reduce the incentive for the private enterpriser to keep in business for himself.

OUTDOOR LIVING PLAN

"Rooms without ceilings" is the slogan of a new sales campaign launched by the British Columbia Lumber Manufacturers Association. Homeowners are being shown how to create their own private outdoor world by use of wood products.

A group of ten Vancouver architects was employed by BCLMA to plan patios, outdoor recreation and family rooms, sunbathing, spots for complete privacy and partly concealed entrances.

Sketches and designs to suit all types of homes are being made available at most lumber dealers in the province.

Mariners Warned

Caution has been urged by the Department of Transport for mariners sailing near the foreshore fronting of McKay Cormack Shipyard, where a dredge will be working for the next three weeks.

The department also reports that Joan Point Light is not burning, and the Fraser River gas buoy has been relit.

Typhoid Outbreak

ABERDEEN (AP) — A new outbreak of typhoid in this Scottish city, with 15 cases reported, was announced here. Public health officer I. A. MacQueen blamed it on contaminated food.

New Officers

Administrators Convene Here

Delegates from Vancouver, Calgary, Edmonton, Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Anchorage, Alaska, are expected to attend the 1964 Area 13 conference of Administrative Management Society June 18 to 20 at the Empress Hotel.

New president of the society's Victoria chapter is Wendell Krimmer, office manager of Macdonalds Consolidated Limited.

FORMERLY NOMA

Formerly the National Office Management Association, the 60-member chapter of the organization is comprised of office managers and administrative staff of most of Victoria's large businesses.

Mr. Krimmer succeeds J. W. Gillis, of Royal Jubilee Hospital.

New executive members are: E. Claxton, chief accountant St. Joseph's Hospital, vice-president; Mrs. Ruby Masters, comptroller, Capital Broadcasting System Limited, secretary; and Maurice Flett, chief accountant, Moore & Whittington Co. Ltd., treasurer.

Directors are E. Charlton, chief accountant Island Tug & Barge Ltd.; Mrs. E. C. McCormick, teacher Esquimalt High; L. Dobbin, audit manager, Touche, Ross, Bailey & Smart; J. H. Flatman, officer manager McCall Bros. Funeral Directors Ltd.; H. A. Fraser, comptroller, Speedway Motors Ltd., and J. W. Stephen, assistant general manager, Victoria Press Ltd.

NEW EQUIPMENT

Victoria chapter will play host at the conference and office equipment exhibit. The exhibit will be opened by James Greenwood, international society president.

It will show some of the latest developments in office equipment, services and communications.

One interesting feature will be a "message centre" installed by the B.C. Telephone Co. Through a special telephone number and closed circuit television and delegate will be available to his or her office.

Fire Cost $10,800

Cost of fighting the 217 forest fires reported in B.C. so far this year has been $10,800, the B.C. Forest Service announced yesterday.

There were 77 forest fires in the province last week, 57 of which are still burning. None is considered serious.

Generally cool weather and a low fire hazard rating is expected to prevail throughout the province over the next few weeks.

Churches in Congo

Bombings Bring All-Night Curfew

LEOPOLDVILLE, The Congo (AP) — The Congolese government clamped a dusk-to-dawn curfew on Leopoldville Saturday after terrorist saboteurs bombed two Roman Catholic churches, killing a worshipper.

"There will be no exceptions," declared security Police Chief Victor Nendaka. The 6 p.m. to 6 a.m. curfew was announced by Interior Minister Joseph Maboti.

The Congolese capital has been under martial law since October. Maboti is one of three special commissioners appointed to rule the city.

The curfew follows a series of plastic bomb attacks, mostly aimed at the city's electric power supply.

DOORWAY BLAST

Friday night two plastic charges exploded in a doorway of the Roman Catholic church of Christ the King just as mourners were leaving a funeral. One Congolese who was in the doorway was fatally injured by flying concrete. Several other churchgoers were slightly injured.

FOUR HURT

An hour later, another blast damaged a wall of the Catholic church of St. Peter in Dendale African quarter. Four Congolese sitting on the porch of a house 50 yards away were injured by the blast of two plastic charges placed in ventilation ducts.

The saboteurs are believed to come from Brazzaville, capital of the former French Congo, where exiled extremists have set up their headquarters.

This Policeman's Lot Not an 'Appy One

LONDON (UPI)—It was just one day of woe for a policeman trying to break up a traffic jam in Central London yesterday.

The unidentified officer decided to drive away a parked truck that was snarling traffic.

He hit another truck and then plowed into three cars.

Club Plans Meeting On Far East Fisgard

Open-air Oriental entertainment on the 500 block Fisgard Street will highlight Wednesday's meeting of Victoria Chinatown Lions' Club.

The meeting will begin at 5 p.m. with cocktails at Victoria ballroom, followed by a Chinese Smorgasbord at 6 p.m. at Lee's Chinese Foods, Fisgard Street. The entertainment follows at 8:15 p.m., then at 10 p.m. members will return to the ballroom.

Wednesday's activities kick off the four-day multiple district 19 Lions' convention.

Soviets Turn Radio On Latin America

LONDON (UPI)—The Soviet Union has increased its propaganda broadcasts to Latin America by one-third in a drive to counter the influence of Communist China there.

Radio Moscow's Spanish and Portuguese language broadcasts to the area now total 50 hours a week, 17 hours more than previously, authorative sources said.

The radio output has been matched by a campaign in Soviet publications stressing the value of Latin America to Communist plans for the future.

The Soviets have had an interest in penetrating the south American continent for many years, and the establishment of a communist regime in Cuba has pushed ahead their plans. The impetus for the new emphasis appeared to be the rivalry with Peking.

Cash Box Taken

Police Probe Holdup Of Manager

Police investigation continues of a report that a man was robbed at knifepoint overnight Friday of a cash box containing $585.

Victoria police said Ken Landers, 22, of 1016 Linden, said he was arriving home with the cash box shortly after 3 a.m. Saturday when a man walked up to him with what Mr. Landers believed to be a large knife and said, "Hand over that money."

DAY'S TAKE

Mr. Landers said the money was the day's takings from the A & W Drive-In, 3335 Douglas, where he is manager.

He said he threw the cash box at the thief and fled into his house to phone police. He said that he last saw the thief running towards Fort Street.

ABOUT SIX FEET

Mr. Landers described the thief as between five feet 11 and six feet tall, between 19 and 25 years old, having dark curly hair, clean-shaven, and wearing a short coat and light trousers. The cash box was described as 10 inches by five by six, grey and unmarked.

Curb Pride Negro Tells Presbyterians

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — A leading Negro pastor of the United Presbyterian Church said Saturday it has too quickly begun congratulating itself for its militant involvement in the racial crisis and election of a Negro to its highest office for the first time.

The Rev. Eugene S. Callender, pastor of the Church of Master and Moderator of the New York City Presbytery, spoke the challenge in a devotional message to the denomination's general assembly.

"Let us not point to quickly with pride," he said.

'CONTINUE WRONG'

"Let us remember — as long as our church has segregated homes for the aged, as long as we invest in stocks of industries that do not have fair employment practices, as long as white Presbyterians continue to move out of their neighborhoods when Negroes move in, we continue to be wrong in the sight of God."

The 841 voting commissioners, representing 3,300,000 members in 9,100 United Presbyterian churches, opened the annual assembly Thursday by electing the Rev. Edler G. Hawkins of New York as their moderator.

Defection Denied

OTTAWA (UPI) — Social Crediter Marcel Lessard Saturday emphatically denied reports that he would defect to to the Conservative party.

A Parliament Hill radio newsman named Lessard (Lac St. Jean) and two Social Credit colleagues — Gerard Chapdelaine (Sherbrooke) and Maurice Cote (Chicoutimi)—as preparing to leave Robert Thompson for the Tories next Wednesday.

Q. I own an apartment block and carry fire insurance with an Extended Coverage endorsement. Does this give me any protection should the boiler or hot water tank explode or burst?
A. Extended Coverage for apartment blocks under six suites may automatically include damage caused by explosion and rupture. If over six suites, however, a special boiler and machinery policy is needed to cover building, heating and plumbing system.

When the train finally stopped, it was an hysterical group of commuters who burst out, followed by a frisky brown mouse.

Power Boats Restricted

Lake Dream Realized

By HARVEY SHEPHERD

A sign which went up at Prospect Lake Park about a week ago represents the culmination of a decade-long campaign by Prospect Lake residents.

The sign calls attention to a Saanich bylaw restricting the operation of powerboats on the lake so they will not interfere with or endanger swimmers, fishermen and sailboats on the lake or stir up the bottom and foul water many lake residents pump from the lake into their houses.

LONE PROBLEM

Mrs. A. S. Steward, of 4925 Prospect Lake Road, a leader in the campaign for power boat regulation on the lake, said last night that the current regulations now mean the only boating problem on the lake will come from "those few screwballs" who don't obey the law.

Coun. Leslie Passmore, chairman of Saanich council's recreation and parks committee, said the bylaw was passed near the end of last summer's boating season.

NO COMPLAINTS

He said so far there have been no complaints about the bylaw.

The bylaw restricts power boats to a speed of five miles an hour when travelling within 300 feet of the shore and within the lake's West Bay.

LAKE'S CENTRE

In the remaining area in the centre of the lake, boats may travel at any speed but must go in a counter-clockwise direction. Power boat hours are restricted to the hours between 9 a.m. and one hour before sunset.

Mrs. Steward, who headed a committee which proposed much of the contents of the bylaw, said the intent of the bylaw is to preserve the area near the shore for swimmers, fishermen and sailboats and the centre of the lake for power boats.

It doesn't put anyone off the lake, she said.

NEW FLOATS

She said the bylaw does prevent water skiers from taking off at any of the present floating docks on the lake, since all are within the five-mile-an-hour strip.

But she said it is hoped to establish a couple of floats in the central area for use by power boats and water skiers.

NO WISH FOR BAN

Mrs. Steward said Saanich council has indicated that if complaints continue it will consider banning all power boats from the lake. "We have no wish whatsoever to see that,"

She said the counter-clockwise rule was suggested by two members of her committee who are speedboat enthusiasts.

GLAD TO EXPLAIN

She said the legal language of the bylaw, and the wording of the sign, are confusing but any member of the association would be glad to explain the rules to boaters.

She said that in the 10-year campaign for regulation, two petitions were taken up by Prospect Lake residents—one of them a petition to the RCMP. But she said no headway could be made until, a couple of years ago, the Canadian government turned over jurisdiction of some waters, including Prospect Lake, to municipalities.

ELK LAKE TOO

Coun. Passmore said Prospect Lake is the second lake on which Saanich has established boating restrictions.

On Elk Lake power boats are restricted to the western half of the lake.

Coun. Passmore said he does not expect any other lakes in the municipality to require similar restrictions, since other lakes are small and little used.

KILLED ON ROADS

A total of 34,404 persons were killed in traffic accidents in Sweden in the period 1953-63.

Heir-Conditioning May Be Answer

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Men who work on a hot seat all day produce more abnormal babies than others.

Men who wear the kilt produce fewer.

The reason, the clinical director of the children's psychiatric research centre here told Kiwanis Friday, is the effect of heat on the chromosomes of the male gamete.

Dr. S. J. Koegler outlined various causes of mental retardation in children. He said the World Health Organization came to the conclusion of the heat factor when they studied areas with low abnormality rates and areas with high rates.

"One of every 30 children in Canada have mental retardation," Dr. Koegler said. "If that many had TB, or polio, or any other disease, the public would be in an outcry."

B.C. Kinsmen Would Quit International Council

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Kinsmen want the national organization to leave an international council of service clubs because it does not support racial equality.

The provincial organization has drawn up a resolution to that effect for presentation at the national convention at Banff, Alta., in September.

Ross Turner of neighboring Burnaby said Friday a committee headed by him investigated the World Council which has headquarters in London.

The council was dominated by the Round Table Clubs of Britain and South Africa. These clubs did not practise racial tolerance and their control of 45 per cent of the voting power in the council made it impossible to incorporate the basic principle of racial tolerance into the council's constitution.

Steam Engine from Germany

Chug, Chug—Right Into Yard

By MIKE GADSBY

An 11-ton steam engine chugged into Victoria one day last week — and right into Leonard Hutton's back yard.

Well, it didn't really chug in, it came by boat after a sea voyage of several weeks from Germany, where Mr. Hutton, of 215 Menzies, bought it.

Mr. Hutton, who spent 35 years driving every kind of steam engine from a farm tractor to a locomotive, bought the engine for old time's sake and because plans to try to turn it into a lucrative tourist attraction.

"Once I get her cleaned up and ready to go, she could be a popular attraction in one of our parks," said Mr. Hutton.

He wouldn't say how much he paid for the engine, but admitted spending $1,150 in customs duties just to get it into the country.

"She was built in 1936 for use in German surface mining," said Mr. Hutton, "but the mine closed down in 1943 and the engine was retired after only seven years of use, so she should be in good shape."

The engine runs on two-foot-gauge tracks, and is probably the only one in Canada to do so, according to Mr. Hutton. He plans to have a boiler inspector check it over next week to make sure it is safe, then will steam clean it, paint it, and make several other repairs needed to put it in tip-top shape.

He first became interested in buying the engine in January of 1963, and has been negotiating for it ever since.

"I had my eye on an engine in the United States for a while," says Mr. Hutton, "but I discovered it would cost me more to have it shipped here over land than it would to have this one brought here by sea from Germany."

Mr. Hutton got his first experience with steam engines aboard a steam-driven threshing machine on his parents' farm near Prince Albert, Sask., in the early 1920s.

"Since then I've driven steam shovels, steam tractors, steam rollers and small sawmill engines, but the trickiest job of all was driving the big steam locomotives at Ogden Point."

"You had to back those big engines right up to the sea in order to load and unload barges, and that was a tricky business," he said.

"One miscalculation and the whole engine could have gone right into the drink."

Mr. Hutton, now a stationary engineer with the federal government, said he expects to have more fun with his new engine than he ever had with any of the 100-odd various engines he has driven over the years.

"At least when I retire I won't have to go down to the Causeway to sit with the rest of the old men — I can sit in my steam engine in the yard."

Spring Assembly

Jehovah's Rally Attracts 1,400

A peak attendance of 1,400 is expected for the Jehovah's Witnesses' spring circuit assembly being held this weekend at S. J. Willis Junior Secondary School.

OPEN TO PUBLIC

This afternoon, newly appointed district supervisor Richard Arnett will address a public meeting on Facing Up To The Urgency Of Our Times.

Afterwards, circuit supervisor Ernest Adamson will talk about Protecting The New Generation. All sessions are open to the general public.

COLOR FILM

Last night, visitors to the assembly saw a free two-hour color film entitled "Proclaiming Everlasting Good News Around The World."

Produced by the Watch Tower Society, it was filmed on location and took audiences on a world tour and demonstrated how unity could exist everywhere if people's interests were centred around the worship of God.

1963—A YEAR OF RECORD GROWTH

PETER G. HOPCHAN
President

THE REPORT OF THE DIRECTORS

1963, by any measure, was the most productive year in the Company's history. Not only were new records established in new insurance written and in the increase in the amount of insurance in force, but premium income, interest earnings, and the increase in assets were also at a record high.

NEW BUSINESS—The sale of new life insurance and annuities exceeded $20,391,000.00, far surpassing any previous year in the Company's history. The previous high, recorded in 1962, was $8,927,000.00.

INSURANCE AND ANNUITIES IN FORCE—Total life insurance and annuities in force more than doubled during 1963, to $27,293,000.00 at December 31 from $12,441,000.00 at the end of 1962. This represents an increase of $14,852,000.00 or 119%.

INCOME—The Company's total revenue in 1963 amounted to $382,000.00, an increase of $135,000.00 or 54.4% over the previous year. Premium income increased by 63.0% and interest income by 16.8%.

ASSETS, LIABILITIES AND SURPLUS—Company assets increased $729,000.00 to $2,123,000.00 at the end of 1963, a gain of 52.3%. Liabilities, including policyholders' reserves, increased $255,000.00 to $822,000.00 at December 31. To provide for a stronger capital and surplus position, the Company issued additional common shares at a premium in 1963. Surplus and capital amounted to $1,301,000.00 at the year end.

COMPARATIVE HIGHLIGHTS

	1963	1962
Insurance and Annuities in Force	$27,293,000.00	$12,441,000.00
New Insurance and Annuities	20,391,000.00	8,927,000.00
Assets	2,123,000.00	1,394,000.00

Boy with Sewn-On Arm Plays Ball

SOMERVILLE, Mass. (UPI)—When freckle-faced Everett (Red) Knowles Jr. left school and headed for the railroad tracks with friends two years ago Saturday he had no idea he was walking toward a medical milestone.

The Little League pitcher and his pals used to hop slow-moving Boston & Maine Railroad freight trains for the short ride home.

While clinging to the side of the freight, he slammed into a concrete bridge abutment which severed his right arm at the shoulder.

Everett was rushed to Massachusetts General Hospital in nearby Boston where a team of surgeons rejoined the limb to the body in an operation that made medical history.

Today 14-year-old Everett, a freshman at St. Mary's High School in Cambridge, plays baseball and basketball with his left arm.

His right arm, carried in a sling, is encased in a light plastic brace. He exercises by bending the arm at the wrist and by moving his fingers with his good left hand.

He can hold objects weighing between five and 10 pounds in his right hand and is beginning to use his index and middle fingers.

"They made a brace for me that enables me to pick up pens and pencils and things like that with my first two fingers," he said. "After that they'll probably try for the next two."

He goes to the hospital twice a week for therapy.

Canadian Award

City Professor Novel Winner

A first novel by Victoria University English Professor John Peter has been named winner of the Doubleday Canadian Prize Novel Award.

It is the first time in the history of the award a first novel has come up winner.

ANNUAL AWARD

The award is granted annually at the judges' discretion to a novel by a Canadian or non-Canadian on an essentially Canadian subject.

The novel, Along That Coast, is set in a village on the east coast of South Africa and though primarily a love story, provides an analysis of the racial situation in that country.

It carries the prophecy that the innocent will suffer for the misdeeds of the racially guilty.

Dr. Peter was born in Queenstown, South Africa, and is a naturalized Canadian.

He has written such non-fiction works as Complaint and Satire in Early English Literature and A Critique of Paradise Lost. His short stories, poems and critical essays have been published in Canada, Great Britain and the United States.

JUDGES

On the panel of judges were Thomas B. Costain, author and editor; William Arthur Deacon, prominent Canadian critic; Edward Fitzgerald, editor-in-chief for the Literary Guild of America; George E. Nelson, president of Doubleday Canada Ltd., and Timothy Seldes, managing editor for Doubleday and Company.

Previous winners are Thomas H. Raddall for The Governor's Lady, Arthur Hailey for In High Places and Ralph Allen for Ask the Name of the Lion.

Evidence In

Crop Benefit Probe Report Ottawa-Bound

REGINA (CP)—The preliminary report of a judicial inquiry that heard charges of political interference and questionable payments of cash benefits to farmers in southwestern Saskatchewan under the Prairie Farm Assistance Act is expected to go to the federal government within three weeks.

District court Judge Harold Pope of Moose Jaw, who headed the one-man inquiry, heard 680,000 words of testimony while sitting at Regina, Swift Current and Gravelbourg, Sask.

BIGGER BENEFITS

Some farmers in the Swift Current and Gravelbourg areas told the inquiry they received more financial benefits than they were entitled to under PFAA before last year's federal election.

They said they submitted falsified applications to the administration, in some cases claiming crop failures when they had harvested excellent crops.

PROVIDES GRANTS

The PFAA was set up in 1939 to provide grants to farmers who suffer poor crops over wide areas. Benefits may range up to $800 a farmer in a year. The administration has inspectors who normally check claims for benefits.

The Beaver Is 85 Tomorrow

LONDON (CP) — The Canadian who parlayed an ailing London newspaper into a multi-million-dollar publishing empire—Lord Beaverbrook — celebrates his 85th birthday Monday.

Host at a dinner in his honor will be another Canadian-born newspaperman, Lord Thomson of Fleet—formerly Roy Thomson, head of the world-wide Thomson publishing chain.

The BBC will also honor "The Beaver," as he is called, with a half-hour broadcast entitled "Beaverbrook—the man and the myth."

Lord Beaverbrook was born William Maxwell Aitken in Maple, Ont., the son of a Presbyterian minister. The Aitken family later moved to Newcastle, N.B.

Flying Saucers? No, Just Baseballs

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

Hey, Bill Veeck. You'd better get your dead ball plan adopted before baseball's swing-from-the-heels guys lose 'em altogether.

Home runs flew in all directions Saturday as the boys teed off on tired, shell-shocked pitchers to produce such football-score results as 14-2, 11-9, 9-5 and 8-4.

Jim Gentile, a legitimate home run swatter, banged two. Good-field, no-hit Bobby Knoop hit one, a grand slammer, no less. And Felipe Alou had an inside-the-park job, among the near two-dozen homers.

There were five home runs in Boston's 5-4 triumph over Kansas City. Besides Gentile's pair for Kansas City, homers were hit by Bob Tillman, Roman Mejias and Felix Mantilla of the Red Sox. Mantilla's came in the ninth, in a pinch hit role with a man on base, to turn defeat into victory.

Three homers were among the 17 hits amassed by the Chicago White Sox in their 14-2 slaughter of the Washington Senators. They were slugged by Dave Nicholson, Pete Ward and Tommy McCraw. Ward's was a grand slammer.

Knoop's four-run homer enabled the Los Angeles Angels to come from behind and defeat the New York Yankees 9-5. Mickey Mantle homered for the losers. It was his seventh of the season and 426th of his career, tying him for the top mark among the active players with Eddie Mathews of Milwaukee.

Leon Wagner knocked in five runs with a home run and single as Cleveland outslugged Detroit 11-9. Dick McAuliffe had a homer for the Tigers.

Oddly enough, the Minnesota Twins, who lead both leagues in home runs, didn't hit any in their 5-1 victory over Baltimore. There was one Oriole homer, by Boog Powell, which deprived Lee Stange of a shutout.

Rico Carty, a rookie outfielder walloped two home runs for Milwaukee as the Braves downed the St. Louis Cardinals 8-4. Bill White hit one for the Cards. Alou and Henry Aaron also homered for the Braves.

Jerry Lynch and Roberto Clemente were Pittsburgh's homer hitters as the Pirates swamped San Francisco 9-2 behind Bob Friend's five-hitter. Willie Mays was held to a double in four times at bat, dropping his average to an even .400.

Last night's score: Vancouver 18 at Nanaimo 13.
Next game: Tuesday—VICTORIA at Vancouver.

NANAIMO — Vancouver went on a goal-scoring spree in the first and fourth quarters to defeat Nanaimo, 18-13, in a clean fast Inter-City Lacrosse League game here last night before about 1,000 fans.

The win brought Vancouver to within one point of league-leading New Westminster. Both clubs have played eight games.

MOMENTARY TIE

Vancouver led all the way except for a moment in the third quarter when Nanaimo tied the score 8-8. The mainlanders then rattled in four straight goals to leave the floor with a 12-9 lead before out-scoring Nanaimo 6-4 in a free-wheeling fourth quarter.

Vancouver's young goalkeeper Norm Nestman, who wanted to play with Victoria Shamrocks at the start of the season, turned in a strong game as Nanaimo out-shot Vancouver 52-46.

Referees Earl McDonald and Whitey Severson assessed only 20 minutes in penalties, 14 to Vancouver and six minutes to Nanaimo.

Terry Davis led the Nanaimo scorers with four goals and two assists. Bobby Marsh and Syd Warick had two goals and three assists while Bill Chisolm counted three goals and two assists for Vancouver.

Bo's Not Completely Square

By MILTON RICHMAN

NEW YORK (UPI)—Ex-playboy Bo Belinsky has rejoined the human race because, as he puts it, "there was no other alternative."

The once rollicking, free-wheeling southpaw of the Los Angeles Angels now concentrates strictly on pitching and says those old days and night of hi-jinks are far behind him.

"There was no sense fighting the whole world all by myself," Belinsky said, sitting quietly by himself near the water cooler in the dugout.

"After all, I'm no kid anymore. I'm 27. I saw the whole bit wasn't getting me anywhere. That trip back to the minors last season made me do some thinking, too.

"I think I have a future in baseball and I don't want to do anything to jeopardize it. My outlook is entirely different every time I go out there to the mound now. I am starting to think just like all these other guys."

Bo motioned with his hand toward the field where his Los Angeles teammates were busy taking batting practice.

Belinsky claims he doesn't regret any of his past, but felt he'd better change if he hoped to get anywhere in baseball.

"Don't get me wrong," he said. "I haven't become a complete square. I guess you'd say I toned down a whole lot. Why? Like I said, I'm getting older and I saw my activities weren't getting me anywhere. Worse than that, I was getting bored by the whole bit."

Bo has recanted before and then knocked over the traces again, so there might be some question as to how much he really means it this time were it not for some overwhelming evidence on his side.

One of the first things he did, for example, was to sell his flashy lipstick-colored Cadillac which he used to dazzle the gals in Los Angeles. Moreover, he has forgotten all about a possible movie career and rarely is seen in night spots anymore.

"After a ball game, I go home and watch television," Belinsky said. "I watch it by the hour. Until my eyeballs pop out. Do I miss the crowds? Nahh! They get boring after awhile, too."

Belinsky has pitched well enough for the Angels this season, although that isn't immediately apparent from his 1-2 record and his earned run average of 3.09.

Seattle Rowers Win

SHAWNIGAN LAKE — The Lake Washington Rowing Club won the eights event Saturday in the Pacific Northwest regatta.

The winning club was timed at 5:41, while the second-place Vancouver Rowing Club was timed at 5:44.

In the fours, Lake Washington finished first with a time of 6:36. University of B.C. was second in 6:37.

In the coxed fours, UBC was first by two lengths over Lake Washington.

Bus Driver Wins Holiday

Bus driver Ray Hodgkinson wil be taking his holidays in July this year, and he's going to see a lot of the hemisphere while travelling inexpensively in luxury fashion.

Hodgkinson earned himself a dream holiday at Gibsons' Bowladrome last night when he rolled games of 233, 183 and 140 to win the Lower Island fivepin roll-off in the Players Bowling Festival.

EXPENSES PAID

For knocking over enough pins to total that 556 points, Hodgkinson wins an expenses-paid trip for two which will enable him to spend a week at the New York World's Fair and five days in Bermuda.

Hodgkinson will leave Victoria by plane on July 1, spend his week in New York and then settle down on the SS Queen of Bermuda for the next 10 days. He will remain aboard the luxury cruiser for the 10 days, spending five at sea and five days in Bermuda before being flown home.

150 WINNERS

Hodgkinson, who had to beat out 38 finalists in his area, is one of 150 bowlers who earned the trip in the cross-Canada competition which drew an unheard-of entry of 166,470. This was boiled down to 10,000 finalists, who rolled off last night in their respective areas for the 150 top prizes.

Under rules governing the five pin end of the competition, players made their official entry and then went out to try and beat their league average. At the end of the qualifying period, the 10 per cent of the total entry with the greatest differential between their league average and their attempt to qualify made the roll-off.

The winner of the roll-off was the bowler with the biggest difference between his qualifying average and his average for the three-game roll-off.

Hodgkinson, averaging 138 in league play, made the roll-off by averaging 153 in a qualifying attempt. Last night his average was 185 and a fraction for a plus 32.

ISLANDERS FAIL

Island tenpinners, however, failed in their bid for the same trip. Sixty-four of them rolled off at Aurora Lanes last night in competition against 139 finalists from the New Westminster area, who rolled off at Lucky Strike Lanes in their area.

Tenpinners in the final rolled against their league average and the winner was S. Sesselmont of Pender Harbor, a 156-average bowler who came through last night with games of 233, 144 and 211 for a 588 which put him 40 pins over his league average.

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Six Indianapolis Motor Speedway veterans and two rookies qualified cars Saturday for the Memorial Day 500-mile race, leaving four spots to be filled in the 33-car field in final time trials Sunday.

Wind, with gusts up to 29 miles per hour, and two spectacular accidents, reduced the activity.

Dempsey Wilson of Lawndale, Calif., crashed a rear-engine Offenhauser on the south retaining wall late in the day but escaped injury. A mechanic was hurt earlier in the pits.

The 29 qualified cars averaged 152.9 m.p.h. against the 149.8 average for the entire starting line-up last year.

Two British-American hybrid cars were qualified by an Australian racing veteran and a young American.

Jack Brabham, 38, twice world road racing champion, flew back overnight from practicing for Sunday's Dutch Grand Prix and qualified his Brabham-Offenhauser at 152.504 miles an hour.

Brabham ran without his chief mechanic, Denny Moore of Tulsa, Okla., who was struck in the side by a wing nut thrown from the separated wheel of a car driven by Paul Russo of Indianapolis. Moore was listed in good condition at hospital. Russo was not hurt.

Four-Way Tie In Memphis Golf

MEMPHIS (AP)—Doug Sanders, Mike Souchak, Gene Littler and Billy Casper jammed into a tie for the third round lead in the $50,000 Memphis Open golf tournament Saturday with nine-under-par 201s.

(For Casper, leader after two rounds at eight-under-par, it was a matter of hanging on under the pressure of 66s by Sanders and Littler, and a 67 by Souchak. Casper had a one-under-par 69.

Sanders and Souchak closed with five birdies each on the back nine and caught Casper and Littler on the 18th green. Casper and Littler got their decisive birdies on the long 16th hole.

The 201 score after 54 holes is the lowest on the tour this year.

Mason Rudolph fired a 66 to take second place with 202.

Bruce Devlin, Tommy Jacobs and defending champion Tony Lema were bunched at 203, while Johnny Pott and Art Wall Jr., were three strokes back at 204.

Casper, the portly 32-year-old putting ace played better than his 69 indicated. He was nine-under after 11 holes, slipped down a notch on 12 and made it nine for good on 16 with a chip shot out of tall rough that stopped one foot from the pin.

Arnold Palmer came back under par with a 68 to bring his total to 207, while Jack Nicklaus came under par for the first time with an impressive 66 for 208.

Hockey Sponsor Discouraged

OTTAWA (CP)—Past President Art Potter of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association said Saturday the association likely will not accept the offer of a private group to finance a Canadian world hockey team.

"We (the CAHA) have made our own arrangements and we will organize our own team," he said.

Mr. Potter was commenting upon the offer of Harold Ribson, recreation director of Wallaceburg, Ont., who said a private organization is willing to undertake all expenses on condition that a television network make available its facilities for two hours and that Maple Leaf Gardens in Toronto make its facilities available for one evening at no charge.

"We haven't discussed it yet so we don't know whether we'll simply thank him for his offer or ask him to go ahead and get the television time and the Gardens, which I doubt that he can do, and then talk to him." Mr. Potter said.

Perfect Round Helps

Smokey Wins Shoot

Smokey Green, ex-Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry sharpshooter, shot a perfect 50 in his first lie-down, slipped slightly to 46 in his second round, but still won yesterday's Victoria and District Rifle Association shooting competition at Heal's Range.

Green's total score of 96 was one better than Ron Morrison and A. Spittal who each had a 95.

Next weekend there is a two-day shoot for the Overseas Day and T. Eaton Company trophies. This completes shooting in preparation for the provincial championships to be held in Vancouver June 6-13.

Yesterday's leading scores:

At Saanich Meet

Royal Oak Champions

Mount Newton provided three individual aggregate winners, but Royal Oak won the Saanich district junior secondary school track championship Friday with 316½ total points.

Mount Newton was second with 266¼ points, and North Saanich third with 203½.

Pacing the Mount Newton team were Jim Whyte, Tony Konopski and Larry Paul who won the junior, intermediate and senior boys' aggregate titles respectively.

Barbara Neufeld and Julia Whiles led Royal Oak. Miss Neufeld took three firsts to win the intermediate girls' award, while Miss Whiles led the junior girls.

OUTDOORS

with Alec Merriman

Last weekend we decided we would try to live off the sea and we had fun trying it.

First stop on the way to our Sooke cabin Saturday was Billings (or Jackson's) Spit between Sooke Basin and Sooke Harbor where we dug a bucket of clams . . . some of them butter clams (which must measure 2½ inches across) and the rest little neck clams (which must be 1½ inches across).

Later the butter clams went into a pot of clam chowder and the smaller, more tender little necks were steamed and served in drawn butter.

After an unsuccessful morning bid for spring salmon off Otter Point we turned to our "bass alley" off Muir Creek and landed a catch of two good-sized lings and half-a-dozen bass and rock fish.

Neighbor Gordie Bell came over and gave a demonstration of filleting methods and the lings and bass were turned into tasty fillets for fish and chips.

The frames of the bass and cod, along with a perforated jar of cracked clams, were tied into the crab pot which was placed 100 yards from shore.

A couple of hours later there was an eight-inch crab steaming on the stove. There would have been more, but we fell into the trap of not checking our outfits after a winter layoff. A half-dozen crabs escaped through a hole in the pot netting and we watched them escape to the sandy bottom as we hauled up the pot.

We could have used a salmon to round out our weekend of seafood eating, but this year it may be a little tougher than usual to catch salmon in southern Vancouver Island waters.

Although the outlook for Georgia Strait salmon fishing is excellent, the outlook is not too bright for the Oak Bay-Victoria-Sooke waterfront, other than maybe an early run of springs.

Certainly there will be nowhere near the salmon fishing we had last year.

For optimum fun on the saltwater outdoors front turn to other kinds of fishing when salmon fishing is slow.

We have been spoiled here with our fine salmon fishing, but south of us the Americans are finding that with increasing fishing pressures building up and dwindling salmon stocks they can find lots of new sport in scrap or bottom fishing. Some charter boats specialize in bottom fishing.

There is no need for the scorn some anglers appear to have for bottom fish. They are quite sporty to catch on light tackle . . . some may look rather ugly when compared to salmon, but they are excellent eating when filleted, some say better than salmon. Don't throw your catch away, because it isn't hard to find neighbors or friends who love to get a little fish.

A combination of salmon fishing and bottom fishing can add plenty of fun to the outdoors.

Last weekend when we hit our "bass alley" we found Frank and Josephine Frost already fishing the bass . . . and they are rated as the top Otter Point-Sherringham salmon fishermen. They caught some nice cod and a number of bass, but they also hooked into a 17-pound spring salmon.

There is no reason that while mooching for bottom fish or bass with plug cut or whole herring that you shouldn't hit into a big spring. They frequent the same waters. You double your fun.

Halibut fishing is becoming more popular as a wild and exciting activity for sports fishermen.

Frank Elliott's 241-pounder on 40-pound test line and mooched herring off Port Renfrew last week set the blood of sports anglers a-tingling with excitement. They don't come that big very often, but 40 to 100-pounders are not uncommon and these can be dangerous to try to land in a small sports boat. Best idea is to tow them to shore. Their flapping about could splinter a small boat.

Fish the halibut by bouncing bait along the bottom, or mooching with herring.

Closest halibut ground to Victoria is in Oak Bay waters, due south of the Chain Islands. Line up the water tower with golf links green and Chain Islands with Ten Mile Point. The odd halibut is hooked in The Gap, by slow and deep trollers.

Other halibut beds we know about are southeast off James Island, south of Discovery Light, off Constance Banks, off the centre of Pedder Inlet about opposite Race Rocks, about two miles out and southeast from Sherringham Point and the mouth of San Juan Bay from Botanical Beach to the north side of the Bay. We have hooked halibut while trolling for springs off William Head.

Now is the time to catch the halibut and as an added attraction whenever you find a halibut bed, you also find a good cod bed.

Cup Cricket

Vancouver's representative under-18 cricket team plays Victoria this afternoon at 1 at Windsor Park in the first game of the Cameron Cup series.

The Victoria team will travel to Vancouver for the second leg later in the summer.

In other cricket action this afternoon Five Cs play Oak Bay at Beacon Hill and Incogs meet Albions at the University School. Both games start at 1 p.m.

New Fans Intriguing

NEW YORK (AP)—Television has been praised—or blamed—for the creation of the new golf fan. He's the armchair type who probably couldn't find his way to a golf course. He thinks a brassie is a bleached blonde and that spikes are used to hold houses together.

Thanks to the new golf fan, the game never has been more popular. He spends long hours each weekend in front of a television screen with a cool, nourishing drink at hand. He knows about golf—it's the game where everyone shoots birdies between commercials.

Frank Hannegan, tournament relations manager of the United States Golf Association, has found the new golf fan intriguing.

For a better understanding of the N.G.F., Frank enlisted the aid of an advertising firm, Tension, Nettled and Timorous, and used the results of its golf TV audience survey to prepare an article for the May issue of the USGA golf journal.

TNT, Hannegan says, used taped interviews and electronic computers to prepare a master interview which purports to represent the average television viewer's thoughts on golf. It goes like this:

Q. When and how did golf begin?

A. Arnold Palmer invented it about eight years ago in a little town outside of Pittsburgh.

Q. Has golf become more popular recently?

A. Absolutely. Now it is even being played in England, where there is a British Open tournament.

Q. To what do you attribute the growth of golf's popularity?

A. Are you kidding? It's the cash. Some of those guys make more money than Willie Shoemaker.

Q. Do you know the difference between stroke play and match play?

A. Match play is when they play two on a team on Saturday afternoons and the first prize is $50,000. Stroke play is generally played on Sundays with one man against another, but the money isn't so big.

Q. Who, in your opinion, is the greatest golfer to date.

A. Palmer—the founder.

Q. What about Bob Jones?

A. I hear it's a great movie, but it hasn't been on television yet.

Shoemaker Second Banana

INGLEWOOD, Calif.—Jockey Bill Shoemaker rode two winners at Hollywood Park yesterday to move into undisputed second place in the all-time winners in horse-racing behind world leader Johnny Longden.

Shoemaker edged into the second spot in total wins when he guided Fleet Son to victory in the third race. He also won the sixth race on Close By to bring his winning total to 4,872.

Longden went into Saturday's program with 5,819 victories, but rode no winners.

CTV Signs

CALGARY (CP)—The Western Football Conference has signed a one-year contract worth $206,000 with the CTV network for television rights to 28 WFC games this season.

WFC president Al McEachern said the CBC did not bid for the television rights. The CBC would continue to carry weekend telecasts of games under a private agreement between the two networks.

Yesterday's score: Independents 4, McLarens 2.

Next game: Today—Transport Workers vs. Greaves, 2 p.m., Royal Athletic Park.

One inning of wildness cost Stan Thame a pitching victory at Royal Athletic Park yesterday afternoon.

Thame, pitching for McLarens' Construction in a Senior Amateur Baseball League contest walked in three runs in the first inning as his club dropped a 4-2 decision to league-leading IAA Independents.

It was fortunate for Independents that Thame had that short spell of control trouble. They managed only three hits off him throughout the game, and their fourth run in the fifth inning scored on a throwing error.

Thame's first-inning troubles began with one out and Jim Moody on first base. John Dodds singled, and Thame walked the next four men before Ron Grant hit into a double play to end the inning.

McLarens' runs came when Steve Bishop doubled in Stu Mitchell from second base, and Ken Gregory singled to score Bishop.

Pitcher Bob Mabee got solid support from his Independents' teammates as they pulled off four double plays.

TRAVEL Booms Wine But Stan Sighs for Old Days

For There's No Romance in Beer

By STAN DELAPLANE

The wine people of California have come up with a juicy finding: Wine drinking in these U.S. has increased tremendously in the last 10 years—58 per cent.

This is interesting news. For America was a beer country at heart. Most of it pretty unflavorful, but we drink barrels of it.

"Travel," say the wine people, "has broadened the experience of many Americans. The European custom of wine with meals has been sampled and brought back home."

The wine people have also put a little status thing on vino—they intimate that it is more elegant to pop a cork than to rip a finger on a beer can. Beer is for Candlestick ball park. But wine is for candlelight.

However, let us not say farewell to the suds without a reminiscent sigh.

The rich brown Brahma Extra, drunk by the chopp in a waterfront bar in Rio.

The tangy Tuborg of Denmark on a warm evening at Tivoli Gardens in Copenhagen.

A bottle of Bohemia in a dusty Mexican plaza in Chihuahua State. And a military band playing "Zacatecas March."

Cold Carlsberg on the veranda of the Press Club on the Peak in Hong Kong. When the harbor is sunset red and the fishing junks come bobbing home.

Heineken's beside the ship canal in Curacao. The houses crowd the water with Dutch doors. And the Holland's voices call from the locks.

There's brown bitter in a London pub when the rain beats at leaded glass window. And coffee-black Guinness with a creamy head at Paddy Burke's outside Galway. The day they bring in the fresh, wild oysters to eat with Irish brown bread and butter.

Ah, me, is there little romance in the foamy brew? No wonders to be seen through the thick glass mugs?

You're having a bottle of Hinano alongside the docks in Papeete in Tahiti. While the morning boat is loading chickens and brown Tahitians for the run to Moorea, rising emerald green against the blue morning sky.

As Bananas Swing

Or the huge bottles of Tennant's Scottish beer on the porch at Aggie Grey's in Apia, in Samoa. Where the bananas swing in the breeze. The yard is flaming with hibiscus. And the golden surf beats on the bones of the German warship on the reef.

Have Just One

Wine is the table beverage of the stylish traveller. Home from the tables and truffles of France. Beer is Saturday night at a poker game.

One Last Bottle

But before you let it go, have one last bottle of dark beer from Orizaba. On a hot night in Tehuantepec, the air filled with the banana-and-coffee smells of the tropics.

Or the powerful beer of Melbourne. In Flinders street's longest oyster bar in the world.

Polar in Caracas. St. Pauli Girl in the Grand Bahama. San Miguel on the breezeway veranda of the Manila Hotel with a jasmine smell of white sampaguita flowers under a flame sunset.

As they say, there's no romance in beer.

Smudge Wiped Off Face of Paris

By JERRY HULSE

PARIS—The last time I saw Paris, her heart was old and grey.

But, all of this was before the ministry of culture ordered the soap and suds brigade to launch its attack on Paris' famous monuments.

Personally, I was fond of her the way she was before—with the smudge on her face. Alas, though, too many tourists complained.

To me, the greyness was a sign of middle-aged maturity, of a growing old with the memories of youth hidden behind the facade.

I remember staying once in a small Left Bank hotel, just around the corner from the Cathedral St. Sulpice, and looking up at that magnificent old church, the walls black with grime, and feeling a deep affection for it, as one feels warmly towards someone old whose face reflects a kindness and a wiseness—and a confession of having lived long and well and seen it all.

Along that very narrow street beside the old cathedral have passed the Hemingways who've written themselves into immortality. Its walls have heard the footsteps of the old, the jackboot of armies and lately the invasion of the tourist—all of whom Paris has watched while she grew old and turned grey.

Pink Obelisk

Reluctantly, though, I admit that the current scrubbing is revealing a hidden attractiveness few tourists knew existed before.

The 18th century buildings surrounding the Place de la Concorde are now a sandy yellow. The Obelisk in the centre, a gift of Charles X by the Egyptian viceroy in 1829, is once again a pale pink. Across the Seine, the Invalides, where Napoleon is buried, is white again. And only recently the soap and suds brigade attacked the courtyard of the Louvre for the first time in 499 years.

Special Worry

When I passed by the other day, the noble old Opera House was being bathed by workmen.

Notre Dame is a special worry. Because of its carvings and sculptures, the 12th century cathedral will be difficult to clean. Some of the carvings and sculptures are painted and so workmen must be careful lest they destroy the colors.

On Rhine

River Craft Huge

By CYRIL RAY

COLOGNE—To be the repository of Western civilization, and to know it, imposes special responsibilities on a nation, extending even to the christening of its coal-barges.

The Belgians, the Germans, the Dutch and the Swiss may be content to name theirs after home towns or favorite daughters or classical deities, as it might be Gretchen, or Mainz Maiden, or Neptune.

But as we cruise up-river in our own elegant German Rhine steamer, we have passed one French barge immortalizing a painter, another a writer—Renoir and Stendhal—and considerably more named after wine-growing districts.

Coq au Vin

No dishes yet, but it would not surprise me to find some sturdy, broad-in-the-beam "Coq au Vin" round a bend in the river, or a saucy little "Crepe Suzette."

Our own craft, the German-owned and operated M.V. Europa, and its sister-ship, Helvetia, are the two smartest, biggest and fastest of the Rhine's passenger boats.

In all it is a proper setting for the sort of floating holiday (five days Rotterdam to Basle; four days back) that costs between $15 and $22 a day.

Bigger Yet

I had no idea until I came aboard Europa that any river steamer, save on the Mississippi, could be so spacious, and yet Helvetia, I am told, has even bigger public rooms, and the new ship will be bigger still.

Each can take a couple of hundred passengers, of whom about half, as a rule, are English-speaking, with Britain and the dominions outnumbering the Americans, and quite a number of French, which says a lot for the food. Cabin and dining-saloon staff speak English and French as well as German.

And it isn't too early, I gather, to book for next year.

Family Of the Bride

A wedding is a happy occasion, in Japan as elsewhere in the world. The family of the bride pictured here is dressed in the traditional formal black kimono worn by wedding guests. The bride is radiant in white and wears the headdress which is supposed to cover a woman's "horns of jealousy." Autumn is the season of weddings in Japan, so that visitors to the 1964 Tokyo Olympics in October can expect to see such scenes as this. (Japan Air Lines photo)

Three Tours Planned

Bamboo Curtain Lifts

The Bamboo Curtain has been drawn aside for Canadian tourists.

In a unique tour venture that will take visitors into the interior of China, Canadian Pacific Airlines is offering three departure dates this year. F. D. Fisk, the company's tour and convention manager, said that the tours, departing from Vancouver on July 12, Aug. 30 and Oct. 18, were arranged by an Edmonton travel agency through Luxingshe, China International Travel Service, of Peking.

"Response to the idea, which is being promoted by travel agents across Canada, has been very good," said Mr. Fisk, adding that teachers seem to find it particularly attractive.

As well as the three main 20-day tours which cover the same itinerary, there is a series of independent tours ranging from 13 to 20 days with no fixed departure dates.

The three fixed departure tours begin in Hong Kong, where visitors board a train for Canton, not far from the border, and from there travel inland to Hangchow and Peking.

Garden Notes

Stop the Rot Now

By M. V. CHESNUT, FRHS

IRIS ROT (D.N., Victoria)—The yellowing of the leaf tips on your bearded iris plants is usually a symptom of rhizome rot, and I think that if you dig up an affected specimen, you will find soft, rotting spots in the rhizome—the rhizome of an iris is the horizontal woody part from which the leaves spring. Rhizome rot is most prevalent where the soil is continually wet due to bad drainage.

Better dig up all plants with suspicious symptoms and cut away all rotted portions of the rhizomes, dusting the cut surfaces with sulphur, or better still, copper-lime dust. Clean the plants of all weeds and replant, scratching in a light dusting of superphosphate first. Plant with the roots well down but with the backs of the rhizomes exposed to the sun.

This is not the best time to take up and replant bearded irises—the period just after the flowers fade is best—but when rhizome rot strikes, corrective action should be taken immediately.

BEGONIA PLANTING (E.L.G., Ladysmith)—To my mind, it is still a bit early to plant out started tuberous begonias, as even a light ground frost could ruin them. Your pots or boxes of plants should go outdoors during the day, however, giving them plenty of fresh air and just a little morning sun. It should be safe in your district to set the plants out permanently about two weeks from now.

Dormant, unstarted begonia bulbs can be planted outdoors now, though, as the tender shoots won't be up and exposed to the weather for several weeks yet. Plant in light shade in soil enriched with peat moss and a little bone meal.

SALT FOR ASPARAGUS (S.McD., Royal Oak)—While the garden books all recommend a dressing of common salt on the asparagus beds in May, I am always a bit chary about suggesting this treatment unless I know something about the character of the soil. There is no doubt whatever that salt is highly beneficial to asparagus growth on sandy, gritty or gravelly soil, but on heavy ground the salt makes the clay stickier and more intractable than ever.

If your soil is light, by all means give your asparagus patch some salt. Agricultural salt from a farmer's feed store is much cheaper than table salt and is just as effective for this purpose. The dosage is two ounces per square yard now, with a similar dressing again in three week's time.

BELOW-PAR RASPBERRIES (W.A.U., Victoria) — Virus infection is probably the most common cause of poor yields from the raspberry patch, and as there is no cure for virus, all you can do is scrap and burn the infected plants and replace them—on a different piece of ground—with new virus-free canes.

Running virus a close second, though, is lack of soil moisture through the summer months. Experiments have shown that yields can be doubled or tripled in dry areas by irrigation. Where running water isn't available, a heavy straw mulch over the rooting area to reduce evaporation of soil moisture can give a 25 per cent increase in crop without any extra water.

In addition to reducing the current season's crop of berries, the effect of drought is reflected the following season too, as the new canes get away to such a poor start. Your poor yield last summer, therefore, could have been due to lack of soil moisture in the summer of 1962.

Beirut Markets Stability

Beirut, Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon—This is the swingingest town in the Middle East, but its greatest attraction is neither sea, sun, nor sin, though it has all those things in large quantities, but stability.

This is where Syrians come to have their nervous breakdowns caused by the political instability back home. A local neurologist's business has multiplied tenfold in 10 years, all from foreigners. The Lebanese don't have nervous breakdowns. But why?

This is the centre of diplomatic activity in the Middle East, a position it wrested from Cairo shortly after Nasser come to power.

The Soviet ambassador to Lebanon, sunning himself on St. Simon beach where all the diplomats go, said to me, "Beirut is where the information is. You can find more about what's going on in Syria here than in Syria. Two hundred newspapers here. Two in Syria.

The Russians have been stirring up trouble in the Middle East since the war, but when it came to choosing base for diplomatic operations in the Middle East they picked this business-controlled, free enterprise town to do it from because they enjoy stability too.

Lebanon is where the Phoenicians came from and I have always had a soft spot for the Phoenicians, not because they founded Carthage, but because they invented the alphabet with which I have been earning a precarious living all my life.

They invented a lot of other things, too. Like trade. I rode out the other day along the blue Mediterranean and talked to a wily, smiling Arab, name of Fawzi El Hoss, on the terract of his Sands Hotel. From there, in the setting sun, Beirut's tall buildings look like the skyline of Manhattan.

"I was riding my horse on the beach one day," Fawzi recalled "and I saw these two palm trees which are still there. Under the palms is a 200-year-old Arab house. I called my lawyer and said let's buy it.

"My lawyer tells me it's already sold, but the sale is in court, and there's a 20,000-pound penalty. I tell the lawyer buy the place and pay the penalty. Everyone says I'm foolish.

"I buy the place, penalty and all, for 80,000 Lebanese pounds ($27,000) and six years later a bank offers me 2,000,000 pounds (800,000). I figure if it's worth that to the bank, it's worth it to me, so I say no to the bank and build this hotel.

"We have 150 apartments, all air-conditioned, all occupied. I'm building 250 more in the back.

He won't say what it'll be worth then, but $2,000,000 is a good guess and a long ways from a $27,000 investment.

Most of the beach here belongs to the public, but Fawzi has an old Turkish freehold lease, still good as gold, which sets the limit of his property three waves into the Mediterranean.

He's built two stone breakwaters and the sea has done the rest of the work at no cost to him, building up the beach and pushing the three waves farther and farther away.

"Fawzi," say the local wiseacres, "is going to build his beach clear to Cyprus."

Fawzi won't predict when it'll all end. Prices are already astronomical, but they may get even more so. The First National City Bank of New York, one of the world's biggest, has an office here on the third floor of a bulding because it can't afford the ground floor rents in its bulding which are higher than Wall Street rents.

"Seven, eight years ago I would have said we'd reached the top," says Fawzi. "Since then land has multiplied seven, eight times."

He has his own private dream of the way Beirut should develop.

The Middle East boils with oilmen executives, technicians, and office workers, mostly from Great Britain and the United States.

To persuade them to live in the steaming, miserable areas of Kuwait and Saudi Arabia, the oil companies must build them cinemas, theatres, churches, swimming pools, at vast expense. Even so, the boredom drives a man batty, women to the bottle.

"How much more sensible," says Fawzi, "if the oilmen settled their families in our lovely climate. The husband would work in the oilfields perhaps 21 days without a holiday, then come here to his family for nine days rest."

Beirut has 6,000 empty apartments owned by sheikhs, oilmen, businessmen from other more troubled lands like Syria, Jordan, Saudi Arabia, partly as vacation spots, but mostly as havens to flee to in case the lid blows off in their own countries.

Lebanon is a sea of stability in an area which practically invented instability.

"How did Lebanon get so lucky?" I asked.

"God was smiling," said Fawzi.

SHEILAH GRAHAM's World

Liz and Dick Africa-Bound?

HOLLYWOOD (NANA) — Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton were given the script of The Sands of Kalihara in person by Stanley Baker, a couple of days ago in their suite at the Regency in New York. Our man Stanley, a close friend of all the Burtons, flew into New York with Joe Levine from Rome. Joe produced Stanley's Zulu picture which has broken all records in England. Joe will also produce the Kalahari picture which starts filming in Africa the end of August. This will give Liz and Dick a chance for a short rest before they take a slow boat to the location. It looks pretty certain that they will sign for the film.

Dana Andrews is the latest star to sign for Otto Preminger's star-studded cast for In Harm's Way, to be made in Hollywood, San Francisco and Hawaii. This will be a reunion for them. Dana starred for Otto in Laura and Fallen Angel in the '40's.

Ginger Rogers, dining at the Pen and Pencil in New York, looked so youthful that some fans comparing her photograph on the wall, taken many years ago, said, "Those photos must have been taken when she was much older." How does Ginger do it? . . . Which reminds me, her long-ago dancing partner Fred Astaire turned 65 with a minimum of fuss, two weeks ago.

Caught The Thin Red Line in a projection room. The suspense in this bang-bang war film is unbearable, with two really good performances from Keir Dullea and Jack Warden. Also Ray Daley as Captain Stone who cannot bear to see his men butchered. This picture, made on a smallish budget from the James Jones novel, should do well.

It looks like another Oscar win for Anne Bancroft for her performance in The Pumpkin Eater. She made a good start at the Cannes film festival by winning the award as best actress.

One of first residents of Kiwanis Village for aged, Mrs. W. H. Steele, chats at village with Charles A. Swain of Cape May, N.J., president of Kiwanis International. 'People Responsible For Own Welfare'

The president of Kiwanis International came to Victoria yesterday with things to say about his concept of freedom.

In a speech to members of 30 Vancouver Island and lower mainland Kiwanis clubs at a banquet last night, Charles A. (Nick) Swain of Cape May, New Jersey, told Kiwanians to "stand firm against those elements which would destroy our (Canadian and United States common heritage of freedom."

RESPONSIBLE

"The preservation and enhancing of freedom calls for individual action," he said.

"People must be responsible for their own welfare," he added. In the advance text of his speech which he gave to a reporter, that sentence was underlined.

"We believe that the free enterprise economy has produced the kind of social and economic structure which we enjoy today . . .

DEDICATED CITIZENS

"Kiwanis believes that the entrance of government into any field of service which is now handled by voluntary service organizations will tend to hamper rather than enhance the already impressive record of the dedicated responsible citizens whose desire is to give of their time, talent and financial resources on a purely voluntary basis."

Mr. Swain toured projects of Victoria Kiwanis clubs yesterday — the Oak Bay pavilion, Hammersley Park, a playground, an orphanage which is helped by Kiwanians, the new Kiwanis home for "displaced girls" and the Kiwanis senior citizens' village.

PRIVATE GROUPS

In a press conference, he said services such as these should be performed through private organizations like the Kiwanis.

He said Kiwanis has in recent years begun expanding into countries -10 of them — other than Canada and the U.S., the two countries in which Kiwanis originated.

But Kiwanis is only going into "freedom-loving" countries, he said, and then only with "due safeguards" to make sure control of the organization remains in the "parent countries."

All foreign member clubs, he said, must subscribe to the Kiwanis constitution.

He said that member clubs are "autonomous" and therefore racial standards of admission would not prevent a southern U.S. club from being in Kiwanis.

Similarly, he volunteered, a recently formed Tokyo club accepts only members from the highest levels of society.

But northern U.S. and Canadian clubs included members of various races.

Mr. Swain said the organization would kick out a club if "it went Communist in nature" and "if it went against the whole philosophy of Kiwanis."

YOUTH WORK

He said the organization is fighting the recent United States Supreme Court decision barring prayer in government schools. That controversy, he said, was "started by a couple of atheists."

Mr. Swain says he is especially interested in the work Kiwanis does among youth.

Mr. Swain, whose organization includes 5,300 clubs and 250,000 people, arrived in Victoria yesterday and leaves for Edmonton today after a tour of Victoria and the Butchart Gardens.

700 Victorians Tour Four Stately Homes

Between 2 and 5 p.m. yesterday about 700 people took advantage of the Art Gallery women's committee tour of four stately Victoria homes.

Organized to raise funds for the Art Gallery, the tour embraced the best available in contemporary, traditional, antique and artistic design in homes.

With transport provided from the Art Gallery, visitors were able to see the contemporary residence of Dr. and Mrs. Gavin Chisholm at 3971 Smuggler's Cove Road.

Mr. and Mrs. Eric Wilson's home at 606 Inglewood provided a blend of contemporary and traditional styles.

An example of the artistic in traditional style was the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Nation, 1051 Beach Drive.

Antiques and some fine old English furniture were features of the former home of Princess Chikmatoff, 2831 Runnymede Avenue, now owned by Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Ellis.

School Fight Ends in Death

BEIRUT (AP)—Two children scuffling in a schoolyard of a village in the Lebanese mountains set off a fight between their families in which one woman was killed and 15 persons were injured. The families battled with shotguns, pistols and other weapons Thursday. Security forces arrested 50 persons.

Aphids?

FIGHT BACK! WITH ORTHO!
ISOTOX gets rid of aphids, beetles – 250 other tough insect enemies!
You don't have to take it another minute. This very weekend you can fight back and win against the most merciless enemies your garden knows: aphids that suck the life juice from tender young growth, beetles that tear and bite, bugs that gnaw and grind.
The weapon: ORTHO ISOTOX. The secret: a combination of four separate insecticides that battle and beat 250 different insect marauders. It's a concentrated liquid. So concentrated it costs less than 10¢ to make a full gallon diluted for spray.
It's as easy as watering and ISOTOX is compatible with most fungicides for combination control of insects and diseases.
Remember the name: ORTHO ISOTOX. You'll find it — today — at the place you always buy your garden supplies.

Architect of Downtowns

Cities Car-Clogged

By GENE OISHI

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP)—Victor Gruen is a Vienna-born architect who, having achieved monetary success. Has set himself a goal of reshaping the major cities of the United States to banish the automobile.

As Gruen sees it, the city is "a living organism which is dying from deadly foreign particles injected into its veins and arteries.'

The intruders?

"Automobiles — space-eating monsters from Detroit," he says.

"We considered a city more civilized when it moved its sewage from the middle of the streets to underground; when it removed cables and telephone lines from sight; and when it banished railroad trains from main street. But we still allow the automobile to clog our streets and sap the life from our cities."

Downtowns, he says, are fast becoming blighted areas inhabited only by workers who must waste time fighting traffic to get to their jobs. And the suburbs, from where they come, must move farther and farther out to escape the sprawl of commercial activity.

No true urban life is possible, Guren says, without an easily accessible, compact centre.

Urban Oases Urged As Pedestrian Islands

Such a centre is not possible, he says, when two-thirds of the downtown space is taken up by auto traffic and parking lots, which is the case in Los Angeles.

His plan for Fort Worth, Tex., commissioned by a Texas utility company and presented as a gift to the city, has never been translated into steel and concrete, but has been widely acclaimed, discussed and imitated.

"I hope it will never be realized," said a Gruen aide. "As it is, it's a classic. It has been included in architectural textbooks. If the plan were implemented, there would be compromises."

The plan calls for the transformation of the downtown core into a pedestrian island from which all motor travel would be banished. Space recovered from auto traffic and parking lots would be used for green areas, pedestrian malls, lined with trees and shrubbery, theatres, sidewalk cafes, kiosks and little shops.

"The talk about the desirability of the low density in urban areas is utter nonsense if we recall that the city's foremost function is to facilitate intimate human communication," Gruen says.

He formed his own firm in 1951. Today it has about $80,000,000 worth of construction in place. The firm has a staff of 200 architects, engineers and draftsmen at its main office in Beverly Hills, with 30 others scattered in New York, Chicago, Boston and Rochester.

"Some say there is no need for a city, a centre," Gruen says. "They say you can communicate in the future with television phones. You may be able eventually to talk to your girl friend by television, but you can't kiss her that way."

When traffic gets out of hand drastic—and costly—remedies have to be taken. Like this snaky, super viaduct in London. It's the new $15,000,000 viaduct being constructed to ease flow of traffic through London on to main highway to South Wales. Flyover, which twists and turns to avoid church spires and tall buildings, will be longest in Europe. — Fednews.

West Side Tryouts May 31

Tryouts for parts in the Vancouver International Festival production of West Side Story will be held at the Arts Club Theatre, 1181 Seymour Street in Vancouver, on Sunday, May 31.

Production is set for July 18 to 25 at the Queen Elizabeth Theatre with Marlys Watters as Maria and Don McKay as Tony.

Incidentally, non-Equity players will be auditioned at 1 p.m. next Sunday also at the Arts Club Theatre with choreographer and dance director Aida Broadbent among those judging the performers.

Divers Recover Teacher's Body

KAMLOOPS (CP)—Navy skin-divers Thursday recovered the body of a North Kamloops school teacher from the 140-foot-deep waters of Adams Lake, about 50 miles northeast of here. Jack Denny drowned while skin-diving in the lake Sunday. A companion said he apparently suffered a seizure.

JACK SMITH (and Wife) Remodel in Make-Believe

We Can Dream Can't We?

"You know what I'd like to do to the house this summer?" she said.

"No, I said. "What?"

I knew, of course. We go through this every spring. We remodel from roof to foundation, in our fancy. Nothing real ever happens.

"I'd like to cut out part of the wall between the living room and the kitchen. Open everything up. Make it airy."

"That's a good idea," I agreed. "Then you wouldn't miss anything while you were in the kitchen. You could watch TV all day. Develop your mind."

"At the same time," she went on, "we could put in new linoleum and cabinets. Do the whole kitchen over. With a new range."

"Yes," I agreed. "It's beginning to look a little seamy. You know wh[illegible]ke to do?"

"No, wha[illegible]

"I'd like t[illegible] hole in the wall between the living room and the patio and put in a big picture window, clear down to the floor. Then I could sit in the living room and look out the window at the patio."

"That would be nice," she agreed. "What are we going to do with the den, if Doug goes away to school?"

"First," I said, "I plan to put in an oak floor. Parquet. Those little squares. We can put those in ourselves. Nothing to it. I'd also like to cut out the wall between the den and the dining room and put in a fireplace."

"Fireplace! Isn't that kind of expensive?"

"No more than a new kitchen. Besides, what's a home without a hearth?"

"If you cut out the wall between the den and the dining room, for a fireplace, where will you put the dining room table?"

"In the living room," I explained, "in front of the new window. Then we could dine evenings by the window, looking out at the statue."

"The statue?"

"Yes, of course. The Venus, or whatever I decide on.

I might even build a whole fountain. All you need is some marble, a statue and a few water pipes. Water would come out of the top of the statue's head."

"Speaking of pipes," she said, "I'd like to put in a sprinkling system. It takes all my time just hauling the hose around."

"Yes," I agreed. I could probably have my fountain hooked up to the sprinkling system, so everything would be going all at once. It would look like the gardens of Versailles."

"What do you think," she said, "of knocking out the back wall of the master bedroom and adding a bathroom." We call it the master bedroom because it's where I sleep. Actually, it's only 10x12 ft.

"Wonderful!" I said. "We could put in a sunken tub and have a place for hot rocks."

"Hot rocks?"

"Yes, for a sauna. That's a Finnish bath. You pour cold water over the hot rocks, and it fills the place with steam. Best thing in the world for your sinuses."

"How do you get the rocks hot?"

"I don't know, offhand," I said, "but it shouldn't be too much trouble to heat up a few rocks. Certainly no more trouble than building a fireplace or piping a statue."

We may also put in a gazebo, down on the lower level.

World and His Wife Ignoring the Fair

NEW YORK (UPI) — What happened to all the people?

One month ago, before the turnstiles started to click, officials of the New York World's Fair had hopefully predicted at least 250,000 visitors a day—and up to 500,000 on special occasions.

To date, attendance has averaged only 150,000. Some restaurants are starving for business, concessionaires in the lake amusement area are waiting for people and Mike Todd, Jr., whose show America Be Seated took in only $300 in two days at the box office, gave up altogether. "The situation is terrible," he said and closed the show.

Questions... ...Answers

Q. We have a bathroom wall covered with plastic tile. I can remove the tile easily, but cannot seem to get off the hard cement under the tile. Can you give me any advice? I want to redo the whole wall.

A. Find out, if possible, what specific adhesive was used in installing the plastic tile and the solvent recommended by the manufacturer for that cement. Solvents vary according to the particular adhesive. If the necessary information is not available, you may try scouring it off with steel wool soaked with naphtha, or sanding off the cement with an electric sander. The latter would be easier.

Q. Our renters made water marks on a wood end table, due to the fact they kept a potted plant there. Can these marks be removed?

A. The marks may be difficult to remove if they are deeply ingrained in the wood. But try this method: Rub the marks with camphorated oil or turpentine, rubbing with the grain of the wood. Do the rubbing with a piece of felt. If necessary, add a little finely powdered rottenstone to the oil or turpentine.

Q. Our kitchen walls have a mass of cracks, large and small. The plaster is painted with an enamel. Is there any way these can be fixed, short of replastering?

A. There are several ways you can correct this trouble. You may apply a wall canvas, available at paint stores, which can then be painted, or use a vinyl wallpaper with a canvas or cloth backing. With each of these methods, the largest wall cracks should first be filled with patching plaster. Another possibility is to cover your walls with a prefinished hardboard.

Noted Architect Common Final Link

Historic Buildings Find Knowing Citizens

The Daily Colonist Historic Buildings Contest now has run its course, but it will be some time later this week before the winner of the $100 Canada savings bond can be announced.

Last week's four picture clues was a tough finish, but knowledgeable Victorians still did well. The connecting link in the buildings was that the architect in each case was the same man — Rattenbury. The buildings were the Bank of Montreal, Glenlyon School, Crystal Gardens, and the CPR marine terminal. Their stories are told below.

This week's winners of annual memberships in the Greater Victoria Historic Buildings Trust are John O'Reilly, 2615 Pleasant Street, and Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Reid, 2570 Beach Drive.

To those who remember his halcyon days at the turn of the century, the name of F. M. Rattenbury conjures up the outstanding architect of the day in Western Canada; to generations of Victoria youngsters it means a beach near his still lovely home.

Francis Mawson Rattenbury is the clue to this week's pictures, but there are few clues to understand the man who has been called genius by some.

Crystal Garden

Bank of Montreal

CPR Terminal

Born in Leeds in 1867, Mr. Rattenbury articled and was employed with the firm of Lockwood and Mawson. In 1892 he sailed to Canada attracted by the opportunities for his profession in the West. He settled in Vancouver and it was from there that he sent the winning plans in the world-wide competition for the B.C. Legislative Buildings.

In 1893, when only 25, he opened his office in the Five Sisters Block, Victoria, and in 1898 he was married to Miss Florence Eleanor Nunn, of Esquimalt.

Glenlyon School

Around this time he built his beautiful home in Oak Bay, known today as Glenlyon School. It was acquired by Mr. and Mrs. Ian Simpson at the time of Rattenbury's death in 1935.

Inside the house's heavy front door with its huge wrought iron hinges, is a modest hall. The fireplaces are all handsome, each in a different way, with original trivets intact. This was probably the library; oak panelled, oak floored and an ornate Tudor style carved oak fireplace, with a canopy, under which is inscribed in Gothic script, "East, West Hame's Best."

The former dining room, facing the sea, is the handsomest room. Beautiful plaster garlands decorate the entire ceiling, the floor is mahogany, the walls panelled. On the end wall is a beautiful marble fireplace.

French doors open onto a miniature marble terrace. The present drawing-room, also facing the sea, is believed to have been a music room, as it is acoustically perfect.

At the south end of the house, through sliding doors, in what was Mr. Rattenbury's office, simple plaster work decorates the ceiling; the green marble fireplace is oddly off centre. In the entrance hall is another fireplace, with a cupboard in the chimney.

The wall at this end of the house are rough-hewn stone two feet thick. The rest of the house is shingle, except for the Tudor stucco and timber facing on the sea front. The chimneys are brick faced with stone.

During his term of office of Reeve of Oak Bay, 1913, Mr. Rattenbury gave as a park, his foreshore property at Shoal Bay from Transit Road to where Beach Drive goes inland. Thanks to his generosity fifteen hundred feet of sea view and access to the beach were made available to the general public.

The Bank of Montreal building at Government and Bastion Streets was built in 1897. The Victoria Colonist of July 4, 1896, wrote: "New bank now in course of construction for Victoria . . . The design . . . combines a picturesque outlook with massive solidity, relieved by carved and moulded work; the Government Street facade being particularly impressive.

"The building is to be of stone . . . No wood is to be used in the construction of the interior, which is to be entirely fireproof with steel girders and concrete.

The ground floor had panelled walls and elaborately decorated coffered ceiling. The floors of all the corridors were laid with marble slabs.

While Mr. Rattenbury was the architect for the Crystal Garden, opened in June, 1925, it was Leonard James, his associate, who prepared all the plans. The structural engineering drawings were done by David Hardy of Vancouver; general construction by Luney Bros.; plumbing by Luney and W. R. Menzies; electrical by Smith, Robinson & Co. Ltd. and heating and ventilation by B. F. Sturtevant of Canada.

As the site of the building was on garbage fill, there was no rock to be found for a depth of 40 feet.

To solve this problem, a gigantic concrete raft was used as a foundation which has successfully carried the weight of 232,000 gallons of water, plus the weight of the building.

For nearly 30 years, salt water was drawn in from the Straits through an intake at the end of Douglas Street, with gratings to sift out impurities. Now the pool is filled with fresh water.

Wood from local fir was used on the dance floors at both ends, and steel girders were used underneath for support.

The CPR Marine Terminal Building and the Crystal Garden were the two main buildings built by Mr. Rattenbury after the First World War.

The CPR building was built in 1924. The tall pillars of cast stone, were cast on the site, in the basement in a warm and humid atmosphere so that the columns could cure. Natural stone was crushed and mixed with water, and faced on the column and other parts of the building.

Shades of the Yukon!

Shades of those who passed through Victoria on their way to the Yukon gold rush were raised at Victoria's Inner Harbor yesterday.

While delegates from the land of the sourdoughs looked on, the wife of Lieutenant-Governor Pearkes smashed bottles of pure Yukon River water over two new stern-wheeler craft with which a group of Victoria entrepreneurs hope to extract some nuggets from the mother lode of tourism.

CARRY TOURISTS

The occasion was the christening of the Yukon Queen and the Yukon Belle, two 46-foot diesel-powered stern-wheelers which, beginning June 1, will carry tourists through the Gorge from the Inner Harbor.

Among those on hand for the festivities were Gwen Carswell, Yukon Sourdough Queen, and Gordon Lee, president of the Yukon Sourdough Association.

NOW OF NAVY

Capt. William Bromley of Victoria, now of the navy and once a stern-wheeler skipper on the Yukon River was another of those present, as was Sir Henry Lintott, British High Commissioner to Canada.

"May your vessels have a long and successful future as they proudly display the colorful heritage of the Yukon country," telegraphed Gordon R. Cameron, commissioner of the Yukon Territory.

In another telegram Erik Neilsen, member of Parliament for the Yukon, recalled the days when Victoria was a transportation centre for goods and men on their way to the territory.

"We tried to re-create the atmosphere of the gold rush," said Russ Simpson, general manager of Yukon Queen Tours Limited, the firm which will operate the craft.

But it turns out the craft aren't completely traditional.

NEW DESIGN

Mr. Simpson said the operators of the boats, built specially for the company, were astonished at their speed at even half-throttle. He said the two boats feature a new hull design—and that stern-wheel craft with a similar design are being planned for certain purposes by the British navy.

He said arrangements have been made with interests in the Yukon, in which the firm's tins of steamboat smoke and paddle wheel foam will be sold in the Yukon, and in turn the Yukon will supply tins of Yukon coal and Alaska highway dust to be sold on the stern-wheelers.

Liberals Look For Democracy

OTTAWA (CP) — The hierarchy of the Liberal party will meet here June 1-3 to review the party structure with the aim of making it more democratic, it was announced Friday.

More than 235 delegates are expected to attend the meeting of the national council of the Liberal Federation of Canada at the Chateau Laurier Hotel.

Some Breeding Rules Same for Stock, Humans

CALGARY (CP) — Alberta Welfare Minister L. C. Halmrast, a sheep rancher and former agriculture minister, says he believes some of the principles applied to livestock breeding also apply to humans.

He made the comment in an interview Friday while attending the opening of a nursing home. He was asked for comment on the Alberta sexual sterilization act, in effect for 35 years, which permits a four-member eugenics board to order sterilization operations on mentally ill or mentally defective persons.

"As a livestock man," he said, "I would not use a sire which is physically deficient."

Mr. Halmrast said it is most important to make sure the number of mentally retarded persons is not increased.

Union Justified, Says Passmore

Chief's Appointment Fought

Hot Questions Asked in Fire Dispute

Passmore

By HARVEY SHEPHERD

A Saanich council member yesterday offered further support for the Saanich firefighters' union, which announced it will fight the appointment of a Victoria firefighter as Saanich fire chief.

Coun. Leslie Passmore, one of the original opponents of appointment of Joseph Sutherland, 52, now a firefighter first class with the Victoria department, last night said he believes the Saanich union is fully justified in trying to bring its arguments before council.

He released a list of 10 questions about the appointment which he said should be answered by council. The questions include, incidentally, several disclosures about events leading up to the May 4 appointment.

The appointment takes effect June 1. It was made in consultation with a Vancouver firm of personnel consultants.

The union's president and secretary, William Holmes and David McGregor, said yesterday they plan to take protest action early this week. They did not specify what action.

They said in a statement that it may be the seniority clause in the firefighters' contract applies to appointment of the chief, and even if it doesn't the seniority provision is sound and should be used as far as practicable.

They said they believe it would be impossible to locate outside the department a chief so superior as to make up for the damage to departmental morale and efficiency resulting from an outside appointment.

Here, substantially in Coun. Passmore's words, are his 10 questions:

- With over 50 applicants to choose from, why was an interview held with only one man?
- If a chief with experience was required, why was not the chief of the Kitimat Fire Department or the officer from the Winnipeg Fire Department interviewed, particularly as they both ranked high in the examination submitted by the experts?
- Why was there such unnecessary haste to appoint the Victoria fireman minutes after the private interview was held with him?
- Why was there no interview with the Victoria fire chief to obtain his opinion of the appointee?
- Why was there no interview with the officers who instructed the appointee, as to his ability?
- Why was no effort made to confirm or refute the appointee's statement that lack of seniority was the only reason he had been unable to obtain promotion to officer's rank in the Victoria department?
- Why was the brief submitted by the entire Saanich fire department personnel not read at the council meeting?
- Why was not Saanich chief Joseph Law requested to help advise on the appointment of a new chief?
- In view of the council's admission that it is impossible to determine whether or not the appointee will be capable of being chief without six months' trial, why was the same consideration not given to a member of the efficient Saanich Fire Department?
- Is the same treatment that was accorded to Saanich Fire Department to be perpetuated in other departments when senior officials leave and replacements are required?

Coun. Passmore said in his years on council he has never before seen just one applicant personally interviewed before an appointment. He said employees of other municipal departments will want to know what their future chances for promotion will be.

Reeve Stanley Murphy has said the probationary nature of Mr. Sutherland's appointment is normal.

The union submitted a brief to council May 1 and yesterday's statement said the union does not feel it was given fair consideration before the appointment was made.

The union said it has no criticism of Mr. Sutherland.

Mr. Sutherland has been with the city department 18 years.

Royal Rite Seen by 2,000

Joy for Everybody

There was something for everybody at the Feu de Joie on the parade square at Work Point Barracks yesterday.

The sights, sounds and even the smells of a colorful rifle drill provided deep interest for a bundled-up crowd of more than 2,000 guests of the First Battalion of the Queen's Own Rifles of Canada.

The ceremony of the Feu de Joie, wherein the 200 assembled troops fire off their rifles consecutively during a Royal Salute, of course was the main attraction. But there was so much more to be seen.

There was His Honor, the Lieut.-Governor of British Columbia, G. R. Pearkes, VC, a distinguished Canadian soldier, reviewing the troops and returning their salute on the march-past.

Officers in their dress uniforms, including the battalion's commanding officer, Lt.-Col. H. C. F. Elliot, and Maj.-Gen. J. M. Rockingham, commanding officer Western Command, provided further color.

Other services were represented. Rear-Admiral W. M. Landymore, Flag Officer Pacific Coast and Air Commodore R. C. Weston, senior air officer, Pacific Command were among high-ranking officers present.

The British High Commissioner to Canada, Sir Henry Lintott and Lady Lintott also were among interested spectators.

But few were watching with more interest than the wives and families of those out on the parade square. They knew just how much the heads of their families had put into this colorful performance.

CURRENT TOPICS

Two current national topics were well represented. The Red Ensign and the Union Jack were raised and lowered alternately during several parts of the General Salute. Then the term Feu de Joie (which got various pronunciations) had to be interpreted for those who don't have a smattering of French.

The bugle band was startlingly excellent. It almost overshadowed the rest of the drill with a series of selections that ranged from May Blossom, through Keel Row to Waltzing Matilda.

SHARP ODOR

After the volleys were fired, the sharp odor of spent gunpowder drifted across the crowd and was gone within seconds, pushed along by a knife-like wind off Juan de Fuca Strait.

The new bar in the Sergeants' Mess was well and truly opened following the ceremony and the battalion, later in the evening, held a retreat ceremony at sunset.

All in all a full day for the QOR.

Car Strikes Police Wagon

Kathleen O'Hara, 210 Government, suffered a bloody nose when the car in which she was riding struck the rear of a police wagon at Douglas and Fort shortly before 11 p.m. yesterday.

Driver of the police vehicle was Harry Hoshal, who immediately radioed for a traffic car to investigate the accident.

QOR Cadets In Ceremony

The sunset ceremony will be carried out Tuesday on the lawn of the legislative buildings by the Queen's Own Rifles of Canada cadet corps.

B.C. Historians To Hear Symons

Maritime Museum curator Col. J. W. D. Symons, will discuss the preservation of Canada's maritime heritage, at the May meeting of the B.C. Historical Association in the Douglas Building cafeteria, at 8:15 p.m. Thursday.

Small Turnout

Citizens Pass School Vote

About 20 per cent of the eligible voters turned out in Greater Victoria yesterday as two school referendums representing a total outlay of about $6,900,000 went through by a big margin.

Referendum 6, which calls for the spending of $6,737,354 for 172 new classrooms in the next three years, sailed to victory by 9,469 to 2,100. The margin was 82 per cent where only 60 per cent was needed.

Referendum 7, which sets aside $158,379 as part of the price to buy the University of Victoria's Paul building as a school board centre, won by 9,300 to 2,289. The margin was 80 per cent.

Voting was heaviest in Esquimalt, where 46 per cent of eligible voters also turned out to reject a municipal swimming pool project by a 3-2 edge.

CITY VOTE LIGHT

In Oak Bay, where 27 per cent of eligible voters went to the polls, about 74 per cent voted in favor of both referendums. Oak Bay also filled a vacant seat on council.

In Saanich the vote was about 88 per cent in favor of the school plans.

Voting was especially light in Victoria, where only 2,108 turned out to support referendum 6 and 2,133 supported referendum 7, a margin of about 81 per cent. Only 14.25 per cent of eligible voters cast their ballots.

GOUGH DELIGHTED

Referendum 6 calls for the construction of 172 classrooms, plus rooms for the retarded, sites and equipment.

School Superintendent John Gough said he was delighted a majority of voters had supported the efforts of the school board.

"This represents a vote of confidence on the part of the public for the school board and education officials," said Mr. Gough. "It is a fitting climax to the planning of the last eight months."

He said the school board intends to start immediately on the construction of projects which have highest priority.

TOO CRAMPED

He said he was also pleased with the prospect of moving the school board offices out of Craigdarroch Castle and into the more spacious Paul Building.

"Our staff of 55 is far too cramped in the castle to work at maximum efficiency."

Mrs. Frances Thompson, school board chairman, said she didn't want to comment on the light vote.

'GRATEFUL'

"I'm just grateful it turned out the way it did," she said. "I think it's wonderful that both referendums have gone through."

She said the board will meet with the architects next week in order to begin construction of the first of the classrooms without delay.

Congregation Tomorrow

University of Victoria graduates will receive their diplomas at the Congregation Ceremony Monday at 2:30 p.m. on the Gordon Head campus.

At 11:30 a.m. the same day, there will be a graduation luncheon in the Student Union Building.

Song Festival

Annual singing festival of the Victoria Welsh Society will be held at 2 p.m. and 6 p.m. today at Marigold United Church. Mrs. Ann Thomas of California will conduct.

Reeve Disappointed

Swim Pool Rejected In Esquimalt Vote

Esquimalt ratepayers yesterday turned down a referendum to build a $383,000 swimming pool in the municipality.

Returning officer J. W. Allan said only 733 people, or 40.5 per cent of those who voted, were in favor of the pool, and 1,077 were against it. The vote represented only 46.61 per cent of those eligible.

A 60 per cent majority was needed for passage.

Reeve A. C. Wurtele said he was disappointed in the result.

TIED IN WITH CENTRE

"I had hoped it would go over well," he told the Colonist last night. "It would have tied in very well with the sports centre, and although it would have cost us a bit, the price wouldn't have been too bad."

Acceptance of the pool would have entailed borrowing $277,500 over the next 20 years with the balance of the $383,000 total coming from the municipal development loan fund and the winter works program.

Pool facilities would have included a wading and diving tank as well as a 25-metre swimming pool—each a separate unit.

Oak Bay

Absent Veteran Elected

Fred Hawes was out of town last night when Oak Bay electors voted him back onto the council after an absence of two years.

In a straight fight, Mr. Hawes defeated retired naval officer and teacher at Glenlyn Preparatory School, Eric Makovski, 1,431 votes to 844.

EIGHT YEARS

Former councillor Hawes served a total of eight years in his previous council run, retiring for business reasons in December, 1962. At the time of his retirement from council he was chairman of the finance committee.

As results of the byelection—occasioned by the retirement of Coun. Fred Robinson—were announced last night, Mr. Hawes was in Vancouver on business.

WELCOMED

"We're delighted to have him back on council," commented Reeve Allan Cox. "I guess he'll hear about his victory on the radio."

Mr. Hawes, who lives at [illegible] Falkland, is manager of Shawnigan Floor Coverings.

Only 27 per cent of the eligible voters turned out.

Contributing Brings Jail

PORT ALBERNI — Three young men were given jail terms for contributing to juvenile delinquency.

Raymond Roscoe Meyers, about 20, and John Richard Brown, 21, drew three months each for supplying beer to young girls.

Ronald Dale Keenders was given six months for possessing stolen property and contributing to juvenile delinquency.

In Saanich Council

Garbage Dump to Be Aired

The Hartland Road garbage dump is going to get a thorough airing—in Saanich council.

Saanich Reeve Stanley Murphy said last night the health and welfare committee of council will likely consider together a further report on the dump from Greater Victoria metropolitan health officer Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread and representations from the Prospect Lake and District Community Association.

"I think it will be useful to air it thoroughly," the reeve said. The pun was unintentional.

The community association says that, among a number of other noxious things, the dump is adding to pollution of the watershed which includes Prospect Lake. Dr. Whitbread says it isn't.

The association recently hired a Victoria engineering firm and a Vancouver laboratory to investigate its claim, and said the firms' findings bore out the claim.

Dr. Whitbread recently said the association had "misinterpreted" the firms' findings. The association says the findings speak for themselves.

PERSONAL MENTION

His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. George R. MISS HELEN EVERS

Convention At Empress

When the 36th annual convention of the British Columbia Provincial Chapter of the PEO Sisterhood convenes in the Empress Hotel next Friday and Saturday, there will be delegates present from mainland centres as well as other places on Vancouver Island.

Provincial president Mrs. D. B. Turner, Victoria, will preside at the sessions. Special guest of honor will be Miss Helen Evers of Winfield, Kan., corresponding secretary of the Supreme Chapter.

The PEO Sisterhood is an international organization with a membership of more than 145,000 women in 3,900 chapters, with 45 of them in B.C.

Its purposes are educational and charitable, especially in providing increased opportunities in higher education for women. This has been accomplished through a loan fund, a junior college and scholarships for foreign students. Charitable activities are diversified, as they are chosen by provincial and local chapters.

The Sisterhood supports Cotey College at Nevada, Mo., that houses 350 students. It also maintains an international peace scholarship program so that selected women from other countries are provided with scholarships for graduate studies in North American universities.

Registration for the convention here on Friday morning in the Georgian Lounge at the Empress Hotel will be followed by a memorial hour at 1:30 p.m. in the Church of Our Lord.

A banquet and evening sessions commence at 6:15 p.m. and a reception for Miss Evers will follow. Business sessions on Saturday will be divided by a luncheon and the convention closes late that afternoon.

Rogers-Diment

Bride Carries Roses

Pink and white phlox and carnations decorated St. Paul's Naval and Garrison Church last evening for the marriage of Judith Marilyn Diment and Mr. Robert Alexander Rogers.

Rev. J. A. Roberts officiated at the wedding ceremony for the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Diment, 4317 Houlihan Place, and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Alec Rogers, 5419 Fowler Road.

Give in marriage by her father, the bride chose a floor-length gown of nylon organza over taffeta styled with sweetheart neckline and lily-point sleeves. Sparkling paillettes and seed pearls enhanced the bodice and full skirt which was controlled with a bustle. For "something old" she wore her grandmother's ring, and her four-tiered veil of scalloped illusion net was held in place by a double lace crown trimmed with seed pearls and crystal droplets. She carried a cascade of pale pink Rapture roses and lily of the valley.

Mrs. Derek Chambers, as her sister's matron of honor, and the Misses Lynda Smith and Pat McMurchy, bridesmaids, were gowned alike in peacock blue peau de soie. Their gowns were styled with belled skirts and matching blue and white embroidered jackets with sabrina necklines and elbow-length sleeves. Junior bridesmaid, Miss Nadine Rogers, groom's sister, wore a short-sleeve bouffant skirted dress of peacock blue and white embroidered peau de soie. They all wore nylon illusion net whimsies en tone and carried cascades of white carnations.

Mr. Richard Blake was best man. Mr. Kerry Greenwood, Mr. Edwin Tomlin and Mr. Alan Tattrie were ushers.

Mr. Richard Diment proposed the toast to his niece at a reception which followed.

Following a honeymoon in the B.C. Interior Mr. and Mrs. Rogers will make their home at 1410 Fort Street.

For travelling, the bride changed to a pink and tan silk print frock and pink wool coat. She wore a pink hat and tan accessories.

Lynn Jeannette Ramsay, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Ramsay, 2034 Byron Street, became the bride of Mr. Peter John Dean, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Dean, 102W Maddock, at a pretty wedding last evening in St. Mary's Church, Oak Bay. Rev. C. D. Blencoe performed the ceremony.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was in a floor-length gown of soft nylon tulle over taffeta styled with lily-point sleeves and scooped neckline. Sprays of embroidered orange blossoms enhanced the bodice and full skirt which rippled into a soft train from a fabric bow. Her short-length bouffant veil misted from a cluster of white flowers, and she carried a bouquet of lily of the valley and pink roses.

Miss Laurel Page, maid of honor, wore a ballerina-length gown of pink nylon chiffon over taffeta and a matching pillbox headpiece. She carried lily of the valley and pink carnations.

Mr. William Kirby was best man. Mr. Robert Dean, Mr. Keith Ramsay and Mr. Russell Dean were ushers.

Mr. Jim Page proposed the toast to the bride at a reception in Elks Home. Three-tiered cake, flanked by spring flowers and rosebuds, decorated the bride's table for the sit-down supper which was followed by dancing.

For a honeymoon trip to Washington State the bride chose a blue Italian-knit suit and matching coat. Her accessories were white.

On their return the newlyweds will make their home at Garden Park Court. Mr. and Mrs. T. Leslie of Burnaby were among the guests at the wedding.

MRS. R. J. PIPES

Near Top

Mrs. R. J. Pipes, of the Victoria Toastmistress Club, placed second in the inter-council speech contest held at the 17th annual regional conference and speech contest banquet in Portland, Ore., last weekend.

The winner, Mrs. C. Rollis, the State of Washington entry, now goes to the international speech contest at Denver, in July.

Mrs. Pipes' subject, given to her only 24 hours ahead, was "Prison or Castle". She developed it on the subject of "Time, make use of it".

The theme for the banquet, "Your Diamonds on Display", was effectively carried out in the decorations, table motifs and programs.

Representing Vancouver Island Toastmistress Clubs at the weekend gathering were Mrs. Pipes, Mrs. J. J. Wiart and Mrs. K. Bains, Victoria Club; Mrs. S. J. Westheim, Nanaimo; Mrs. K. V. Lopatecki, Chemainus; Mrs. S. McCulloch and Mrs. E. R. Ashbridge, Arbutus Club, Victoria, and Mrs. S. McInnes, Alberni, Council No. 10 chairman.

Officers Installed

Mrs. E. T. Lea was installed by Mr. George Gray as president of the Quita Nichol Auxiliary to Goodwill Enterprises.

Other officers installed were Mrs. C. R. Oxtoby, first vice-president; Mrs. J. S. MacKay, second vice-president; Mrs. L. P. Lawlor, treasurer; Mrs. H. S. Cox, recording secretary; Mrs. H. L. Talbot, corresponding secretary.

One Third Women

GENEVA, (UPI)—Women now make up one-third of the world's working force, the international labor organization (ILO) said today.

The ILO said 27 out of every 100 women in the world are economically active.

Lions' Wives To Be Feted

Special program of events has been planned for the wives of members attending the four-day Lions International District Convention in Victoria, starting Wednesday of this week.

There will be a tea for wives and district officers on Wednesday afternoon in Uplands Golf Club and a garden reception and tea on Thursday afternoon at Government House.

A luncheon will be held Friday at Union Centre, followed by a panel discussion on the year's activities.

The wives will also join their husband's for a night in Chinatown on Wednesday; Victoria Night at the Curling Rink on Thursday; a Circus Hoedown Friday evening at the Curling Rink and the governor's ball in the Empress Hotel on Saturday evening.

Local committee in charge of the women's program includes Mrs. E. H. Emery, Mrs. O. Elliott, Mrs. J. Tang and Mrs. D. McLeod.

Mrs. Hopley Heads Daughters

Mrs. A. Hopley was elected president of Daughters of St. George No. 238. Mrs. F. Dicker, supreme past president of Alameda, Calif., was special guest at the election meeting.

Other officers named were Mrs. M. Marsh, vice-president; Mrs. M. Wright, financial secretary; Mrs. I. Watson, recording secretary; Mrs. D. Peck, treasurer; Mrs. J. Stevenson and Mrs. J. Harper, inside and outside guards; Mrs. L. Cuthbert, chaplain; Mrs. W. Bentham and Mrs. E. Cowden, first and second conductors; Mrs. E. Buckingham, pianist; Mrs. M. Rodger, trustee; Miss H. Currie, drill captain.

Mrs. G. Priddle is junior past president.

Canadians in the Orient

Ten-day visit to Hong Kong during Far East training cruise enabled sailors of the destroyer escorts Fraser and Mackenzie to see a great deal of the Crown Colony. Pictured here at the famous Tiger Balm Garden of Hong Kong are, left to right, AB Leslie Staples and LS Cecil Dacre, both of Victoria. The two destroyer escorts of the Second Canadian Escort Squadron returned to home port at Esquimalt early this month.

Cmdr. A. Kilpatrick of Victoria and Ottawa, commanding officer of HMCS Qu'Appelle, welcomes Mr. R. J. Thomas, British Consul, on board during the ship's recent visit to San Juan, Puerto Rico. The destroyer escort was en route from Halifax, N.S., to Esquimalt to join other units of the Royal Canadian Navy's Pacific Command.

AB Lyle Snedden of Victoria shows how pies are removed from the oven in one quick operation to Puerto Rican boys during HMCS Qu'Appelle's visit to San Juan.

Whenever Canadian warships are in foreign ports they usually hold an "open house" for Canadians working and living in the area. LS Jim Shields of Victoria talks about his ship, HMCS Mackenzie, to Mr. and Mrs. D. R. Overton and family, formerly of Victoria and Ottawa. Mr. Overton is with the Canadian Immigration in Hong Kong.

Arranged by Trudy Kemp, Social Department — National Defence Photos

At the "open house" for Canadians another Victoria man, PO Donald Joran, serving in HMCS Mackenzie, entertains Mr. and Mrs. H. Colas and family, residents of Hong Kong since 1961. On the right is Mr. J. C. Tucker. Mr. Colas and Mr. Tucker are with the Aluminum Company of Canada.

AB Murray Foreman of Victoria talks to a local inhabitant who boarded HMCS Fraser during the ship's visit to Hong Kong. The Fraser spent 10 days in the Crown Colony in the course of a four-month training cruise to the Far East, along with sister destroyer escort HMCS Mackenzie.

Finest of sweaters at Wilson's . . .

Having had occasion to observe the offerings of a goodly number of stores in Eastern Canada, it has long been our opinion that the biggest and best selection of sweaters to be found in this country is right here in Victoria . . . and narrowing it down even further . . . at W & J Wilson's in Victoria . . . Their Braemars and Pringles and Ballantynes . . . in the softest of cashmere . . . are the Rolls Royces of sweaters . . . but let's not disdain the lesser wools, either! Wilson's got some new lambswools in last week which could have fooled us any time . . . They're from Hogg of Hawick, Scotland . . . firmly knitted, soft as cashmere . . . A cardigan style sans buttons . . . ¾-length sleeves . . . a passementerie design on front . . . comes in honey, Bermuda blue, shell pink . . . Wonderful over a light summer dress . . . Then there are brass-buttoned cardigans in grey, gold, saxe blue and teal . . . which you can match up with identically colored knit wool skirts . . . Makes a smart outfit belying its small price tag ($21.50 for the sweater, $25 the skirt) . . . Another honey of a sweater is only $13.95 . . . comes in white, Bermuda blue, cardinal red and honey color . . . And for $18.50 you can have an attractive almond green or Bermuda blue sweater with wide collar and pearl nacre buttons . . . W & J Wilson Limited, 1221 Government St EV 3-7177.

Look for lots of ruffles on fluttery black evening dresses . . . shamelessly pretty!

A-travelling we will go . . .

We've always maintained that half the enjoyment of any trip or holiday jaunt is having the right clothes . . . and this means the sort of things that pack well . . . come out of suitcases looking as fresh and unwrinkled as when they went in . . . take naturally to planes and trains and buses and all-day sightseeing expeditions with nary the need for an iron . . . let alone a trip to the cleaners! . . . Well, these are exactly the kind of dresses we found at Mary Constance this week . . . washable, drip-dry, non-crushable seersuckers, Arnel and tab-knit jerseys, Fortrels and wonderful cottons that look and feel like the finest silk . . . You could easily assemble your entire travel wardrobe from this one collection . . . Everything from simple, impeccably smart striped seersucker jacket dresses and tailored shirtwaist styles for day-long wear . . . to incredibly pretty prints in soft, darkish shades for when the sun sinks low and you're feeling feminine . . . We admired a charming Dacron cotton sleeveless sheath with an all-over tea-rose design . . . and a love of a summer evening frock in cotton and nylon . . . paint-brush print in blue, green and white . . . a blue banded deep-dip back . . . Sizes from 7 to 20, as well as half sizes . . . Mary Constance, 784 Fort St., EV 3-4832.

Beige foundation garments are new for summer wear . . . No sharp color line against the body under thin summer fabrics.

Oh, them golden slippers . . .

Well, maybe not golden . . . though you can have those too . . . But for sheer comfort . . . superb fit and elegant styling . . . you simply can't beat the beautiful D'Antonelli shoes at Munday's . . . And we speak with feeling because we've been devoted to D'Antonellis for years . . . having first encountered them in the East . . . Munday's have their summer shipment in now . . . in a range of styles and colors that's positively awe-inspiring . . . White is very much to the forefront at the moment . . . There are styles in kid and calf and patent . . . for dress-up and more casual wear . . . Many of them are elasticized around the instep for snug fit, and all have an artfully cushioned insole that's not only comfortable to walk on, but prevents the foot from slipping forward in the shoe . . . We especially like the patent or calf pumps with slashed sides . . . very cool looking and elegant . . . in white as well as colors . . . A new shade called summer nude is sort of bronzy, and looks delicious with summer frocks . . . Some of the shoes are shaded, or "antiqued" . . . There are fine grained reptiles which resist scuffing . . . as does the bone calf with patent tip . . . Most of these beautiful D'Antonelli shoes are priced at $19.95 at . . . Munday's, 1203 Douglas St., EV 3-2211.

Maillot swim suits have that smart, uncluttered look. Some have little sleeves—others are turtle-necked.

Gay fabrics for summer wardrobes . . .

We're told . . . by one of our friends who sews like an angel . . . that dresses and other summer things have never been easier to make than they are right now . . . due largely to the simplicity of the current styles . . . the constant improvements in making patterns fool-proof . . . and also, we suspect, the variety and small cost of the new fabrics which make even an uninitiate like us itch to create something for ourselves! . . . If you sew . . . or would like to sew . . . the place to visit is Saba Bros. fabric floor . . . You'll find materials there that will capture your imagination and give you ideas for all sorts of delightful summer clothes . . . And of course you can select your patterns and get everything else you need in the way of buttons, trimmings and accessories at the same time . . . We were looking at some very nice sailcloth the other day . . . striped in several harmonizing colors . . . with a plain co-ordinated color to team up . . . In this we especially like the deep lilac combination, and the lively gold shade . . . Only $1.69 a yard for this . . . There are plain and printed homespuns in truly lovely shades . . . Horrockses broadcloth that feels like silk . . . Polished cottons, Swiss embroideries, cotton crepes . . . Every kind of material to create a really exclusive custom-made summer wardrobe . . . Saba Bros Limited, 1120 Douglas St., EV 4-0561.

The newest eye make-up is the Kangaroo eye, reports Vogue. Round, melting, with lashes curled down instead of up.

It's fun time at Arthur Murray's . . .

Big doings at the Arthur Murray Dance Studio between now and June 20 . . . Students are literally . . . as well as figuratively . . . "having a ball" . . . It's called the Golden Festival . . . a period in which there are all sorts of parties, outings, opportunities for prize-winnings . . . and fun events in general . . . We can't go into details here, but Murray's will gladly tell you all about it . . . What we do want to say is that at the Arthur Murray Studio you not only learn to dance superlatively well . . . but have a rattling good time in the process . . . And another thing about the school here in Victoria: It's wholly owned and operated by a charming Victoria girl, Gisele Van . . . She and her staff are Murray-trained and teach the Murray method . . . of which there is nothing better . . . but their policies are absolutely their own, and are not dictated by any other organization . . . In other words, there's no parent company calling the tune . . . Activities and methods are geared to suit the tastes and circumstances of our own people . . . So why not decide to try a few dancing lessons yourself? Dancing's not only loads of fun at Arthur Murray's, but it's relaxing, stimulating and conducive to good fellowship . . . You can have your lessons at your own convenience . . . any time between noon and 10 p.m. any day except Sunday . . . Call them why don't you? . . . Arthur Murray School of Dancing, 715 Yates St., EV 5-1476.

You'll likely be seeing beauty patches on many a pretty back this summer . . . on beaches and at dances.

Hats make all the difference . . .

We've been noticing something on our trips downtown lately . . . more women wearing hats! . . . Could this be a trend? If so, it augurs well for our coming-of-age as a city of smartly turned-out women . . . Because there's no two ways about it . . . the gal with the becoming chapeau is the one who gets the admiring glances (we've even been known to turn around for a second look!) . . . And what's more, there's something about a hat that makes a woman feel more feminine . . . not to mention better dressed . . . Which brings us to the subject of Miss Frith's, and their huge collection of outrageously flattering head gear . . . We venture to say there isn't another shop in town that has so many hats to choose from . . . Everything from froths of flowers and tulle and veiling . . . and airy, lacy cartwheels, for summer weddings and garden parties and luncheon in one of our town's smart spots, or the home of friends . . . to chicly tailored little numbers to wear with summer cottons and give your outfit that final fillip . . . as well as keeping the sun from making hay of your crowning glory! . . . And if you've a trip in the offing, remember you'll need at least one crushable travel hat that you can tuck into a suitcase . . . Now's the time to see them at . . . Miss Frith Millinery & Fashions, 1617 Douglas St., EV 3-4912.

Pure yellow lipstick is expected to hit the market soon, worn under, or over regular lipstick to preserve or accentuate the color under summer sun.

A sterling opportunity . . .

Perhaps you didn't inherit a silver tea service . . . or have one given to you for wedding or anniversary . . . but have been promising yourself (or your wife) that some day . . . Well, that day is here right now . . . a once-in-a-blue-moon opportunity to acquire a Birks' sterling silver tea or coffee set at very substantial savings . . . a 20% discount in fact, now and through the rest of May . . . All of Birks sterling teaware . . . crafted by their own silversmiths . . . is being sold at this special discount . . . Tea and coffee pots, sugars and creams, waste bowls, hot water jugs . . . in all 12 Birks exclusive designs . . . including the very newest one named Modern Classic . . . (and a real beauty it is, exemplifying the acme in modern simplicity) . . . You may buy three or four-piece sets . . . or individual pieces to add to your present set . . . or perhaps to start you off on a set you want to build gradually . . . (Sterling trays are available at this same price reduction too) . . . Anyway it's an opportunity not to be missed to acquire a very important adjunct of gracious living . . . Sterling teaware you'll be proud to own, and to pass on to your children . . . Birks Jewellers, 706 Yates St., EV 2-4241.

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: I am going with an interesting man who happens to be very good-looking. Something about his looks bothers me and I'd like your advice.

Everett has very bushy eyebrows. They come together, instead of separating, as most people's eyebrows do. This gives him a fierce look.

Several weeks ago I hinted that I'd like to tweeze that little space in the middle so he would look as if he had two eyebrows instead of one. He laughed and said, "Men don't tweeze their eyebrows. I'd feel like a sissy."

Honestly, Ann, Everett would look so much better if he'd let me yank out about 12 hairs. Please tell me how to go about getting him to see it my way.—READY FOR THE PULL.

Dear Ready: You lost when you used the word tweezers. Most men think of tweezers as something for the girls.

I agree that two eyebrows are better than one, and that something should be done. But you'd better stay out of the act.

Urge Everett to ask his barber if he will snip a few of the wild hairs with a specially designed scissors. Many men have this done regularly. Eventually, the barber will get to the centre of the problem.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm a 15-year-old girl with a story to tell.

Last Saturday I was invited to the home of a girl who moved here recently from Worcester, Mass. Her mother asked me to stay through dinner and I accepted.

I noticed that this girl and her mother treated each other like friends instead of relatives. I felt embarrassed when I heard her talk so politely to her mother because I remembered how I talked to mine.

When the girl's mother got up from the dinner table to fill the milk glasses, she said, "Sit still, Mom. I'll do it." I then remembered how my mother had to tell me three times to fill the water glasses before she got any action.

I started on my new plan as soon as I got home. The first thing I did was to straighten my closet and clean my bookcase.

The next day I got up earlier than usual and did all the things I was supposed to do. I spoke very politely to mom and noticed that in return she was especially nice to me. And it's been that way ever since.

Life is so much more pleasant when people get along together. It's just a matter of respecting one another. I know now that mothers don't enjoy yelling at kids any more than kids enjoy being yelled at. They want to have peace in the family, but their kids have to meet them half way. —GLAD I LEARNED.

Dear Glad: A voice from the ranks. Hooray and thanks.

Dear Ann Landers: The neighbor boy was over here playing in our recreation room when he should have been at home in bed. I noticed his face was very red. When I felt his forehead and discovered it was burning up I sent him home and telephoned his mother.

The neighbor boy was back in school after five days but our son caught his flu bug and we had to take him to the hospital. The bill was $160.

Do you feel we should send the bill to the neighbors? —FURIOUS.

Dear Furious: Please don't make jackasses of yourselves. Kids who play together catch things from one another. This comes under the heading of "Hazards of Growing Up." Could be that next week the neighbor boy will catch something from your child.

Pensioners Luncheon Nets $240

The sum of $240 was realized at a successful luncheon for pensioners and friends. Mrs. E. Cownden was general convener and was assisted by the auxiliary of the Old Age Pensioners Association No. 1.

Purpose of the luncheon was to aid the building fund for the hall on Government Street.

Mr. R. H. French, president, gave the vote of thanks. Mrs. G. Sherwood, first vice-president, was at the door. Mrs. E. Hawkins was pianist.

Auxiliary members assisting were Mrs. H. Inman, Mrs. R. McLeod, Mrs. E. Hamilton-Grundy, Mrs. F. R. Sims, Mrs. A. Campbell, Mrs. R. Vermiere, Mrs. M. Jones, Mrs. B. Johnson, Mrs. E. Dobbie, Mrs. V. E. Warren, Mrs. S. Westwater, Mrs. H. F. Ryall, and Mrs. L. Cuthbert.

In charge of carving turkeys and hams were Mr. C. White, Mr. H. Inman, Mr. A. Cownden and Mr. S. Westwater.

Mr. Vermiere and Mr. Andy Campbell were in charge of tea and coffee.

Spanish Fashions

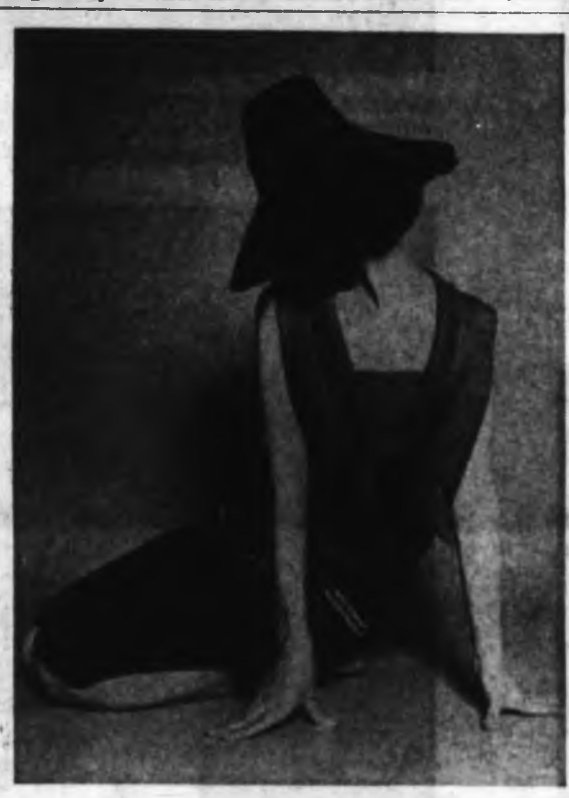
Cotton Favored

Spain is a fashion hotbed these days, and the collections of its alta costura are each season watched with interest by the international fashion world. Indeed, the acknowledged "Master" of the Paris Haute Couture is himself a Spaniard — the aloof and mysterious Balenciaga, who, speculation has it, may make one of his rare public appearances, at the opening of Spain's pavilion at the New York World's Fair, where Spanish fashions will be presented.

The spring-summer collections have now been presented by los grandes of fashion in Barcelona and Madrid, showing a suavity of line, many floral motifs, luminous colors and exciting cottons, the most practical fabric for all kinds of summer clothing.

Pedro Rodriquez shares the Paris and Florence enthusiasm for cotton lace, pique and organdy. Santa Eulalia adds printed cotton poplins and ottomans to the range, while the dynamic Asuncion Bastida leans to pique and organdy as well as ottoman. The young designers Herrera and Ollero draw inspiration from a man's garment called sherwani, worn in India and Pakistan, with a blouse which falls to ⅝ or ⅞ length. Cotton ottoman, striped or printed in lively colors, is a pet of theirs, and of Elio Berhanyer, too, whose collection is peppered with enormous hats trimmed with white cotton organdy.

A distinction of the collection of Vargas Y Ochagavia in Madrid is its originality within a framework of maximum classicism. They use cotton tulle and lace in a marvellous bridal gown, and lots of lace, pique and organdy throughout. Lino and Marbel Junior both favor printed cottons.



For beachwear Pierre Cardin's avant-garde ensemble inspired by Peru. Middy with kerchief neckline in bayadere-striped viscose staple toile plays both solid and stripes. Solid red to the waist and then stripes in red, white and black. Middy is worn over knee-length tight black pants. Hat in black lacquered rice-straw trimmed in matching middy viscose staple toile.—(Photo courtesy of Courtaulds (Canada) Limited)

Leadership Needed Indian Agent Says

"Obvious leadership is the greatest need of the Indians to bring about progress," said Mr. R. G. Sampson, superintendent of the Cowichan Indian Agency, who was guest speaker at a meeting of the B.C. Indian Arts and Welfare Society.

Referring to services provided to Indians by the Indian Affairs Branch, Mr. Sampson stated that leadership-training workshops had been held for the department's senior staff and then, for Indian leaders. These workshops were followed by a joint meeting which brought about a better understanding between the two groups.

"Today," continued Mr. Sampson, "110 Indians are teaching in Indian schools across Canada." An employment officer in the department is working full time seeking employment for the Indian people. Working closely with the Unemployment Insurance Commission, he is finding the people to fit the job and through in-service training is developing diligent and confident employees.

Another highlight was the reading of the prize-winning essays in the Folklore Competition. This year there were 43 entries from five Indian schools.

The Boy who Became a Sea-Lion won first prize for James Peter, of Kyuquot Indian Day School, and a school-mate, Martha Justin, won second for her story of The Twin Brothers.

Third prize winner, Edith Pelkey, was from the Christie Indian Residential School in Tofino. Her story was entitled The Spirit Finders.

TOP KNOT SECRETS
By Joan Fraser
Well-Known Fashion Show Co-ordinator

They say that in this wonderful world of fashion the designers put all their patterns in a barrel and turn it upside down every eight years. I don't know if this is actually so, but I do know that the natural look is always in vogue. Let's face it, others do; nature often needs a little help. There is nothing flattering about drab brown hair. MARGO BEAUTY STUDIOS suggest for that natural yet flattering look, have your hair tipped this summer. The end results, subtle blonde strands of hair blending and complimenting your natural hair color. Ask a MARGO color expert just how easy it is to have your hair tipped. You will find the upkeep easy—the compliments many. Be a sun-tipped blonde this summer, the easy way, the MARGO way. Only your hairdresser and the sun will know.

Lieut.-Col. and Mrs. Keith Dixon, 1959 Mayfair Drive, announce the engagement of their only daughter, Pamela June, to Mr. Brock Douglas Macdonald, elder son of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Macdonald, West Vancouver, B.C. The wedding will take place on Saturday, June 20, in St. Mary's Church, Oak Bay, with the Rev. Canon Hywel Jones officiating. —(Campbell)

The engagement is announced of Linda Rae, daughter of Mrs. George Brown, 937 Shirley Road and the late Mr. J. Harper Parry, to Mr. William Wiebe, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. William Wiebe, Vancouver. The wedding will take place on Saturday, June 13 in St. Paul's Church, Esquimalt, with the Rev. D. A. Hatfield officiating. — (Miss Parry, Meyers; Mr. Wiebe, D'Lindo)

California Trip For Newlyweds

Glowing candles shed a soft light on the lovely spring flowers in St. Mark's Anglican Church at Qualicum Beach for the wedding of Diana Jean Macdonald and Mr. William Ralph Filmer.

Rev. William Hills and Canon H. J. Best performed the ceremony for the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur G. Macdonald and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph J. Filmer, all of Qualicum.

The bride who walked to the altar with her father was lovely in a gown of white organza over peau de soie. It was fashioned with bow at the waist of the belled skirt and lily point sleeves. Lace applique was on the portrait neckline and at the midriff. Her bouffant veil was held by a dainty pearl coronet and she carried a bouquet of white roses and lily-of-the-valley tied with blue streamers.

Miss Maureen White of Vancouver was maid of honor and wore a dress of lilac nitelite chromspun styled on Empire lines.

Misses Barbara, Linda and Betty Macdonald, sisters of the bride and a cousin, Miss Marilyn Macdonald were bridesmaids. Their dresses were also Empire style and of blue chromspun. All carried bouquets of white carnations and lily-of-the-valley.

Flower girls were cousins of the bride, Sheila and Susie McMillan and their dresses were of blue nylon.

All the gowns were made by the groom's mother and the bride.

At the reception at Qualicum Beach Inn the bridal party and parents of the bride and groom received the guests. Mr. Duncan M. Fraser proposed the toast. The bridal bouquet was sent to Mrs. Lena May of Alberni.

When the couple left on a motor trip to California the bride was dressed in a pale green suit of light wool, white wool topcoat, yellow accessories and yellow rose corsage. On return their home will be at Qualicum Beach.

Out of town guests included Mrs. W. Pinchard and Gill, Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Leighton and Mr. and Mrs. O. Karn, Victoria; Mr. and Mrs. George Muir, Mr. and Mrs. W. Muir and Wendie, Mrs. Mary Newbury and Phyl, Mr. and Mrs. H. Murphy and Maureen, Mr. and Mrs. W. Newbury and Mr. Brian Westwood, Nanaimo; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Stapley, Campbell River; Mr. and Mrs. K. Swoboda and Mr. Cliff West, Port Alberni; Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Muir, Mr. and Mrs. K. Hutcheson and Mr. and Mrs. P. Brennan, Alberni; Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Muir and Judy and Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Hindmarch, Ladysmith; Mrs. A. Backull, Chemainus; Mr. and Mrs. N. T. Filmer, Wellington; Mr. and Mrs. A. Abrahams, Duncan.

Sentiment

Roses for the Wedding Cake

By JEAN SHARP

TORONTO (CP)—June brides may be pleased to learn that they haven't automated all the sentiment out of the wedding cake.

The decorative roses, for example, are still turned out by hand by craftsmen with a dexterity home cooks would envy.

The icing is pushed through a pastry tube on to a small hand-held base that looks like a golf tee. The rose is usually started on a bud of marzipan, the chef turning the tee back and forth as he squirts layer after layer of icing petals on it.

John Sluiter uses no marzipan. He spins the tee continuously, building bud and leaves with icing.

Mr. Sluiter is one of three men at the Toronto headquarters of General Food Products who do nothing but decorate cakes.

In Canada almost all wedding cakes are fruit cakes, Mr. Sluiter says. In his native Holland and other European countries, pound cakes with marzipan icings are favored. White cakes are popular in the United States.

The biggest wedding cake he has decorated was a display cake 10 feet high. The most expensive special-occasion one was an eight-tiered $800 anniversary cake. And the most famous confections he has turned out were the petit fours he decorated for Queen Juliana's wedding.

J. M. Smillie, production manager, says the bakers are no longer asked to bury things, such as wedding rings, in the cakes. They are sometimes asked, however, to match the icing to the colors of flowers on bridesmaids' dresses.

Mr. Smillie says the cake will keep for years in airtight containers, at low temperatures, or in freezers.

Bakeries have a few tricks to keep the cake looking attractive. They will pre-cut the ceremonial slice and set it back in the cake.

They are also prepared to supply "kitchen cakes" to be cut and served so the ceremonial one can be left untouched.

Blue and Gold Spring Tea will be held in Douglas Room of Hudson's Bay Company under the auspices of the Ex-Service Women's Branch No. 182 of Royal Canadian Legion, on May 30. Mrs. George Pearkes will open the annual affair at 2:30 p.m. A display of saris and sulver-kameez by a group of East Indian girls will highlight the afternoon. There will also be a Cupid's Bower, a baby-sitting service and a tea-cup reader. Discussing arrangements are from left, seated, Mrs. K. Croft, in charge of Cupid's Bower; Mrs. G. A. Jennings, secretary-treasurer; Mrs. Millicent Lindo, general convener; back, Mrs. J. Pike, tea convener, and Mrs. M. Butterick, home baking. — Bud Kinsman)

Mrs. Wardman President

Mrs. L. Wardman was re-elected president of the board of management of Rose Manor (formerly the Aged and Infirm Women's Home), at 66th annual meeting held Wednesday.

Other officers are Mrs. E. T. Cantell, first vice-president; Mrs. R. B. Bonar, second; Mrs. J. Ingram Smith, recording secretary, and Mrs. E. R. Rickinson, corresponding secretary.

Reports showed donations received from estates of the late Mary Ann Coward, Mrs. A. M. Reid and Mrs. A. Darvill. Sum of $425 from a Beta Sigma Phi Sorority bazaar purchased a projector and screen for the residence; assistance was given from an IODE chapter and a picture was presented by Mrs. George Hall.

Outstanding expense of the year was painting of the buildings in rose-beige color.

In memory of the first president of the board, Mrs. C. T. Foot, a public address system was presented by Mrs. I. Royle; a rose garden was created at the Collinson Street entrance and a picture, done by Allen Edwards, was hung in the dining room.

Present at the meeting were two past board members, now associates, Mrs. Royle and Mrs. J. D. Kell of North Vancouver.

In the past year, four new members were welcomed, Mrs. B. P. Allard, Mrs. B. Speller, Mrs. W. R. Freethy and Mrs. J. Devlin. There are 100 women residents in Rose Manor.

Thanks was expressed to Mrs. B. Whitney, matron; Mrs. E. Kirk, assistant matron and Mrs. N. Fox, secretary-treasurer, for their dedicated work throughout the year.

Chocolate Reward To Singer

TORONTO (CP) — Eighty-eight years old and a music teacher for 45 of them, Mrs. Walter Murch has nearly 100 music festival gold medalists on her honor role of students.

One of her current crop of boy sopranos, 12-year-old John Lewis took first prize at this year's Kiwanis Music Festival in the 15-years-and-under solo class.

His reward from his teacher was a handful of chocolate potatoes (chocolate cookie balls covered with nuts)—the same as she has been doling out to her pupils for years.

A graduate of the London Royal Academy, Mrs. Murch, a widow, is the daughter of a music-teaching tenor father.

Successful Tea

A successful membership tea was held recently in the parish hall by the Little Flower Council of St. Andrew's Cathedral Catholic Women's League.

Mrs. H. Y. Wakelin and Mrs. J. Roy poured tea.

Special guests were Rev. Father Ratchford, director, Mrs. R. G. McLellan, provincial convener and Mrs. S. Rogers, Diocesan president.

9 IN MEMORIAM

McKENZIE—In loving memory of Hugh McKenzie, "Mac," who fell asleep May 25, 1949.

Sunshine passes, shadows fall,
Love's remembrance outlasts all.

—Lovingly remembered by his loving wife Gladys, Hazel and John.

OSBORNE—In loving memory of our little son and brother, Robert William, who left us May 24, 1963.

Two little hands are resting,
A loving heart is still,
A little boy we love is waiting
For us just over the hill.

—Forever remembered by Mommy, Daddy and sister; Sharon, Gordon and Rhonda Davies; grandmother and grandfather, Mr. and Mrs. W. Osborne.

SHAWNIGAN BEACH HOTEL
Now Opening
FRIDAY, MAY 29

Moderate prices begin at $15 a day for TWO persons, comfortable room and delicious meals included, or $94.50 for a full week's stay—larger lakeview rooms slightly higher.

For one person prices begin at $9 a day or $56.70 for a week, room and meals included.

This kind of holiday means no meals to get, cheerful and friendly hospitality, most comfortable surroundings and pleasant companionship.

If you are the outdoors type, our 35 acres of grounds include a delightful 9-hole, 300-yard mashie golf course with quick action greens, tennis court, badminton court, volley ball, shuffleboard, table tennis, "Sherwood Forest" trails, boats and fishing tackle.

Indoors, we have two large lounges, excellent library, "The Fire That Is Never Out," and more or less continuous cards and bridge. (Bridge players, please note: we play most of the day and night!)

We feel sure you will enjoy a visit and suggest driving out for lunch or dinner.

Winning Contract

By HOWARD SCHENKEN and RICHARD L. FREY

When partner makes a jump-shift in response to your opening bid, you expect to score game at least. Judgment comes into play in selecting the best rebid with a view to reaching a good slam or staying out of a bad one. This Quiz was designed to bring into play the different mental attitudes which are desired when slam, not game, is being searched for.

On each of the following hands, you open one diamond and partner bids two hearts.

What do you say?

♥ K 8
♦ A Q J 10 2
♣ A 8 7 3

♠ 10 9
♥ A Q 8 4
♦ A K 10 9 2
♣ Q 10

c.
♠ A 9
♦ A K Q J 9 6

♠ A Q 6
♥ A J 9 3
♦ A Q 10 5 3

e.
♠ K J 4
♥ 10 3
♦ Q J 8 7 3
♣ A Q 6

f.
♠ 9 8 6
♥ Q 10
♣ A K J

ANSWERS TO BRIDGE QUIZ

a. Three diamonds. When slam is on the horizon, it is better to rebid a good suit than introduce a weak one. If partner cannot bid clubs himself, you won't miss anything, but it may be very important to tell him that your diamonds are substantial. Note that if partner had responded one heart, two clubs from you would have been the best way of making progress towards game.

b. Four hearts. This is the sort of good descriptive bid which players often miss. Since it makes extravagant use of bidding space, it should logically mean that you have strong diamonds and hearts and nothing else to say. Partner should know what to do.

c. Four diamonds. In a forcing situation, the jump-rebid of a player's own suit shows that it is completely solid. The knowledge that your suit does not need establishing may enable partner to bid six no trump, perhaps protecting an unsupported king from the opening lead.

d. Three hearts. You are stronger than (b) and intend to insist on a small slam at least. By going slowly you may find out whether partner can solidify your diamonds; if he can, grand slam prospects will be bright.

e. Two no trump. Partner will assume that you would have bid one no trump over one heart.

f. Three clubs. Unwise to rebid such a poor suit as the diamonds with a slam in the offing. It is not sound to rebid two no trump with no spade guard and better than a minimum hand, nor to give a heart raise too early on two-card support.

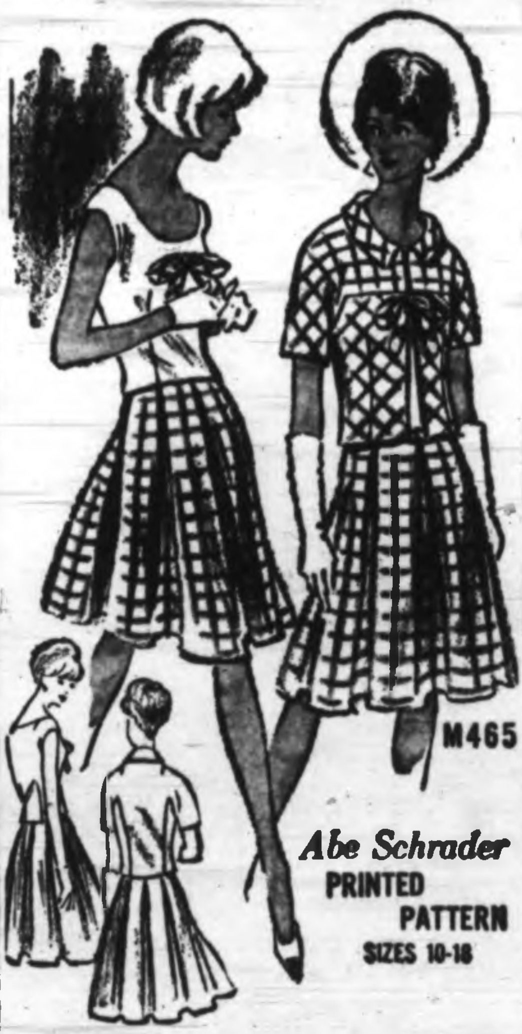
Summer's Smartest Costume Steps Out in Fanfare of Pleats



Summer's magic word is "ladylike"—the fashion term that best describes the softness of Printed Pattern M465 by Abe Schrader. Like a perfect lady, we can't imagine an occasion—social, business, travel—when this costume wouldn't look perfectly appropriate and poised. The Original combines a beautiful seersucker plaid plus ice white for the overblouse. Sew your version in bold checked or textured linen, solid color shantung or crepe, or a vibrant print. This trio will see you beautifully through Summer.

Printed Pattern M465 is available in Misses' Sizes 10, 12, 14, 16, 18. Size 16 jacket, skirt require 4⅞ yards 45-inch fabric; overblouse requires 1¼ yards.

Send ONE DOLLAR for Printed Pattern M465 to The Daily Colonist, 60 Front St., W., Toronto, Ontario. Please print plainly YOUR NAME, ADDRESS with ZONE, STYLE NUMBER and SIZE.

But Spain Best

'Keep Moving in Europe— Too Easy to Fall in Love'

With lots of sunshine, beautiful girls and wine that's cheaper than water, Spain stacks up as the best place in Europe to visit, according to Ted Cameron, 20, who has just returned from a six-month, shoestring trip through 16 European countries.

Ted, who lives at 1504 Mount Douglas Cross Road, and a friend, Phil Molnar, 21, of 800 Lily, returned last week to Victoria after a liberal sampling of European wine, scenery and girls.

"Besides being beautiful, the Spanish girls are friendly, like most girls in Europe," said Ted. "But when you take one out you have to go with a chaperone or get her home by 9 p.m."

He said people all over Europe went out of their way to be friendly and helpful to them. This was especially true in Holland, where the Dutch have never forgotten that Canadian troops liberated their country from the Germans during the Second World War.

'ALL WE HAD'

The two made the trip on $800 each plus their fares to England. "We had to make it last," said Ted, 'it was all we had.

"Food was no trouble at all. We had bread, cheese, sausages, wine and beer, and we both gained weight while we were there.

"We were warned to be careful of the drinking water, especially in the southern countries, where even the natives won't drink it. You could buy distilled water in Spain, but there wasn't much sense to it, since wine is cheaper.

BIGGEST SHOCK

"One of my biggest shocks when I returned to Canada came when I realized I couldn't drink legally over here."

Ted said he was disappointed in some things — the Coliseum was smaller than he thought it would be, and not all Scandinavian girls are buxom, blonde and blue-eyed.

He said the French people were the most unfriendly he met. "Most of them refuse to try to understand you unless your French is fairly good."

MOST BEAUTIFUL

"Besides the Spanish girls, the Italian and Danish girls are the most beautiful. English girls are very friendly and easy to meet besides being beautiful.

"You have to keep moving in Europe. It's too easy to fall in love."

The pair travelled through most of Europe, and even went to East Berlin, where they had trouble with their passports because they had grown beards since having their passport photos taken.

MAPLE LEAF

Ted said Canadians are generally well liked throughout Europe.

"We had a Canadian Ensign pasted on our pack sacks, and because of this many people thought we were English. But whenever they saw the maple leaves on our jackets they knew we were Canadians.

"I guess the prime minister's flag design is probably a good idea after all."

Top Honors

Wren Muriel M. Bertrand, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Bertrand, 1885 Quamichan, has graduated with top honors from a six-week naval operations course at Fleet School, HMCS Stadacona, Halifax.

Old Crest May Adorn New Bank

Premier Bennett has his eye on a carved crest once used to adorn the original Bank of British Columbia, according to Douglas Street service station operator Derick Stratford.

The premier wants the crest, which weighs several hundred pounds, to decorate the as yet unbuilt Vancouver branch of the as yet non-existent bank.

Mr. Stratford said William Budd, the premier's assistant, approached him about the crest about two weeks ago asking him to donate it for the new bank.

He said a plaque of appreciation would be placed below the crest stating its donor.

Mr. Startford hasn't yet decided whether he will let the crest go, but said if he does he would expect to be reimbursed for the money he has already spent on it.

He found it lying in a weed patch behind his service station about two years ago. It had been left there after it got shoved aside out of a nearby storage building where it had lain since the original bank building was torn down.

The crown, which originally went with the crest, is now over the doorway of the Victoria Post Office.

Biggest IWA Locals

Peace Plan Opposed

A Parade of Their Own

Along private parade route go Glanford School area children who decided to stage their own version of Victoria Day parade yesterday after seeing city parade last week. Leading this group is John Thomas Graham, 4076 Glanford.—(Jim Ryan)

Leaders of two of the biggest IWA locals in B.C., the 4,000-member Duncan-Nanaimo local and the 7,000-member Vancouver unit, yesterday opposed the settlement formula for the coast lumber contract dispute.

Both locals plan executive meetings today which are expected to approve recommendations that the membership reject the formula at early general meetings.

MEETING TODAY

In Victoria, IWA financial secretary Ed Haw announced last night the 1,650 members of Local 1-118 have been called to a meeting at noon today at 715 Johnson Street to consider the formula.

Indications were the Victoria men would be asked to approve the formula for 28 cents an hour in a two-year contract, plus 15 cents for tradesmen.

FAR SHORT

Duncan-Nanaimo president Weldon Jubenville said the formula "falls far short" of the demand for a 40-cent boost in a one-year contract.

He said it also ignores the main demand for travelling time. Mr. Jubenville said the loggers receive eight hours' pay but are under company supervision for 10 hours.

40-CENT DEMAND

He claimed the companies can meet the 40-cent demand because of "fantastic and outrageous" profits last year, which this year "will be even larger."

Eiffel May Tower

VANCOUVER (CP)—The Eiffel Tower may go up in downtown Vancouver after all.

Businessman Fred Morrish made an offer Saturday to the Vancouver International Festival to pay the estimated $5,000 cost of putting up and taking down the 120-foot replica.

IN WAREHOUSE

The tower, costing about $34,000, has lain in a warehouse here since being donated by the French government in honor of the festival's French theme this year. Festival directors had said they didn't have the money to erect the tower in Queen Elizabeth Theatre square.

The tower was shipped here free by a French steamship line from San Francisco, where it was used during a France Day.

A hint was cast that whoever put it up—and took it down afterward — could keep the tower.

Support Red Ensign

Tories Want Vote On Flag Issue

NANAIMO — The executive of the B.C. Progressive Conservative Association went on record at a quarterly meeting Saturday as favoring the Red Ensign but urging a national referendum to solve the controversial flag issue.

Voting on the question should be recorded in such a way that it would not indicate results by provinces or regions, the association said.

Mary Southin, who proposed the resolution, said: "The French problem will always be with us. We must learn to live with it."

The association also decided to oppose B.C. government ownership of any shares in the proposed Bank of British Columbia.

OUT OF BANKING

Malcolm Wickson, provincial chairman of resolutions committee, said: "We feel the government should keep out of banking business, otherwise it could lead to an unfair control of economics."

The association also decided to form a committee for study of provincial department of fisheries.

Play Awards To Toronto

CHARLOTTETOWN (CP) — The Barn Players of Toronto Broadview YMCA won four of the six main awards as the 1964 Dominion Drama Festival ended last night.

Their Taste of Honey was the best play and the group also won best actor, actress and supporting actress honors. Only B.C. winner was Tom Kerr of Kamloops, the best director.

British Troops Guiana-Bound

LONDON (UPI) — Britain yesterday sent troop reinforcements to British Guiana to stop a serious wave of violence among warring sugar union members in the Caribbean colony.

No Easy Gag For Filibuster

WASHINGTON (AP)—An Associated Press poll indicated Saturday that U.S. Senate leaders still have an uphill fight to muster a two-thirds majority to force an early halt to a southern filibuster against the civil rights bill.

The balance of power lies with 17 senators, mostly from the midwest and Rocky Mountains area, who gave qualified or non-committal answers.

CAUSED DEATHS

In 1960 and 1961, barbiturates were the cause of 25 per cent of all accidental deaths in Canada.

B.C. Festival This Week

Distant Drama Drops Out

NANAIMO — One faraway group has had to drop out of the B.C. drama festival here Wednesday to Saturday and a second may have to follow, festival officials announced yesterday.

They also gave the schedule of performances and said the adjudicator will be Gordon Peacock of Edmonton, a director, theatre designer and teacher of drama at the University of Alberta.

TRAVEL COST

The Cariboo Players, who planned to present the comedy-drama Fumed Oak, withdrew because some players could not get time off from their jobs and the cost of transportation was too high.

Similar trouble faces the Vernon Little Theatre, which is listed for Twelfth Night, the festival's only Shakespeare play.

SIX OF SEVEN

The Vernon group, which won six of the seven awards in its zone festival, was striving at last report to raise $750 so it could get to Nanaimo.

The festival will centre around the Shoreline Motor Hotel and the program is:

- Wednesday—Serenade to a Corpse, Mt. St. Peter's Players, Nanaimo; A Light in the Window, Emerald Players, Vancouver; The Hole, Theatre Guild, Victoria.
- Thursday—Joint Owners in Spain, Little Theatre, Ladysmith; Twelfth Night, Little Theatre, Vernon; Fumed Oak, Brisco Players, East Kootenays; The Devil His Due, Little Theatre, Courtenay.
- Friday — The Browning Version, Little Theatre, Nelson; Impromptu, Civic Centre Little Theatre, Prince Rupert; The Bespoke Overcoat, Espece Players, Peace River.
- Saturday — Honor performances and awards.

During the festival, members of the B.C. Drama Association will meet to discuss a new constitution which has been three years in the making.

Two Farm Meetings End School Survey

Two farmer's meetings will be held this week in the southern Island to conclude a B.C. Federation of Agriculture survey on what should be included in agricultural education.

The federation has held such meetings throughout B.C. so it can let the provincial and federal governments know what farmers want in agricultural training at the high school and adult education levels.

The meetings will be held in the Cobble Hill community hall Wednesday and the Keating Institute Hall Thursday, both at 8 p.m.

Kitte Turmell's Teen-Ager

Magic, Tragic Spring

By KITTE TURMELL

Teen-agers, faced with that first important social engagement, see spring as the poets view it—part magic and part tragic.

You all know the true meaning of "the first blush" when you receive an invitation to your first prom, out of town dance, or wedding reception. You're excited and flattered. Then, perhaps, panic sets in because you're being thrust into an unfamiliar situation.

The most effective system for calming party palpitations is to anticipate awkward circumstances. Also, to prepare yourself with the proper solution. The rules of etiquette frequently offer a more graceful way out than the nearest exit.

Here's how to deal with typical problems based on data from date counselors.

Q. "Dave has asked me to the junior prom. I know his family doesn't have a car. My father says it would be all right for Dave to drive one of our cars. Should I offer it to him? I have a beautiful bouffant dress and I dread the thought of getting it crushed riding in a crowded car with other couples. P.S.: Should I buy Dave a boutonniere? I know he plans to bring me a corsage since he has already asked me what color I prefer."

A. It's a matter of crushing Dave or the dress. He probably arranged for transportation before he invited you and it would be patronizing to suggest you could do better by providing a private car. P.S.: I wouldn't order a special flower for Dave. However, if he brings a corsage that includes small posies—rosebuds or carnations—you may pull a flower from the corsage and offer it to him. It would be a generous gesture.

Q. "I'm invited to a formal wedding and reception. My best friend's sister is being married at an afternoon ceremony Must I send a gift? My parents aren't invited."

A. You must reply. If you accept it is customary to send a gift. It can be very inexpensive. Ask your girl friend what her sister needs that is within your budget. Wear your Sunday best to the wedding—a soft pastel suit or dressy afternoon frock. No red or black.

Q. "At a barbecue, big and fairly formal, where parents cook and the food is served buffet style, should the boy offer to fill a plate for his date? I have seen this done, but the boy always looks conspicuous and a little henpecked. What's right?"

A. At a buffet, everyone serves self usually. The boy offers to go back for the beverage since it's frequently impossible to carry everything in one trip. The boy leads the way to the spot where the couple will eat. He always asks, politely, if his selection meets with the girl's approval. She always agrees unless something is obviously amiss—a nail in the bench, etc. Be ever-thoughtful of others. Never use a party as an opportunity to show off before a big or little crowd.

For pointers on how to handle special-occasion invitations—and date-bids—send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Kitte Turmell. Ask for Kitte Turmell's free leaflet: "That Last-Minute Invitation"—How to accept it and why. Copyright by Kitte Turmell.

Teen-Age Letters

Dear Kitte Turmell: I am a girl of 16. For approximately one month I dated the most wonderful fellow in the world, then suddenly he stopped talking to me and calling on me. He told a friend that I was immature and acted like I owned him. I realize this now and know everything would be OK if he'd only give me a second chance. Three other people have tried to get him to go back to me.

"I have asked him to go to a picnic but he won't say Yes or No. My Mother says I should ask someone else. Have I tried too hard? BOTHERED.

Dear BOTHERED: Perhaps you tried to bring too many friends into your reconciliation act. If he wanted to go to the picnic, he'd have said so. Better assume he won't accept. Invite someone else or ask a friend to line up a partner for you. Let him go his way for a while, but whenever you can do so, show him you're still interested and are improving those personality traits he criticized.

Dear Kitte: I am a boy of almost 15 and have not been on a date. There is a girl who lives three houses down the street. I like her very much and I deliver papers to her family. She is going on 14. How would I work up to a date with her? DATELESS.

Dear DATELESS: Wave or speak to the girl whenever you see her. When you get a chance to talk to her, ask questions about her family, schoolwork, hobbies, and such. Show her you like her and want to get to know her. Then ask if you can call on her some day. Think of friendships, not dating, for now.

Manitoba Child, Woman Drown

WINNIPEG (CP) — A two-year-old boy and a 70-year-old woman drowned in separate accidents in rural Manitoba, RCMP reported.

Lyle Vernon Falloon drowned on the family farm near Foxwarren, 227 miles northwest of here, when he fell into a dugout.

Mrs. Helen Dyck drowned in a pond at the rear of her farmhouse in West Springstein near Elie, about 30 miles west of here, while attempting to get a bucket of water.

Two Yes Votes, One No

In three referendums and a byelection in Greater Victoria yesterday, this is what happened:

- Approval was given for expenditure of $6,737,354 for construction of 176 new school rooms in District 61.
- Approval was given for expenditure of $158,379 as part of the purchase price of an administration centre for the school board on the Lansdowne campus.
- Fred Hawes won the Oak Bay byelection.
- Esquimalt ratepayers turned thumbs down on a proposed $383,000 swimming pool.

LABOR MINISTER CALLS TALKS

PORT ALBERNI — Opposing factions in the office workers' strike, which has idled more than 2,700 men in the Alberni Valley, will meet Labor Minister Peterson in Victoria Monday morning.

The meeting was called Saturday by Mr. Peterson on the request of William Lowe, international vice-president of the striking Office Employees' International Union, following a letter from MacMillan, Bloedel and Powell River Ltd., to all of its Alberni Valley employees.

Two other strike developments occurred yesterday:

- The union was reported ready to set up picket lines in front of Mac-Powell operations in Nanaimo and Powell River.
- The CPR said it had, in effect, suspended five men for refusing a job at the struck Mac-Powell pulp plant in Alberni last Thursday.

'MISLEADING STATEMENTS'

Mr. Lowe told the Colonist the Mac-Powell letter to employees, signed by board chairman J. V. Clyne, "made many misleading statements in our opinion.

"It presented a salary scale the union had never seen before," said Mr. Lowe.

'DIFFERENT FIGURES'

He said the scale was "different" from all previous figures, so he phoned Mr. Peterson asking for a meeting at which "the company could again clarify its position, which apparently has again changed."

The union leader said many details were lacking in the letter. One example was that a salary range was given for typists but the letter did not say how long it would take a typist to get from one end of the range to the other.

NO HOLIDAY DEMANDS

Mr. Lowe said the letter claimed the union wants changes in statutory holidays and vacations when it does not.

"We asked for the meeting because we have to know where the employer stands," he said.

He added he was unable to say whether the new salary figures could be a basis for settlement.

The meeting will begin in Mr.

World Crackers

Teasie Takes Tonsure

LONDON (CP)—A fashionable hairdresser, who owns 16 shops in London left Saturday for Morocco where he intends to go into a monastery.

Peter Raymond, 53, known to the 20,000 women who visit his hairdressing shops every week as Mr. Teasie Weasie declared: "I think the world has gone crackers."

At London airport, where he sipped a double scotch, Raymond said he has a general mistrust of the world.

"One can no longer speak the Queen's English," he commented. "What is wrong seems to be right; teen-agers have become wreckers."

Raymond said he would consult a "wise man" who lives in the Atlas Mountains of Morocco and would not return to Britain until, as he put it, "my mind clears."

Foes of de Gaulle?

Politics Enter Kidnapping

PARIS (AP) — A series of telephone calls Saturday night indicated the kidnappers of Mrs. Marcel Dassault had political motives or that foes of President Charles de Gaulle were trying to exploit the kidnapping for political purposes.

Police threw all their resources into a hunt for the three men—two gunmen and a driver—who carried out the pre-dawn abduction of Mrs. Dassault, 63, the wife of a millionaire French nuclear warplane builder.

Anonymous callers contacted two Paris evening papers and the French Press Agency, in each case purporting to speak for the kidnappers.

$2,000,000 RANSOM

In the first case the caller told Le Monde the kidnappers wanted a ransom of $2,000,000.

Then France-Soir was notified that Mrs. Dassault would be freed in 70 hours if ex-Gen. Raoul Salan were released. Salan is serving a life term for leading the anti-Gaullist terrorist Secret Army Organization in Algeria.

A similar call to the French Press Agency said the secret army had levied a $2,000,000 penalty against Dassault for "high treason."

The caller said the sum would be put into the secret army's war chest to finance anti-government activities or to compensate the government's "victims."

But there was no way of tell-

Laotian Neutralists Battered by Reds

VIENTIANE, Laos (AP) — A Communist-led army maintained pressure on battered neutralist troops in the north-central highlands of Laos Saturday and the neutralists' commander Gen. Kong Le said their situation "is very bad."

FLYING TRIP

Kong Le made a flying trip to their administrative capital from his temporary command post at Ban Na, about 100 miles northeast of Vientiane, for emergency conferences with Premier Prince Souvanna Phouma and two rightist generals.

A company of 152 military policemen arrived in Saigon by air from Fort Chaffee, Ark., to provide additional security for Americans in the face of increasing Communist terrorism in that capital of South Viet Nam.

Russia Asks Laos Parley

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet government has formally proposed the convening of a full 14-nation conference on Laos in Geneva some time in June, Tass reports.

Meanwhile the newspaper Izvestia accused the United States of "gross violations" of the 1962 agreement guaranteeing Laos its independence and neutrality.

Let the People Decide Best Flag for Canada

Though the Daily Colonist takes the editorial stand that the Canadian Red Ensign should be retained as Canada's flag, it recognizes the right of every Canadian of voting age to express his personal and free views on the matter.

The Colonist firmly believes that the choice of a national symbol is something that cannot and must not be left in the hands of politicians to decide under partisan duress.

The only way to remove this issue from the realm of politics is for a national plebiscite to be held, in which every Canadian citizen can make his or her own desires known to the government.

Colonist readers who support this view are urged to complete the coupon form below. Simply clip it, sign it and enclose it in an envelope addressed to The Rt. Hon. Lester B. Pearson, House of Commons, Ottawa. No stamp is necessary.

Dear Prime Minister:

I am in favor of a national plebiscite to decide upon the selection of a Canadian national flag.

Seven Mangled In Air Crash

CIUDAD VICTORIA, Mexico (AP) — Former New Orleans mayor and U.S. diplomat deLesseps S. Morrison, his young son and five other persons were killed when their chartered two-engined plane crashed in dense fog Friday.

The bodies were picked up in a mountain cornfield Saturday by a rescue squad sent to the scene 27 miles from Ciudad Victoria after a Mexican official flying overhead identified the wrecked plane.

BODIES MANGLED

A spokesman said the bodies were mangled and unrecognizable.

Also aboard the plane in addition to Morrison, a 52-year-old widower, and his seven-year-old son Randy, was socialite divorcee Mrs. Carolyn Cataldo Vandergrift, and her seven-year-old son Christopher.

Others were pilot Hugh Ward of Brownsville, Tex., Ovide J. Cemac, a Houma, La., businessman, and Riley Pellegrin of Montegut, La., an employee of a towing firm owned by Cemac.

Mrs. Vandergrift, 35, originally from Martinsville, W. Va., was married to Charleston, W. Va., businessman James Vandergrift. Since a divorce five years ago she has maintained homes in Washington, D.C., and Golden Beach, Fla.

THREE FEET

Col. Arthur Beall of the Air-Sea Rescue Headquarters, Kansas City said planes from the crash scene reported wreckage scattered across the mountain. He said no pieces larger than three feet in diameter were found.

Cyprus

Longer Duty Tour Faces UN Force

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — Secretary-General U Thant was reported Saturday to be planning to ask the Security Council to double the life of the UN peacekeeping force in Cyprus.

The council set up the force — including more than 1,000 Canadian troops — for a three-month period that ends June 27.

Diplomatic sources said Thant intends to recommend by June 8 that the council keep it going for still another three months so as to allow more time for carrying out UN objectives for Cyprus.

They said he so informed countries in the operation Friday, and asked if they would continue to participate.

Thant had a private meeting with delegates from the nine countries—Canada, Britain, Denmark, Finland, Ireland, Sweden, Australia, Austria and New Zealand.

He was said to have told them he had an optimistic report on Cyprus from his special representative there, Galo Plaza Lasso, who passed through New York this week on a short trip home to Ecuador.

Thant said Plaza told him some fortifications had already been dismantled in Cyprus and all the roads were clear, except one through Kyrenia Pass.

Official Claims:

Pilot's Letters Home Altered by Magazine

WASHINGTON (AP)—A high U.S. defence department official contends that Life magazine, in reprinting letters written by a pilot later killed in South Viet Nam, edited and changed them in such a manner as to completely alter the sense of what he originally wrote.

Assistant Defence Secretary Arthur Sylvester made public a letter he wrote to the editor of Life magazine in which he said he was "appalled" at the manner in which the magazine handled the letters of air force Capt. Edwin G. (Jerry) Shank Jr. of Winamac, Ind.

OBSOLETE PLANES

The letters, which Shank wrote to his wife before he was killed in combat late last March, were published in Life magazine and elsewhere. They were the basis of contentions the United States is using obsolete planes in the Vietnamese conflict.

Sylvester, chief Pentagon spokesman, said the Shank letters had been edited but were printed as though they were complete.

"If it had been desired to discredit the T-28 airplane, then certainly the editing as it appeared in Life would have accomplished that objective," Sylvester wrote.

A spokesman for Life said he would prefer not to comment until the Sylvester letter has been received.

In Winamac, the pilot's widow denied Sylvester's charges.

Mrs. Shank said only one word of the letters written before the pilot was killed was printed incorrectly by the magazine and that was because editors could not read her husband's writing.

WORD FOR WORD

"Other than that, these letters have been word for word," she said. "If this is all they (Pentagon officials) can find to pick apart, I don't think they have much to stand on."

Don't Play Blind Man's Buff With Doubtful Patent Medicine

By JOSEPH MOLNER, MD

Dear Dr. Molner: What causes eczema and what can be done about it? My son has it on his hands.—MRS. R.R.

Eczema is a scaly eruption of the skin—but that does not mean it is always the same, or results from the same causes.

In babies, it is frequently the result of a food allergy.

In adults, and you didn't mention your son's age—eczema can mean any number of things. If on the hands, I strongly suspect a contact dermatitis, or skin ailment resulting from something he handles or touches. This, in fact, is in the nature of an allergy.

Don't try to guess what these skin troubles mean. Go to a dermatologist.

Sometimes people try half a dozen kinds of salves and medications before they give up and go to a specialist. By that time they often have so much irritation and secondary infection that the doctor has a difficult time working back to find out the original trouble.

In the interests of saving money as well as being cured quicker, consult a dermatologist before you've played blind man's bluff with patent medicines.

Dear Dr. Molner: Is it harmful to take a teaspoonful of epsom salts in a glass of water every night? I have been doing this for years, as a preventive to high blood pressure. I am 75.—B.H.

Epsom salts is irritating. If your system tolerated the irritation, you've been fortunate. It will not have any effect on high blood pressure. I would try going without the salts for a month—and see whether you don't feel as well, or perhaps better.

Dear Dr. Molner: My problem is I eat starch, sometimes two pounds or more a week. When I try to get off the habit for two or three days I start craving it again. Please tell me in what ways it harms a person. I am worried sick.—MRS. M. B.

I'm beginning to wonder how many starch-eaters there are. It would be interesting to know how the habit starts.

However, there isn't any resulting harm except that starch piles up a lot of calories, and could interfere with the appetite when it comes to getting other diet necessities—protein for one. And the fruits and vegetables which provide vitamins and minerals, for another.

There's no harm in it, except to the degree that it would help make you fat, or interfere with eating other more desirable food.

If you aren't putting on weight, and if you eat milk, meat, cereal, green and yellow vegetables, and fruit, then don't worry about the starch. But if you are getting fat—the starch is helping do it. This is a habit, like smoking or drinking, which you could stop if you set your mind to it.

RAF Types Re-Unite

First reunion of the men of the wartime No. 32 Operational Training Unit RAF which operated from Patricia Bay Airport was such a big success last night, organizers plan to stage a reunion every year.

About 65 of the 2,000 original men of the unit and their wives, who returned to British Columbia after the Second World War attended the event at the Net Loft.

SMILE SHOW

Presiding was English-born comedian Jerry Gosley, who presented selections from his Smile Show.

The British Commonwealth Training station was set up in 1941 and operated until 1944 when the RCAF took over.

Chairman of the reunion organizing committee was David Huggins, 1657 Richardson.

ONLY MAN

The only man who served on the unit during the war and is still serving in B.C. is Flt.-Lt. Dennis Bate of RCAF Station Comox.

A. E. Richman, Saanich parks superintendent was the first of the original personnel to return to Canada immediately after the war.

Peterson Calls Talks

Peterson's office at 9 a.m. Before it begins, delegates from the four big unions which have refused to cross the picket lines will present a brief on the dispute to the minister.

BRIEF APPROVED

The decision to write and present the brief was taken yesterday at an emergency meeting of the IWA and electricians, papermakers and pulp and sulphite unions. Details of the brief were not disclosed.

Mr. Lowe declined comment on the possibility the strike might spread to Nanaimo and Powell River.

SPREAD POSSIBLE

William Gregg of the International Longshoremen and Warehousemen's Union, a Port Alberni executive member of the Nanaimo-Alberni labor council, warned earlier the spread is possible if the office strike is not settled soon.

He said the rank and file of the striking union is "militant" and wants the Mac-Powell mills in the two centres struck.

PICKETS SLATED

A picket line would be set up at the Nanaimo's plant gates while strikers in boats would picket at Powell River, where the firm owns most of the land and could order land pickets away.

Such a picket line would require the support of the Masters and Mates Guild, which has refused to bring in ships behind the picket lines here.

The pulp and sulphite union already has stated it would honor a land picket line in Nanaimo.

Mr. Gregg was the first to disclose the Thursday incident involving the CPR employees.

He said the members of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen refused to take out empty boxcars which were inside a picket line but a CPR spokesman in Vancouver said the men were suspended for refusing duty and "there was no picket line at the time."

One of the five men, who refused to give his name, told the Colonist there was a line . . . "I know a picket line when I see one."

The CPR official said the length of the suspension had not been determined and added CPR supervisory personnel moved trains from the struck plant yesterday.

'THEY'RE SO MAD'

Mr. Gregg added: "There is a rumor that the CBRT may pull out the whole Island, they're so mad."

Mac-Powell issued only one statement during the day, that it is considering its legal position with regard to the Port Alberni picketing.

With Canada at Crossroads We Bicker Over Bunting

By PIERRE BERTON

*Mr. Berton is a well-known, sometimes notorious, always outspoken author-journalist and television personality.

TORONTO (TNS)—Surely nothing could be more symptomatic of the general lunacy into which this country is sliding than the heated debate now flaming across the land on the subject of a Canadian flag.

In this 97th year of its existence, the nation stands quite literally at the crossroads. Never before has it been plagued with problems so importunate or perils so minacious; never before has it been faced with opportunities so challenging. These are going to require all our intellects, all our energies and all our precious waking hours for several years to come.

Crying Need

Yet what occupies us above all else and to the threatened exclusion of all else? The imminent Balkanization of the country? The inexorable engulfing by the American economic ocean? The crying need for a modern constitution? The genuinely terrifying dilemma of the permanently poor? The God-given opportunity to build the nucleus of a world police force?

None of these. We are arguing, if you please, about a nineteenth century symbol—arguing bitterly, as if the whole future of this tortured and fragmented land rested in some magical fashion on a piece of colored bunting flying from a mast.

Seek Solace

A drowning nation, we clutch at this straw as if it were the solution to all our problems. We seek the solace of The Flag as small, thumb-sucking children crave the comfort of a blanket—and the parallel, I suggest, is an exact one.

The Canadian newspapers in unison have reported that Mr. Pearson intends to "stand or fall" on the matter of a flag design. It is reported, so help me, that this pressing question may be the great issue on which an early election will be fought.

Thrown Out

If this is true Mr. Pearson ought to be thrown out of office on his ear. We are already in danger of becoming the laughing stock of our children and our children's children. This latest idiocy, if it is not repudiated, will make the history of this decade read like a chapter out of Mr. Magoo.

There are several issues on which a Prime Minister could with honor elect to stand or fall. The little matter of whether we should sell the Columbia River to the Americans for a quick buck is one of them.

New Partners

The question of a new federal partnership with Quebec is another. The whole difficult but necessary concern about a national medical scheme is a third. There are, in addition, by my count some 293 other anxieties now troubling our Canadian society on which a fighting Prime Minister, if he ever chose to take any kind of a stand, could take a stand. The matter of a flag design is not one of them.

The trouble with the flag question is that it casts a kind of supernatural aura over the real sickness of our time. People insist on confusing the symbol with the reality. "This is not the flag we fought for," a Canadian Legion stalwart is quoted as saying of the new design (and on the front page, too). But I was not under the impression that we fought for any kind of flag.

I have nothing against flags personally, but I must admit to a sneaking feeling of pride on occasion at being able to boost to foreigners that I lived in a land that had none. It made me feel a part of the future even though I knew in my heart of hearts that the absence of a flag did not really connote any lack of nineteenth century nationalism on my country's part—only a lack of that twentieth century unity which a flag symbolizes.

If we must have a flag to run up the mast, I would opt for the United Nations flag, which might suggest to the world that we Canadians place a universal nationalism ahead of the old-fashioned kind.

NO WORD TO FAMILY

The family said it had no word.

Marcel Dassault, 72, slightly injured when the gunmen pistol-whipped him and their chauffeur, Louis Dubois, 48, was reported in a state of shock. Dassault's firm is the maker of the Mirage IV, France's supersonic atomic bomber.

EDGE OF WOODS

The kidnapping occurred outside the elegant apartment house where the Dassault's live on the edge of the famed Boulogne Woods.

The Dassaults were returning from a dinner party at the home of friends. As their big American-made sedan stopped and they alighted, two hooded men approached. When the couple protested the two men quickly slugged Dassault and the chauffeur and grabbed Mrs. Dassault.

Flying Saucers? No, Just Baseballs

By the Associated Press

Hey, Bill Veeck. You'd better get your dead ball plan adopted before baseball's swing-from-the-heels guys lose 'em altogether.

Home runs flew in all directions Saturday as the boys teed off on tired, shell-shocked pitchers to produce such football-score results as 14-2, 11-0, 9-5 and 8-4.

Jim Gentile, a legitimate home run swatter, banged two. Good-field, no-hit Bobby Knoop hit one, a grand slammer, no less. And Felipe Alou had an inside-the-park job, among the near two-dozen homers.

There were five home runs in Boston's 5-4 triumph over Kansas City. Besides Gentile's pair for Kansas City, homers were hit by Bob Tillman, Roman Mejias and Felix Mantilla of the Red Sox. Mantilla's came in the ninth, in a pinch hit role with a man on base, to turn defeat into victory.

Three homers were among the 17 hits amassed by the Chicago White Sox in their 14-2 slaughter of the Washington Senators. They were slugged by Dave Nicholson, Pete Ward and Tommy McCraw. Ward's was a grand slammer.

Knoop's four-run homer enabled the Los Angeles Angels to come from behind and defeat the New York Yankees 9-5. Mickey Mantle homered for the losers. It was his seventh of the season and 428th of his career, tying him for the top mark among the active players with Eddie Mathews of Milwaukee.

Leon Wagner knocked in five runs with a home run and single as Cleveland outslugged Detroit 11-9. Dick McAuliffe had a homer for the Tigers.

TWINS BLANKED

Oddly enough, the Minnesota Twins, who lead both leagues in home runs, didn't hit any in their 5-1 victory over Baltimore. There was one Oriole homer, by Boog Powell, which deprived Lee Stange of a shutout.

Rico Carty, a rookie outfielder walloped two home runs for Milwaukee as the Braves downed the St. Louis Cardinals 8-4. Bill White hit one for the Cards. Alou and Henry Aaron also homered for the Braves.

HELD TO DOUBLE

Jerry Lynch and Roberto Clemente were Pittsburgh's homer hitters as the Pirates swamped San Francisco 9-2 behind Bob Friend's five-hitter. Willie Mays was held to a double in four times at bat, dropping his average to an even .400.

The Chicago Cubs whipped Cincinnati 5-3 despite home runs by Frank Robinson and Deron Johnson.

Bus Driver Wins Holiday

Bus driver Ray Hodgkinson will be taking his holidays in July this year, and he's going to see a lot of the hemisphere while travelling inexpensively in luxury fashion.

Hodgkinson earned himself a dream holiday at Gibsons' Bowladrome last night when he rolled games of 233, 183 and 140 to win the Lower Island fivepin roll-off in the Players Bowling Festival.

EXPENSES PAID

For knocking over enough pins to total that 556 points, Hodgkinson wins an expenses-paid trip for two which will enable him to spend a week at the New York World's Fair and five days in Bermuda.

Hodgkinson will leave Victoria by plane on July 1, spend his week in New York and then settle down on the SS Queen of Bermuda for the next 10 days. He will remain aboard the luxury cruiser for the 10 days, spending five at sea and five days in Bermuda before being flown home.

150 WINNERS

Hodgkinson, who had to beat out 38 finalists in his area, is one of 150 bowlers who earned the trip in the cross-Canada competition which drew an unheard-of entry of 166,470. This was boiled down to 10,000 finalists, who rolled off last night in their respective areas for the 150 top prizes.

Under rules governing the five pin end of the competition, players made their official entry and then went out to try and beat their league average. At the end of the qualifying period, the 10 per cent of the total entry with the greatest differential between their league average and their attempt to qualify made the roll-off.

The winner of the roll-off was the bowler with the biggest difference between his qualifying average and his average for the three-game roll-off.

Hodgkinson, averaging 138 in league play, made the roll-off by averaging 153 in a qualifying attempt. Last night his average was 185 and a fraction for a plus 32.

ISLANDERS FAIL

Island tenpinners, however, failed in their bid for the same trip. Sixty-four of them rolled off at Aurora Lanes last night in competition against 139 finalists from the New Westminster area, who rolled off at Lucky Strike Lanes in their area.

Tenpinners in the final rolled against their league average and the winner was S. Sesselmont of Pender Harbor, a 156-average bowler who came through last night with games of 233, 144 and 211 for a 588 which put him 40 pins over his league average.

NANAIMO — Vancouver went on a goal-scoring spree in the first and fourth quarters to defeat Nanaimo, 18-13, in a clean fast Inter-City Lacrosse League game here last night before about 1,000 fans.

The win brought Vancouver to within one point of league-leading New Westminster. Both clubs have played eight games.

MOMENTARY TIE

Vancouver led all the way except for a moment in the third quarter when Nanaimo tied the score 8-8. The mainlanders then rattled in four straight goals to leave the floor with a 12-9 lead before out-scoring Nanaimo 6-4 in a free-wheeling fourth quarter.

Vancouver's young goalkeeper Norm Nestman, who wanted to play with Victoria Shamrocks at the start of the season, turned in a strong game as Nanaimo out-shot Vancouver 52-46.

Referees Earl McDonald and Whitey Severson assessed only 20 minutes in penalties, 14 to Vancouver and six minutes to Nanaimo.

Terry Davis led the Nanaimo scorers with four goals and two assists. Bobby Marsh and Syd Warick had two goals and three assists while Bill Chisolm counted three goals and two assists for Vancouver.

Bo's Not Completely Square

By MILTON RICHMAN

NEW YORK (UPI)—Ex-playboy Bo Belinsky has rejoined the human race because, as he puts it, "there was no other alternative."

The once rollicking, free-wheeling southpaw of the Los Angeles Angels now concentrates strictly on pitching and says those old days and night of hi-jinks are far behind him.

"There was no sense fighting the whole world all by myself," Belinsky said, sitting quietly by himself near the water cooler in the dugout.

"After all, I'm no kid anymore. I'm 27. I saw the whole bit wasn't getting me anywhere. That trip back to the minors last season made me do some thinking, too.

"I think I have a future in baseball and I don't want to do anything to jeopardize it. My outlook is entirely different every time I go out there to the mound now. I am starting to think just like all these other guys."

Bo motioned with his hand toward the field where his Los Angeles teammates were busy taking batting practice.

Belinsky claims he doesn't regret any of his past, but felt he'd better change if he hoped to get anywhere in baseball.

"Don't get me wrong," he said. "I haven't become a complete square. I guess you'd say I toned down a whole lot. Why? Like I said, I'm getting older and I saw my activities weren't getting me anywhere. Worse than that, I was getting bored by the whole bit."

Bo has recanted before and then knocked over the traces again, so there might be some question as to how much he really means it this time were it not for some overwhelming evidence on his side.

One of the first things he did, for example, was to sell his flashy lipstick-colored Cadillac which he used to dazzle the gals in Los Angeles. Moreover, he has forgotten all about a possible movie career and rarely is seen in night spots anymore.

"After a ball game, I go home and watch television," Belinsky said. "I watch it by the hour. Until my eyeballs pop out. Do I miss the crowds? Nahh! They get boring after awhile, too."

Belinsky has pitched well enough for the Angels this season, although that isn't immediately apparent from his 1-2 record and his earned run average of 3.09.

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Six Indianapolis Motor Speedway veterans and two rookies qualified cars Saturday for the Memorial Day 500-mile race, leaving four spots to be filled in the 33-car field in final time trials Sunday.

Wind, with gusts up to 29 miles per hour, and two spectacular accidents, reduced the activity.

Dempsey Wilson of Lawndale, Calif., crashed a rear-engine Offenhauser on the south retaining wall late in the day but escaped injury. A mechanic was hurt earlier in the pits.

The 29 qualified cars averaged 152.9 m.p.h. against the 149.8 average for the entire starting line-up last year.

Two British-American hybrid cars were qualified by an Australian racing veteran and a young American.

Jack Brabham, 38, twice world road racing champion, flew back overnight from practicing for Sunday's Dutch Grand Prix and qualified his Brabham-Offenhauser at 152.504 miles an hour.

Brabham ran without his chief mechanic, Denny Moore of Tulsa, Okla., who was struck in the side by a wing nut thrown from the separated wheel of a car driven by Paul Russo of Indianapolis. Moore was listed in good condition at hospital.

Russo was not hurt.

Four-Way Tie In Memphis Golf

MEMPHIS (AP)—Doug Sanders, Mike Souchak, Gene Littler and Billy Casper jammed into a tie for the third round lead in the $50,000 Memphis Open golf tournament Saturday with nine-under-par 201s.

For Casper, leader after two rounds at eight-under-par, it was a matter of hanging on under the pressure of 66s by Sanders and Littler, and a 67 by Souchak. Casper had a one-under-par 69.

Sanders and Souchak closed with five birdies each on the back nine and caught Casper and Littler on the 18th green. Casper and Littler got their decisive birdies on the long 16th hole.

The 201 score after 54 holes is the lowest on the tour this year.

Mason Rudolph fired a 66 to take second place with 202.

Bruce Devlin, Tommy Jacobs and defending champion Tony Lema were bunched at 203, while Johnny Pott and Art Wall Jr., were three strokes back at 204.

Casper, the portly 32-year-old putting ace played better than his 69 indicated. He was nine-under after 11 holes, slipped down a notch on 12 and made it nine for good on 16 with a chip shot out of tall rough that stopped one foot from the pin.

Arnold Palmer came back under par with a 68 to bring his total to 207, while Jack Nicklaus came under par for the first time with an impressive 66 for 208.

Hockey Sponsor Discouraged

OTTAWA (CP)—Past President Art Potter of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association said Saturday the association likely will not accept the offer of a private group to finance a Canadian world hockey team.

"We (the CAHA) have made our own arrangements and we will organize our own team," he said.

Mr. Potter was commenting upon the offer of Harold Ribson, recreation director of Wallaceburg, Ont., who said a private organization is willing to undertake all expenses on condition that a television network make available its facilities for two hours and that Maple Leaf Gardens in Toronto make its facilities available for one evening at no charge.

"We haven't discussed it yet so we don't know whether we'll simply thank him for his offer or ask him to go ahead and get the television time and the Gardens, which I doubt that he can do, and then talk to him." Mr. Potter said.

Smokey Wins Shoot

Smokey Green, ex-Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry sharpshooter, shot a perfect 50 in his first lie-down, slipped slightly to 46 in his second round, but still won yesterday's Victoria and District Rifle Association shooting competition at Heal's Range.

Green's total score of 96 was one better than Ron Morrison and A. Spittal who each had a 95.

Next weekend there is a two-day shoot for the Overseas Day and T. Eaton Company trophies. This completes shooting in preparation for the provincial championships to be held in Vancouver June 6-13.

Getting Tourists Goats?

By LYNNE WALLER

NANAIMO — A local Jaycee leader says his organization is interested in reintroducing Rocky Mountain wild goats to the glaciers of Vancouver Island as a tourist attraction.

Ron MacIsaac suggested the animals would have to be protected from hunters by game laws.

"The glaciers of Vancouver Island are presently uninhabited by any animals. Vancouver Island has very few mammals compared with the mainland," he said.

"It is difficult to find an animal which can be safely introduced to a region without also introducing its natural enemies, for example, the rabbits of Australia and the starlings of New York City.

"The only natural enemy of the mountain goat is the cougar and we have them already. Rocky Mountain goats are beautiful creatures . . . they don't infringe on farmlands, destroy timber or interfere with fish."

A small herd of mountain goats was introduced on Vancouver Island at Nanoose Bay in 1937. A billy and three nannies lived successfully for several generations but because of their small beginning were unable to produce in large enough numbers to survive.

Island wild life experts have not seen the animals for more than 15 years and believe them to be extinct.

Percy Dewar of Extension, a commercial guide, said he thought the animals could be successfully introduced if they were brought over in larger numbers.

His brother Jim, who accompanied him on a successful cougar hunt Saturday afternoon, agreed but said a scientific investigation would be helpful.

The Dewar brothers spent the afternoon hunting a cougar that had killed a prize ram owned by a farmer in the Cassidy area. They described it as an uneventful hunt.

Career Carved Out of Stone

By KEN JOHNSON

English teacher Kenneth Bloomfield has been carving out a spare-time career over the past two years — in solid stone.

A staff member at Victoria High, Mr. Bloomfield, 10947 Madrona Drive, Deep Cove, spends his leisure hours as a sculptor.

He's been working in clay and wood carvings for the past 15 to 20 years, but within the last two years, Mr. Bloomfield has been developing his talents as a sculptor in stone.

Some of his work in white sandstone can be seen as background accessories at the Wooded Wonderland off Patricia Bay Highway.

More can be seen in the garden around his home.

HUNK OF ROCK

He can chisel out a face in a hunk of rock in about 15 hours.

"I try to look for features in a piece of stone before I start carving," he said. "Then I begin carving and let the stone's natural characteristics dictate the main features or lines of whatever I'm working on."

Power Squadron Banquet June 3

Annual banquet of the Victoria Power Squadron will be held June 3 at the Ingraham Hotel.

Guests will include Rear-Admiral W. M. Landymore, flag officer, Pacific Coast, and Rear-Admiral R. D. Schmidpman, of the U.S. Coast Guard.

Power squadron certificates will be awarded to new members who have passed the piloting examination.

Bantam Conference

Football Clinic Slated

NANAIMO — How not to get your teeth kicked in while playing football will be one of the topics at the convention of the B.C. Bantam Football Conference here June 5, 6 and 7.

Dr. Rudi Warshawski, a representative of the British Columbia Dental Association, will attend the three-day coaches' clinic to demonstrate methods of preventing dental injuries during games.

In past years the clinic was sponsored by the B.C. Lions and held at UBC but this year the executive of the provincial bantam football conference is running the show with the assistance of the Lions.

The conference is dedicated to the promotion of Canadian football for boys 13 to 15 and up to 160 pounds. The annual clinics are held to keep coaches, referees and other officials up to date on regulations, safeguards against injuries and training methods.

Duncan

Wide Support Asked For Family Service

DUNCAN—Public support is the first major need of the new Duncan and District Family Emergency Service Association, officials said yesterday.

They urged all service clubs and other groups in the district to send representatives of the first community-wide meeting, in the Margaret Moss health centre at 8 p.m. Monday.

Spokesman Mrs. H. R. Day says a brief prepared by the Courtenay public health department on a similar service in Courtenay will be read to the meeting.

She said the experience of the Courtenay group was that the most difficult part of the service was to get it started.

City and municipal representatives will attend the meeting.

Support Red Ensign

Tories Want Vote On Flag Issue

NANAIMO — The executive of the B.C. Progressive Conservative Association went on record at a quarterly meeting Saturday as favoring the Red Ensign but urging a national referendum to solve the controversial flag issue.

Voting on the question should be recorded in such a way that it would not indicate results by provinces or regions, the association said.

FRENCH PROBLEM

Mary Southin, who proposed the resolution, said: "The French problem will always be with us. We must learn to live with it."

The association also decided to oppose B.C. government ownership of any shares in the proposed Bank of British Columbia.

OUT OF BANKING

Malcolm Wickson, provincial chairman of resolutions committee, said: "We feel the government should keep out of banking business, otherwise it could lead to an unfair control of economics."

The association also decided to form a committee for study of provincial department of fisheries.

Duncan

1,000 Watch Graduation

DUNCAN — About 1,000 people jammed the auditorium of Cowichan Senior Secondary School Friday night to witness this year's graduation ceremonies for 140 senior students.

The valedictorian was John Morton, son of North Cowichan Reeve Donald Morton. He was the winner of a $500 MacMillan, Bloedel and Powell River scholarship.

CLASS INTRODUCED

School principal Richard Lendrum made the opening remarks and vice-principal E. A. Goddard introduced the graduation class. Guest speaker was provincial archivist Willard Ireland of Victoria.

The ceremony included performances by the new Cowichan Senior Secondary School band, the Quamichan Junior Secondary choir, and four girls from the Cowichan school district who will go on world tour this summer with the Vancouver Elgar Choir.

HONORS WON

Graduating students who won awards were Vicki Joyce, Cowichan Registered Nurses' Association bursary; Odean Long, Dogwood IODE bursary; Katherine France, Legion bursary; Susan Sterling, Business and Professional Women's Club bursary; Colin Stafford, Cowichan PTA scholarship; William Wilson, Hospital Employees' Union scholarship and Nordahl Flakstad, McKenzie Logging scholarship.

Grade 11 students who arranged the affair were Brenda Stone, Pam Langlois, James Barker, Colin Tassin, Reta Paquette and Gay Taylor.

Rummage Sale

The Silver Threads Service will hold a rummage sale at 10 a.m. Friday at 643 Broughton Street. Anyone wishing to donate used clothing or other articles is asked to bring them to the centre.

In Saanich Council

Garbage Dump to Be Aired

The Hartland Road garbage dump is going to get a thorough airing—in Saanich council.

Saanich Reeve Stanley Murphy said last night the health and welfare committee of council will likely consider together a further report on the dump from Greater Victoria metropolitan health officer Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread and representations from the Prospect Lake and District Community Association.

"I think it will be useful to air it thoroughly," the reeve said. The pun was unintentional.

The community association says that, among a number of other noxious things, the dump is adding to pollution of the watershed which includes Prospect Lake. Dr. Whitbread says it isn't.

The association recently hired a Victoria engineering firm and a Vancouver laboratory to investigate its claim, and said the firms' findings bore out the claim.

Dr. Whitbread recently said the association had "misinterpreted" the firms' findings. The association says the findings speak for themselves.

IWA Meetings Today

Biggest Locals Oppose Peace Formula

Leaders of two of the biggest IWA locals in B.C., the 4,000-member Duncan-Nanaimo local and the 7,000-member Vancouver unit, yesterday opposed the settlement formula for the coast lumber contract dispute.

Jubenville

Both locals plan executive meetings today which are expected to approve recommendations that the membership reject the formula at early general meetings.

MEETING TODAY

In Victoria, IWA financial secretary Ed Haw announced last night the 1,650 members of Local 1-118 have been called to a meeting at noon today at 715 Johnson Street to consider the formula.

Indications were the Victoria men would be asked to approve the formula for 28 cents an hour in a two-year contract, plus 15 cents for tradesmen.

FAR SHORT

Duncan - Nanaimo president Weldon Jubenville said the formula "falls far short" of the demand for a 40-cent boost in a one-year contract.

He said it also ignores the main demand for travelling time. Mr. Jubenville said the loggers receive eight hours' pay but are under company supervision for 10 hours.

40-CENT DEMAND

He claimed the companies can meet the 40-cent demand because of "fantastic and outrageous" profits last year, which this year "will be even larger."

30 Fired

Wildcat Strikers Replaced By Firm

CAMPBELL RIVER—A new crew has been flown in from Vancouver to replace 30 pipefitters who have been fired after staging a wildcat strike at a nearby construction project.

The 30 members of the Plumbers, Pipefitters and Steamfitters Union were dismissed after ignoring two union orders to go back to work.

ELK FALLS

They were protesting "inferior" living conditions in a camp at the Crown Zellerbach division plant at Elk Falls.

Picket lines set up by the pipefitters and honored by 250 men belonging to other unions caused a work stoppage on the $38,000,000 addition to the Elk Falls plant.

NEW CAMP

J. L. Fisher, assistant business manager of Local 170 in Vancouver, said the union did not support the strike because a contract signed a month ago provided for construction of a new camp at the site by July 1.

The pipefitters, working on a recovery boiler, were employed by Babcock, Wilcox and Goldie McCulloch of Vancouver.

Whaling

Scientists Going To Norway

NANAIMO — Two Nanaimo scientists will attend meetings of the International Whaling Commission in Norway late in June.

Gordon Pike and K. R. Allen, who will begin work at the biological station June 1, will represent Canada at the meetings. Dr. Peter Larkin, manager of the station, says Canada will be particularly interested in the increasing harvest rate of whales in the North Pacific.

ONLY STATION

Coal Harbor on the north end of Vancouver Island is Canada's only whaling station. More than 700 whales a year is Canada's average catch and these are processed for their oil. Some of the meat is processed for animal consumption.

Dr. Larkin said the reason for the increasing catch is the decline of stock in the water of Antarctica. Japan and Russia are the countries most interested in the northern Pacific harvest.

REGULATIONS

The scientists will assist in writing international whaling regulations. Mr. Allen is a special member of a committee investigating the decline of the Antarctic whale stock.

Fatality Driver Careless

LAKE COWICHAN — A juvenile boy from Youbou was sentenced in juvenile court Thursday on a charge resulting from a fatal traffic accident April 11, it was learned yesterday.

The boy drove a car which struck and killed Denise Lynn, 3, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Bremner of Youbou, in front of her home.

He pleaded guilty to careless driving and was put on one year's probation. His driver's licence was suspended for a year.

A coroner's jury earlier ruled the boy had been negligent in his operation of the car.

Ten Strikers Hurt in Peru

LIMA, Peru (AP) — Ten persons were injured as police ousted sitdown strikers from a score of metal-working plants Monday. There were 70 arrests. The workers, demanding increased wages, had occupied the plants and in one held other employees, including 20 women, as hostages.

Waitress Training Albernis Course

PORT ALBERNI — A two-week training course for waitresses is being offered to 20 Alberni Valley women between the ages of 17 and 35, according to an announcement from officials of the National Employment Service and the Alberni school district.

The course of 10 evening classes is scheduled to begin June 8 in Alberni District Secondary School. Instruction will be given through facilities of the education department's tourist services branch.

Each class will be from 4 p.m. until midnight, giving students working time equivalent to a regular eight-hour shift.

APPLY IMMEDIATELY

Those wishing to apply for enrolment are asked to contact the National Employment Service office immediately.

Training will include customer greetings, setting and clearing of tables, serving food and beverages, making simple desserts, tea and coffee, ordering from the kitchen and making out customers' bills.

More Going To Alaska

JUNEAU (AP) — The Good Friday earthquake has not hurt Alaska's tourist trade, says Al Ritchie, traffic manager for the Southeast Alaska marine highway system. He says the system's passenger traffic so far this year is nearly double 1963 figures.

B.C. Festival This Week

Distant Drama Drops Out

NANAIMO — One faraway group has had to drop out of the B.C. drama festival here Wednesday to Saturday and a second may have to follow, festival officials announced yesterday.

They also gave the schedule of performances and said the adjudicator will be Gordon Peacock of Edmonton, a director, theatre designer and teacher of drama at the University of Alberta.

TRAVEL COST

The Cariboo Players, who planned to present the comedy-drama Fumed Oak, withdrew because some players could not get time off from their jobs and the cost of transportation was too high.

Similar trouble faces the Vernon Little Theatre, which is listed for Twelfth Night, the festival's only Shakespeare play.

SIX OF SEVEN

The Vernon group, which won six of the seven awards in its zone festival, was striving at last report to raise $750 so it could get to Nanaimo.

The festival will centre around the Shoreline Motor Hotel and the program is:

- Wednesday—Serenade to a Corpse, Mt. St. Peter's Players, Nanaimo; A Light in the Window, Emerald Players, Vancouver; The Hole, Theatre Guild, Victoria.
- Thursday—Joint Owners in Spain, Little Theatre, Ladysmith; Twelfth Night, Little Theatre, Vernon; Fumed Oak, Brisco Players, East Kootenays; The Devil His Due, Little Theatre, Courtenay.
- Friday — The Browning Version, Little Theatre, Nelson; Impromptu, Civic Centre Little Theatre, Prince Rupert; The Bespoke Overcoat, Espece Players, Peace River.
- Saturday — Honor performances and awards.

During the festival, members of the B.C. Drama Association will meet to discuss a new constitution which has been three years in the making.

Two Farm Meetings End School Survey

Two farmer's meetings will be held this week in the southern Island to conclude a B.C. Federation of Agriculture survey on what should be included in agricultural education.

The federation has held such meetings throughout B.C. so it can let the provincial and federal governments know what farmers want in agricultural training at the high school and adult education levels.

The meetings will be held in the Cobble Hill community hall Wednesday and the Keating Institute Hall Thursday, both at 8 p.m.

After a Brief Stop in British Guiana

The Vincents Head for Home

Driving from the airport into Georgetown, along a causeway bisecting the swampy semi-jungle, we wondered about the clusters of red, white and occasionally green pennants that fluttered from tall bamboo poles before many of the shacks, built on stilts, that fringed our route.

At first we thought they must have political significance, but our soft-spoken Negro driver soon enlightened us. They were prayer flags, erected by members of the large East Indian population. These were about the only non-political symbols we encountered during our stay in British Guiana.

Much of Georgetown itself is, in appearance, a colonial museum piece. There are modern housing developments out towards the suburb delightfully called Kitty Village and wealthy homes built largely by the East Indian traders, and politicians. Fringes of slum dwellings are scattered along the canals which drain the below-sea-level alluvial flats on which the town sits. But Main Street, with its grassy boulevards and shade trees, bordered by big, old-fashioned, white, frame houses adorned with colored shutters, which look like homes and are often offices, has a slightly decayed yet dignified sort of country air.

Blue-clad sentries of the British Guiana Defence Force stand stiffly before the gateway to the lovely grounds of Government House where the Union Jack flies from one of the tallest poles in the world. St. George's Cathedral is the biggest wooden building in the Americas. The Town Hall is reminiscent of a gingerbread castle. Bicycles dominate the roads. You drive on the left.

For those socially and amorously inclined, there's the Conversation Tree and the Kissing Bridge, where ladies must pay the obvious fee. Sunday is a delight, with hundreds of pretty, coal-black piccaninnies in frilly starched dresses, their stiff, plaited pigtails sticking out from beneath white bonnets, trotting solemnly to church with their picturesquely-dressed and ample mammies. The Negroes, who total close to half the population, are courteous in manner, their often almost incomprehensible speech something like that of the Deep South in the U.S.A., tinged with an English accent.

The pace of business is pleasantly sleepy, with everything closed through the intensely hot midday hours.

But underneath there is ferment. We soon sensed it. The bitter political slogans of the contending parties, scrawled everywhere on walls, drove the impression home.

"We never hated each other before—The politicians have done it!" Time and again we were thus assured by members of the three major non-white groups that make up the mass of the population. Be that as it may, Hindus, Muslims and Negroes wage increasingly bloody feuds against each other, with independence, racial rights and labor problems all befuddled with racial bitterness. There have been savage riots and part of the town was burned in 1962. Now independence has been postponed pending new elections sometime this year, under a system of proportional representation, to the evident relief of many Guianians. British troops are unobtrusively present to prevent the rival factions from cutting each other's throats, while Dr. Jagan's left-wing government, kept in power by the East Indian vote, refused to greet the new Governor, who arrived just before we got there.

Another arrival and a remarkable coincidence led to a happy meeting for the Vincents. A local daily interviewed us. Looking to see what they'd said, our eyes caught a report that Del Carlson, the new United States Consul-General, had just arrived, accompanied by his wife. At the same time the Carlsons, reading the report about themselves, noticed the one about us. He was American Consul in Vancouver in the mid-1950s and they are among our close friends; but we'd thought they were in Washington, D.C., while they only knew we were somewhere in South America. Simultaneous grabs for the 'phone and five minutes of clashing busy signals before we got through to each other ended in a grand reunion, with overtones of nostalgic west coast recollections.

British Guiana's currency is the British West Indies dollar — the "BIWI" — roughly worth two-thirds of its Canadian counterpart. Living costs we found high for the visiting tourist who might be fussy. The few passably good hotels are expensive, even by Canadian standards. But you needn't suffer, especially if you like Brussels sprouts. In Georgetown we've happily stuffed ourselves on them, boiled potatoes, puddings, roast beef and every kind of good, old-fashioned Anglo-Saxon stodge that kindly Mrs. King, who runs "The Grill," could lay before us, despite the 100 degree heat. Her oddly-named, old-fashioned frame boarding house, like most old homes in the colony, has bedroom walls that rise no more than two-thirds of the way to the high ceilings. You can hear your neighbor park his dentures in the tumbler. Furnishings and plumbing hardly reach Ritz standards. But the beds are clean, interesting folk of every color and creed from the four corners of the world meet in the Victorian living room, and it was less than $8 a day for all of us for food and lodging.

GEORGE VINCENT
CANADA to CAPE HORN
XLVIII

Our time in British Guiana was short, less than a week as we sought a cheap ship-passage to Trinidad. We visited the Botanical Gardens, with their magnificent palms, orchids and ponds of Victoria Regina and lotus lilies and the picturesquely hideous Starbroek Market, built of iron; contacted old Alcan friends in Georgetown and the Company's bauxite town, Mackenzie, 60 miles up the Demerara River. As for the children, what greater delight than to be let loose on a mountain of yellow sugar as high as a two-storey building, in the Demerara Sugar Company's refinery, only equalled by their indignation when their sticky fingers were finally dragged away!

AT SEA
Off Trinidad

A bauxite ship on the "milk run" from Mackenzie to Trinidad emerged, at short notice, as the answer to our transport problem. Before we left, we met yet another new arrival, the Honorable Milton Gregg, V.C., first Canadian Commissioner to British Guiana. (It's still technically a Colony at the moment, hence no "High," as yet, in the title!) To us this courteous and wise gentleman will always symbolize the best that Canada can send to represent her abroad. Still busy settling into his far from easy post in this country where Canada's aluminum industry has so big a stake, nobody could have been kinder to us, or more thoughtful in the things he did to help us on our way. We've promised him a report on how the trout fishing looks, when we get home.

So our last day in South America came. Waiting at the little customs dock in the dark of the tropical night—the ship was hours late coming down the river—and praying that our battered baggage would hold together for our last stretch, it was difficult to believe that, with those two small creatures perched, wakeful and wide-eyed on the suitcases, we had indeed made our way around and through this gigantic continent, were back on Commonwealth territory, with "rum watching" listed on the duty board below the Queen's picture above the customs inspector's desk.

Out of the darkness came puttering the launch to take us to the ship, just anchored in the stream. We sailed in the early morning, today, Saint Patricks Day, exactly one year since we started our adventure.

Young Rory Patrick has woken up. Sits up in his bunk with the devil and all in his eye. And we know there's another Irishman, the red-haired third officer, now on watch. And when he comes off, we're going to celebrate. Trinidad tomorrow. Then, just one more good break and, perhaps because of Irish luck, the wandering Vincents will be home free!

IN GEORGETOWN, British Guiana, Mandy admired the giant Victoria Regina lily pads.

Greeks Had a Word for It

Cyprus has contributed much unsolicited bloodshed and violence to history in the past few years.

The Greeks fought with skill and fury against the peace-keeping forces of the British Army until the achievement of independence following the conferences of 1959 and 1960, and the gradual withdrawal of British forces from the island which had been a Crown colony since 1914.

Peace was short-lived. The tensions between Greek and the Turkish minority burst into battle, and once again British soldiers were sent to attempt to restore the peace.

Recently they have been joined by Canadians and various lesser groups from nominated member-nations of the UN.

In the following article* R. A. SABELL, *now living at 930 Grilse Lane, Brentwood, tells of his tour of duty as a British soldier on the island when the Greeks were goaded by their leaders into attacking their erstwhile British friends.

'TOMMY, GO HOME!' THEIR BATTLE CRY

Everyone was lined against the rail as the troopship dropped anchor off the ancient walled city of Famagusta, Cyprus, on a warm, bright morning in May, 1955. Not one of us knew a thing about Cyprus except that it had to be a lot better than Egypt. After a year in the Canal Zone anything else would have to be better.

The landing craft were waiting for us and very soon we were churning our way toward the docks.

Cyprus at this time was what was termed a "cushy" posting—no hint of the conflict to come was yet in evidence. The people were friendly and seemed to like us, but one thing we noticed almost at once was the separation of the Greek and Turkish Cypriots. They lived and worshipped as separate communities. In the towns the Greeks and Turks had their own quarters; in the country there were Turkish villages and Greek villages, but they all seemed to get along, in fact to the troops from Egypt the whole island presented a peaceful, story-book scene.

Cyprus is an idyllic island, a picturesque, historic place, about 200 miles long and 50 wide, a smiling land within its circle of sandy beaches. The Troodos mountains in the centre rise to a majestic 8,000 feet, heavily wooded and in the winter mantled with snow.

After a day's skiing we drove down and swam in the blue Mediterranean or went scuba diving in the sunken city of Salamis where we would swim up and down the ancient streets of the town, populated now with the odd octopus and schools of brilliantly colored fish. We enjoyed ourselves those first few months. The night clubs did a roaring trade and the historic castles and towns rang with the shouts and laughter of British soldiers.

There are quite a number of ancient Byzantine castles on the island but St. Hilarion castle, perched on its eyrie, 4,000 feet above Kyrenia, is by far the most impressive. The castle guards the only route through Kyrenia Pass, gateway to the east coast below.

For five months the soldiers of the British Army enjoyed this Mediterranean playground until one night, returning from a movie in town, John Rich, of my company, was shot through the head.

The next morning there were riots in Nicosia, Famagusta and Limassol and all that week there were bombings against army personnel in all parts of the island. Our paradise had turned to hell. Restrictions were made immediately on all unnecessary troop movements but being in a transport unit I saw most of what was going on in various parts of the island.

The riots were quite an experience. I remember one in Famagusta. We were waiting for a convoy to come from the docks. The street was deserted—a bad sign—when suddenly empty bottles started flying into the roadway from the roof of a church. Immediately the street began to fill with women and children. Then a whistle blew, and before you could say Jack Robinson six trucks of the infantry riot squad screeched to a halt and disgorged 60 weirdly dressed soldiers. They all wore gas masks, carried round, wire shields and short truncheons. Except for the gas masks you could easily have thought that once again a Roman cohort was marching through the old city.

By this time the men of the town had put in an appearance behind the women and were throwing rocks, garbage and abuse at the troops.

The British officer in charge casually lifted what looked like a blunderbuss—a cloud of white smoke obliterated the mob for a few minutes. I could hear a few screams, a crash and a great deal of commotion, then the smoke cleared away leaving nothing but an overturned cart and an empty street. The riot squad climbed back into their trucks and that was the end of my first riot.

The orders so far had been to fire over the heads of the Greeks if attacked but this was changed after the "E.O.K.A." terrorists set fire to the woods during an army manoeuvre and burned to death 30 infantrymen and five drivers.

A small booklet was issued to each man then instructing him in what conditions he should open fire and at the bottom of the list were the words in heavy black print, SHOOT TO KILL. Every soldier on the island was put on

by IAN SCOTT

She's Heading for New Guinea

HELEN WALTERS is 20 years old, a personable young woman with a large ambition. Before it can be realized she has four years of preparatory work to complete. But she is now embarked on the great adventure.*

Just what is it? "Well, you've heard of flying doctors. I'm going to be a flying nurse."

The objective is a trifle unusual in itself, but add to that her choice of fields of operation and it becomes unique. She plans to do her flying-nursing in the missionary field of West Irian, an area known for its natural hazards and climatic discomforts to the men who fought the war in New Guinea. Helen is aware of them; and she is in no way dismayed.

First things first, however, says she. She has another year to go to get her teacher's certificate for religious education from the Miller Memorial Bible Institute, in remote Pembroke, Sask., and another three years in nursing school. But in the meantime she's learning to fly.

That isn't work; it's pleasure.

"It's a sort of reward," her father, Vince, said. "She's worked hard and still works hard and she deserves it. So the flying lessions are a birthday present."

It was a bright, smiling Sunday that Helen took her first instructional flight with Gordon Jeune of Victoria Flying Services. But the morning was no more dazzling than the young woman who climbed into the cabin of the little Cessna. She wasn't exactly a stranger to the environment. She'd flown with her father and her mother. Was she nervous? Not a bit. And when she landed after an hour in the air she was sparkling with delight. And hungry!

So she and Vince borrowed the Cessna to run across the airport the short way and get breakfast at the coffee shop in the air terminal building.

"It takes half an hour to drive around in a car," she explained.

Vince Walters has been flying since 1957 and his wife, Paula, since 1960.

"I didn't learn until I had brought up four children and I was over forty," she volunteered. She has some 400 hours flying time.

Vince's business is electrical appliance repairs and flying is his hobby and his relaxation.

"I figure, if you add it all together, I've flown about two and a half times around the world," he said.

"We've owned three Aeroncas," he went on, "and have had tremendous enjoyment out of flying them.

"Adventures? Well flying is always an adventure. But there was one occasion when the adventure was a little hair-raising. Another chap and I were flying home from a hunting trip when our engine packed up. I had three choices: to come down in Harmac village, or into the timber, or ditch in the chuck.

"I put her down in the sea, about 25 feet from shore, and I'm told it was a classic ditching—tail down and easing to a landing. The only damage to the aircraft was from salt water. We hardly got our feet wet."

Unfortunately, however, it was Vince's companion's very first flight. He was not impressed.

Elder brother, Ted, had come over from Vancouver to see Helen off on her first in-

by C. B. FISHER

DOYEN OF SALESMEN

45 Years in His Job

There's always been a feeling in this country that a salesman's life is a reasonably good life. Andrew Mellin seems to reflect that observation. After 54 years in the exciting field of automobiles he is as fresh as the Jaguar XKE he sells today.

In the broad field of transportation the car, with its continuing refinements, has developed beyond anyone's expectations, and Mellin has experienced a good bit of that growth as a mechanic, garage proprietor, salesman and executive.

The auto industry hasn't sat on its laurels; it's amongst the most lively and creative in the world. Transportation has improved, until today cars are masterpieces of engineering and design. It wasn't always so, for in early days driving was often an uncertain adventure.

Andrew de M. Mellin was born in Norwood, near London, on Dec. 18, 1894. When only six months old his parents brought him to Duncan, where they had a 150-acre farm called The Fens, beside Somenos Lake. Duncan was a buggy and bicycle town then, quiet and peaceful. There were no electric lights, no telephones and sometimes it was hard to get a doctor. The dentist, when he drilled teeth, used a foot treadle for power.

It was a great place for a growing boy. Andrew went to camp at the mouth of the Cowichan River and with the crudest line caught all the salmon he needed. When the larder was low he took the odd pot shot at game. He attended the little red schoolhouse on Lakes Road and later Quamichan Lake Private School. There were plenty of chores after school, like chopping wood, milking cows and mending broken fences.

Mellin is still in love with the Cowichan area.

"I'm still in love with it. It's one of the most beautiful places that happened," says he.

The mechanically-minded Andrew moved to Vancouver and was apprenticed to the ABC Motors and Marine. This firm had the agency for Brooks marine engines and Tudhope cars and sold some of the early Packards in Vancouver. The engine of the 1910 Packard was so well built that it could hold its compression all night and fire up from the ignition switch in the morning.

Later Andrew returned to the island and started work with what is now Stewart's Marine and Repair Shop at Cowichan Bay. Later he moved to Victoria and worked for Armstrong Auto Repairs. Then the 19-year-old entered partnership with a Mr. Longhurst, opening a repair business on Courtney Street, near the Union Club. They called it the Union Garage, a name that didn't sit too well with one or two members of the day.

Mellin picked up a 1911 Cadillac and operated it for hire. Expenses were heavy. Tires cost $75 each and had to be pumped by hand. The carbide tanks for headlights frequently had to be refueled. And it took a pocket Hercules to crank it on a cold morning. He charged $5 an hour and did so well he bought a second.

In the crisis of a breakdown a man had to be resourceful.

"I was making a trip to Brentwood one stormy night," Mellin recalls. "The gauge on the carbide tank was not accurate and the lights went out. I went to a farmhouse, borrowed a lantern, attached it to the front of the car and came into town at eight miles per hour."

War came in 1914 and Andrew's father, Captain Harry Mellin, left to join his old regiment in England. Young Mellin tried repeatedly to enlist but was turned down because of a "lazy eye," a category-lowering condition.

"As all my friends were in, I decided to take a gamble," Andrew recalls. "On Jan. 27, 1915, I married "Bobbie" Maclure, the daughter of Sam Maclure, the architect. I sold my business and cars and took my wife to England. I knew I might have trouble but I was fortunate enough to have a recommendation from Col. Roome of Cowichan to a top official in the War Office. On learning of my experience on car engines, which few had, they sent me to the Army Service Mechanical Transport for a medical."

The need for more manpower was already growing urgent. English doctors worked around the clock. Mellin was determined to get in, and with some finger manipulation around his eyes managed to pass. From then on things moved quickly. He was sent to Grove Park, near Woolwich, for basic training; promoted to captain and put in charge of all mechanical equipment of the 20th Division A.L. Supply Column. A division consisted of 20,000 men in those days.

"Things looked bright," Mellin recalled. "My wife was young and full of pep like myself. She got a job in the War Office."

The next three years the division moved in France from Ypres to the Somme, facing bombardments and a never-ending line of repairs. In 1917 Mellin was invalided back to England and hospitalized with a lung condition. Afterwards he was posted to light duty at Norwood, as the company commander; then moved to the Currah Camp at Dublin. On Oct. 1, 1918, he was invalided out and made preparations to return to Canada.

One week later Captain Mellin and his wife embarked on the Leinster, a small channel steamer, for England. The officials felt the boat was safe from subs and it was unescorted. It was crammed with civilians and armed forces personnel.

"My wife was a great deal more sensible than I. She didn't want to embark and finally insisted on life jackets," Mellin recalled. "Half way over, in a heavy storm, there was a thud as if the ship had hit a stone barrier. A torpedo had ripped through the bow. We put on our life jackets."

Five minutes later another torpedo hit amidships, tearing the 3,000-ton wooden vessel in two. The Mellins were in the stern end and realized there was little time; the quicker off the ship, the better.

"Bobbie" Mellin went first. Half way down she lost her grip and fell into the sea, just missing a life boat that had swung out. With the next wave it came crashing against the hull and Captain Mellin looked down in horror.

"I felt that she must have been crushed to death. I lowered myself and jumped into the water. By some miracle we came up close together. I grabbed her and we floundered over to an empty life boat and held on to the life line below the gunwhale. She complained she couldn't use her left arm. The boat was half-full of water and a dozen of us clung to the life-rope."

The storm roared and the water was bitterly cold. Men let go one by one. The Mellins held on grimly.

"My wife began to weaken," Mellin recalled. "I pulled her against the boat, then forced my leg under the life line and in a horizontal position grabbed the rope beyond her and held her against the side."

Mellin tried again and again to get into the boat but his jacket was too cumbersome while the boat careened in the heavy seas. Soon there were only three on the life line, the Mellins and a young man.

Vault was Blown, the Cash in Hand

BUT GET-AWAY CAR JUST WOULDN'T BUDGE

While over in New Westminster the other afternoon I spent a thoughtful half hour retracing the getaway route of "McNamara's Band." Which meant I started at the Bank of Montreal at Columbia and Church and meandered up through the cloisters of century-old Trinity Church, mounted a flight of steps into Carnarvon Street and turned east. No wooden bridge over the ravine now; it's filled up and a whacking big high-rise faces it.

At Fourth Street I plodded the six uphill blocks to Royal Avenue. On the way the thought occurred to me that McNamara wouldn't know the place now, what with all these rows of high-rise apartments, swimming pools and what not.

feature

At Royal Avenue I had a hard time convincing myself how once the plank sidewalks had been shaded by rows of big walnut trees, and that just around the corner from 4th had stood the barn-like structure in which Tom Trapp kept his brand new shiny McLaughlin. He also kept a horse and a cow in the stable next door, so you can imagine it was a bit rural. Though he was the first Canadian McLaughlin - Buick dealer west of the Great Lakes he preferred to ride a horse!

Standing at the corner of 4th and Royal I thought of the morning of Sept. 15, 1911, when just after daybreak, McNamara and his three pals appeared. Apart from a rooster crowing occasionally, there was no sound of life, and after a quick glance up and down the street, the quartet swung open the garage doors, released the hand brake and rolled the grey-painted touring car into the street and down the block about a hundred and fifty feet in the direction of the YMCA. A quick adjustment of the spark and throttle on the steering wheel quadrant, and MacNamara heaved at the crank handle. Nothing happened. He heaved again, and again. He could have saved his energy for one of the Trapp boys had removed the wire from the switch to the coil the night before.

AS McNAMARA PUFFED and heaved, and his pals gave advice, along came teamster Donald Ferguson, heading for his employer's barns on the other side of Tipperary Park. Donald, four years out from Scotland, was a conscientious type and always fed his horses at 6 a.m. However, like everyone else in those days, he could always find time to stop and watch a motorist in difficulties. He stopped, and he watched, and he took in everything about MacNamara. He didn't get much of a look at McNamara's companions, they being on the other side of the car and the top obscured their faces.

And how did Donald know the time? Seems he had a room in a cheap hotel on Front Street, down by the river, and every morning when he reached Columbia street he always checked his watch with the clock in Chamberlin's jewelry store; it always said 20 minutes to 6, and he was always at the barn at six.

He watched McNamara's efforts for about a minute or so, then crossed Royal Avenue to take his usual shortcut through Tipperary Park. Which was about the time the would-be motorists decided to forget the whole thing, and they vanished.

If this ineffectual attempt at car theft seems hardly worthy of relating, it'll surprise you to know that for the ensuing 18 months, Mac and his boys were the most hard-sought criminals on the continent, with an enormous price on their heads. Still more curious was the fact that when McNamara was eventually tried in New Westminster—a week-long court battle involving 47 witnesses—he got nine years in the penitentiary for "breaking and entering and theft of an automobile." Which you'll admit seems a bit stiff, seeing he only took it 150 feet and never put a scratch on it. However, there was more to it than that—much more.

THE MAN WHO TOOK this rap, known to his friends as "Big John," "Australian Mac" and occasionally "Chicago Jack," attracted not the slightest notice when he appeared in Vancouver in June, 1911, and just as discreetly slipped away around the middle of October. During his stay, however, he not only masterminded the biggest bank robbery in B.C. history but in addition was the first to use an automobile in a getaway; for despite the fact that Mr. Trapp's car failed him, somehow he managed to get hold of another.

The nickname "Big Mac" was no idle figure of speech for he was about six feet two, and pushed the scales to 250 pounds whenever he weighed in; which was usually in a charge office. Though bulky he was always neat and conservative in his dress, which of course went with his character. Mac was the executive type. He proved it that summer of 1911 when he first contacted a real estate dealer called Burton and rented a furnished house at the corner of Broadway and Pine for friends of his coming up from Los Angeles to spend the summer. They duly appeared, a Mr. and Mrs. Dean, with two small daughters and a couple of thoroughbred bull terriers. In the weeks that followed, McNamara, though he had an hotel room down town, often visited the Deans, the group going out on picnics (to Brockton Point) to the races (at Minoru Park), and often in the warm summer evenings neighbors looking across the lane from West 8th could see through open windows Mrs. Dean at the piano accompanying her husband's violin, while the portly Mr. McNamara played with the children in the garden, or maybe took the bull terriers for a walk. You could have learned some of this from Mr. Bartig, not only because the Deans shopped at his grocery at 8th and Granville, but because he was also their nearest neighbor. Besides, Bartig was interested in dogs. He used to raise bull terriers, and he knew a thoroughbred when he saw one. He used to chat to Mr. McNamara about them.

SOME THINGS, of course, Mr. Bartig didn't know; he didn't know for instance that the slim-built and dapper Mr. Dean was about the best safeblower on the Pacific Coast. That the slight limp that Mr. Dean occasionally betrayed was the result of a professional accident when a half pint of highly critical nitre blew. He and a pal were retrieving "soup" from dynamite near Spokane one evening when Mr. Dean's partner was a total loss and Dean got his limp.

Nor did Mr. Bartig know that the musical the dog-loving trio were also making mental book on the Bank of Montreal at the corner of Church and Columbia in New Westminster; laying 8 to 5 that they'd be inside the vault by September 14!

In preparation for this event Mrs. Dean had opened an account in the bank which gave her the opportunity to occasionally stand around and take in the scene. McNamara and her husband meanwhile busied themselves collecting other information, such as the make-up of New Westminster's police force, each man's beat, and when and how many times a policeman passed the bank after midnight. Police headquarters was only fifty yards from the bank so they had to be considered! They also knew the bank manager's name, how many worked in the bank (17), who worked late and when, and the habits of the youthful clerk who was supposed to sleep in the bank's ground floor back bedroom. Finally, and most importantly, they discreetly tracked to his Chinese rooming house, Hong, the Chinese janitor, who entered the bank every morning around 5 a.m. and cleaned up until 7:30. So successfully did they shadow him, they managed to get an impression of his bank key!

SEPT. 14, THE ZERO HOUR, wasn't picked by chance; it was the windup of the fishing season with a lot of cannery payrolls in the bank. It was about September 10 that Dean whistled up a couple of underworld pals from across the border, and as soon as they reached Vancouver the four men went into a huddle at Broadway and Pine. No musical evening this; supplies were laid out and checked: gloves, flashlights, explosives, bell wire, pliers hammers, a crowbar, and even a length of rope.

Came finally "the night," and the four rendezvoused in a doorway on Columbia Street opposite the bank. It was about a quarter to 12 and they saw someone was working late. They knew who he was, and 15 minutes later they watched him leave.

The street was deserted as the quartet moved in, and using their key slipped into the bank.

Martin and Powell, the well-drilled assistants, went promptly to the rear and grabbed a couple of window cleaning ladders to put them in position each side of the front window. Then perched up high they kept watch up and down the street. McNamara and Dean meanwhile went down the corridor beside the vault and, invisible from the street, started in on the brickwork. Though it was 16 inches thick, soon they had a hole three feet wide and Dean climbed in.

The vault was 13 feet square divided in the middle by an iron grill and a locked gate. Dean conquered the lock in a couple of minutes, and passing on through, sized up the safe. Quickly and deftly he souped it and soaped it, arranged an ignition cap, then led the bell wire through the hole in the vault to the staff bedroom. The "watchman" was away that night, relieving at Cloverdale. Grabbing up his bedding, Dean stuffed it in the hole in the brickwork, then touched wires to a battery. There was a distinct but slightly muffled boom in the vault, which went unnoticed at the police station down the street—even though the windows were open.

WHEN DEAN CLIMBED BACK into the vault, slightly choked up with the dust and acrid fumes, the safe door was hanging open revealing $400,000 in currency. Cautious McNamara got a couple of pillow slips and removed the loot to the empty bedroom where he and Dean sat on the bedspring picking over the money, selecting for themselves only notes under $50 untouched by the explosion, and only gold coins that showed no mark or burns or fuzing.

For the best part of two hours they sorted out money, and at the finish had two pillow slips stuffed with $271,000, a load that weighed between 200 and 250 pounds.

It was around daylight when the Chinese cleaner appeared, and no sooner did he enter than a hand was slapped over his mouth and Martin and Powell steered him firmly but gently to the back bedroom where he was gagged and bound in a chair.

BANK OF MONTREAL, modernized on the outside since the robbery. Arrow points to the robbers' route.

It was then the gang left, hastening up cul de sac Church Street to take the footpath through the grounds of Holy Trinity Church. It's thought they ditched the loot under the bridge that spanned Carnarvon Street ravine, then after acquiring a car, returned for the load and headed for Vancouver. By which time the Chinaman had wriggled himself loose and given the alarm.

A few thousand dollars in bills found in the ravine by school children gave the first clue, and a man called Greenwood saw four men in a touring car going along Kingsway past Royal Oak about 8 o'clock. Later from mug shots he picked out McNamara, Dean and Martin.

THOUGH THE DARING ROBBERY created an enormous sensation, the gang nervily stayed on at Broadway and Pine for at least two weeks. Finally one day McNamara turned the key back to Burton and they were gone. Later some curious things found in the basement led Burton to link his tenants with the bank job and in quick time the Vancouver police were showing the neighbors a few pictures—and getting some interesting facts.

It was a year and a half before McNamara was arrested in New York, Powell in Detroit and Dean in Los Angeles. Some of McNamara's money was turning up in bookie joints, Powell was picked up on a suspicion of being a counterfeiter, and Dean—well, high living caught up with him.

He had a five-room hotel suite and was paying for everything in gold. The Pinkerton organization had much to do with the arrests, their main interest of course being the whacking big reward.

By usual standards the trial at New Westminster in July, 1912, was one of the strangest on record. Apart from a few Bank of Montreal bills there was little to connect the accused with the actual robbery. So the charge was "breaking, and entering and theft of an automobile"—Trapp's McLaughlin.

On the bench was Mr. Justice Aulay Morrison, while A. H. MacNeill (subsequently counsel for the Canadian National Railway) acted for the Crown, and Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper defended McNamara. There was a slight clash of personality on the legal side here. Aulay Morrison, austere, clipped of speech and often acidulous, was a Nova Scotian and a Liberal; Tupper, son of one of the fathers of Canadian Confederation, was also a Bluenose but a Tory; and as is well known, Nova Scotians take their politics seriously. Morrison in addition couldn't stand windy counsel; and Sir Charles was the windiest! As a House of Commons member he once talked for 12 hours, and twice in his

A BASIS OF REAL HOSPITALITY:

TEA-TIME FARE

Without his tea man might long since have perished.

Tea is a remarkable beverage . . . it is the friendliest, most relaxing idea anybody ever had in the middle of a busy time . . . or any time. Tea-time is a time apart from the hurly-burly of everyday living. Tea-sipping is symbolic of the good things of life.

Tea has many attributes . . . Lu Wu, an eighth century Chinese poet, has this to say of it . . . "Tea tempers the spirits; harmonizes the mind and relieves fatigue; awakens thought and prevents drowsiness; lightens and refreshes the body and clears perceptive faculties."

MURIEL WILSON'S THOUGHT for FOOD

Tea is a benign beverage . . . It has been a comfort to man for thousands of years . . . It is the friendly arm around the shoulder and the voice which says, "There! There! Exerything is going to be alright."

Tea is the pause between crises and what's to be done about the situation.

I recall an old movie, I have forgotten its name but the story, written by Noel Coward, was about the indomitable people of Britain during the Second World War. Hard-pressed, their backs to the wall, it was tea that made life endurable. "Have a nice cup of tea, dearie," after the telegram from the War Office and after the bombings. Tea was comfort and hope. Comfort for broken hearts and hope for a new world to be built out of the ruins of the old. The thing that I remember was that ubiquitous cup of tea that ran all the way through the picture like a golden thread through a black garment.

Lin Yu-tang, the Chinese philosopher, links tea with friendship. In his book "The Importance of Living," he devotes ten whole pages to the art of making and drinking of tea. The Chinese consider tea-making an art . . . the true connoisseur regards its preparation as a very special pleasure. "Tea is an intimate drink, not to be made by the gallon for all comers. Only when intimate friends of the same temperament have arrived and we are all happy, all brilliant in conversation, then may we ask the boy servant to build the fire and draw the water." So says this interesting Chinese gentleman. We may not draw as fine a line today but certainly tea-time is synonymous with hospitality.

Whether poured from an old Brown Betty or your best silver teapot, tea is a ceremony, an interlude offering escape for the moment from the pressure of a too busy world.

Tea food should not be too rich or too sweet, at least to my way of thinking. The accent should be on the tea which must be piping hot and fragrant. For real adventure in both taste and aroma do try various blends of tea. Some specialty shops put out small sample bottles in sets of five or six different blends. These are interesting and fun to try. A little more expensive to buy than tea by the pound but a sure way to give your taste buds a treat.

Tea 'n' toast go hand in glove. Toast made from white, brown or raisin bread in a perfect tea companion. Orange toast is lovely . . . Butter white bread thickly, sprinkle each piece with sugar (white or brown) and grated orange rind; or blend butter, sugar and orange juice and spread generously over bread slices. Toast in a hot oven or run under the broiler until topping is bubbly. Everyone loves toasted muffins or scones with tea, and of course toasted crumpets.

Old-fashioned Baking Powder Biscuits or Soda Buttermilk Biscuits are fine tea-time fare. Buttered and served hot from the oven they are delicious. A dollop of strawberry jam or bright jelly turns them into party fare. With a good, basic biscuit recipe you are all set to turn out endless variations. Roll them out and cut into different shapes; substitute buttermilk and soda for the sweet milk and baking powder for a different flavor; substitute cornmeal or bran for part of the flour; add a little sugar and raisins, currants or glace fruit for a sweet biscuit; add grated cheese, crumbled bacon or onion flakes and seasonings for savory biscuits. There is just no end to things that can be done with a basic biscuit recipe.

BASIC BISCUIT . . . makes 12 to 20 according to the size.

Two cups sifted all-purpose flour, 3 tsp. baking powder, 1 tsp. salt, ¼ cup shortening and ¾ cup milk. Pre-heat oven to 425°.. Sift dry ingredients together, cut in shortening finely. Stir in milk. Round up on a lightly floured board. Knead lightly. Incorporate as little flour as possible, use just enough to keep dough from sticking to your hands. Pat or roll out about ½ inch thick. If you like taller biscuits make them thicker. Cut, place on lightly greased baking sheet and bake 10 to 12 minutes.

SOUTHERN BUTTERMILK BISCUITS . . . Substitute buttermilk for sweet milk, use only 2 tsp. baking powder and ¼ tsp. baking soda. Roll thin ¼ inch.

NEW ENGLAND BISCUITS . . . Place biscuits on pan close together for tender sides.

CORNMEAL BISCUITS . . . Substitute ⅓ cup cornmeal for ⅓ cup of the flour in the basic recipe. Roll ⅓ inch thick and cut into diamond shapes.

POCKETBOOK BISCUITS . . . Roll out ¼ inch thick, cut in rounds, spread with butter, crease with back of knife and fold over pocketbook fashion.

DEAR HELOISE:

Here's an idea for people with pets in the home. Our dog is long-haired, and I just couldn't keep up with his shedding. Here's what I did . . .

First I got him well acquainted with the vacuum cleaner (about three sessions to build up his confidence. Now each week I vacuum him as regularly as the rest of the house. It has eliminated the dog-hair problem, and I no longer wince when he and the children romp on the furniture.

But remember, it does take a little patience at first to get the animal used to the vacuum cleaner. Eventually he will love it!

I have found a new use for plastic squirt bottles:

I fill one with water and keep it in the glove compartment of my car. When the windshield gets dirty I take the bottle and squirt. I turn on the windshield wiper, and presto . . . a clean windshield! (My car does not have an automatic washer gadget.)

What is your reputation as a tea maker? Is your tea consistently good? Here are four simple rules to make a good cup of tea every time:

1. Warm the teapot . . . Fill the pot with boiling water, then empty it.

2. When using tea bags, use 1 tea bag for each 2 cups; when using loose tea, use 1 tsp. for each cup and 1 extra for the pot.

3. Add fresh, bubbling, boiling water.

4. Allow to brew for 5 minutes, then serve.

Instant tea, of course, needs no brewing. Use 1 level tsp. for each cup.

Teapots need cleansing periodically . . . once in a while fill your teapot with a mild solution of baking soda and water and let stand overnight. Rinse thoroughly before using.

SWEET BISCUITS . . . Add 2 tbsp. sugar and ⅔ cup raisins or currants to basic recipe; for richer biscuits beat 1 egg and fill cup to ¾ with milk.

ORANGE BISCUITS . . . Press orange-soaked sugar lump into centre of each biscuit before baking.

CHEESE OR BACON BISCUITS . . . Add ¼ to ¾ cup grated cheese or crumbled bacon to basic recipe and use half water and half milk for the liquid.

BISCUIT STICKS . . . Pat dough ½ inch thick. Cut in sticks ½ inch wide and 3 inches long. Brush the sticks with melted butter before baking.

Butter Dips are a bit of a novelty, a little different from the usual hot biscuits. These are mixed without shortening then dipped and baked in butter. These golden-crusted biscuit bread-sticks are best served hot from the oven. They are a perfect companion for that refreshing, after-noon cup of tea.

BUTTER DIPS . . . Sift together 2¼ cups all-purpose flour, 1 tbsp. sugar, 3½ tsp. baking powder and 1 tsp. salt. Add 1 cup milk. Stir with a fork until dough clings together (about 30 strokes). Turn out on a well-floured board. Roll over to coat with flour. Knead lightly about 10 times. Pat or roll out into ½-inch thick rectangle (12x8 inches). With a floured knife cut dough in half lengthwise, then cut crosswise into 16 strips. Melt ⅓ cup butter in a 13x9-inch baking pan. Roll each strip in the melted butter to coat on all sides. Lay close together in 2 rows in pan. Bake in a pre-heated 450° oven for 15 to 20 minutes. Makes 32.

FOR CINNAMON BUTTER DIPS . . . Sprinkle a mixture of 2 tbsp. sugar and ½ tsp. cinnamon over butter dips before baking.

NUT CRACKER

DEAR HELOISE:

Did you know that if you put Brazil or any other kind of nuts in your freezer for at least 24 hours before cracking and shelling them, the shells will pop off easily and leave most of the nut meats whole?

We leave the nuts in their original wrapper and put them directly into the freezer. Try it!

DEAR FOLKS:

When you use a cast-iron skillet or Dutch oven to cook something in, have you ever thought of putting it BACK in the oven after washing it to prevent rust? This is especially good if the oven has been on, or if you have a pilot light.

Did you ever turn on a burner, set your favorite cast-iron piece over it to dry out, and forget it? Oh . . .

BLEACH JUGS

DEAR HELOISE:

The bottom portions of plastic bleach bottles (just cut the tops off) have many uses:

I use them under potted plants to protect my furniture and window sills from water seepage.

I also use them as indoor planters for starting garden or flower seeds, or food dishes for my pets, or just to hold odds and ends around the house and workshop.

All I have to do is cut them to the desired depth with a pair of scissors or a knife.

Cutting to shape is easy. Start to slit with a sharp-pointed knife and finish with an ordinary pair of scissors. The bottoms of the smaller containers make excellent soap dishes, too.

Once Famous, Then Notorious

GALLANT OLD QUADRA, CHORE-BOY of the COAST

The colorful career of the steamer Quadra, from the time, in 1892, when she arrived at Esquimalt to commence her duties as a lighthouse tender on this coast, till 1924, when she ended her days as a rum-runner, always provides interesting conversation when old-timers gather to swap yarns of Victoria's waterfront.

by

GEORGE NICHOLSON

"A little before midnight, a schooner-rigged vessel hove around the coast into Esquimalt Harbor; her whistle pouring forth notes of gladness in her arrival in what will, in future, be her home."

The news item is from The Colonist files of January 6, 1892.

She was the new lighthouse tender Quadra, fresh from the builder's yards in Scotland and destined to become one of the best-known ships that ever sailed British Columbia waters. She had left Greenock on the Firth of Clyde on October 15 of the previous year. The 69-day voyage by way of the Strait of Magellan was uneventful. To save coal she had her canvas spread most of the way out.

The Quadra was named after a Spanish naval officer, Capitan de navio Juan Francisco de la Bodega y Quadra, who explored this coast between 1775 and 1793 and was at one time Governor of Nootka.

Built at Paisley on the Clyde by Fleming & Ferguson, she was a single-screw steel ship of 265 tons register, length 175 feet, beam 31, and 120 hp quadruple engines. Her speed was 11 knots.

She was specially designed as a lighthouse tender to replace the small wooden vessel Sir James Douglas. Captain John T. Walbran brought her out and continued to command her till 1908. With a few exceptions, the remainder of the original ship's company returned to Scotland.

When the ship was commissioned Chief Officer W. G. Owen and Second Officer Charles Barnes, who afterwards became master of both the lighthouse tenders Newington and Estevan, were watchkeepers. Chief engineer was Gordon F. Grant and the second, W. J. Cullum, who later became steamship inspector at Victoria.

Although Quadra's crew members were signed on as civilian seamen, all wore man-o'-war rig. They carried rifles and were trained in their use.

Captain Walbran himself wore a gold-braided frock coat and navy "dress" sword. And he ran his ship navy style, with church service and roll-call on deck every Sunday morning. His book, "British Columbia Coast Names," which was written after his retirement and published by the Geographic Board of Canada, is today a standard reference. Captain Walbran died at Victoria on March 31, 1913. His home on Dallas Road at Menzies still stands.

In those days there were no lighthouses north of Nanaimo on the east coast, or Cape Beale on the west coast of Vancouver Island; only buoys marked the entrance to harbors and some of the channels. And there was no Prince Rupert. The Quadra had to take care of the whole coast. Now there are five lighthouse tenders, all considerably larger than the Quadra. Also, because there were no fisheries patrol vessels, the Quadra had to double-up in that capacity.

Law enforcement agencies were few and far between and the Quadra's master also had to be a magistrate. Invariably there was a Provincial Police Constable aboard. Court was held on board and there were cells for prisoners. Except for naval vessels stationed at Esquimalt and not available for non-naval tasks, the Quadra was the only government vessel of any size on the coast and in addition to her regular duties was frequently called upon to make special trips taking personages and departmental officials from place to place.

As far as can be ascertained, only two men who served aboard the Quadra around the turn of the century still survive. Now retired, both live in Victoria. They are J. E. McDonald, 3944 Lauder Road, and T. E. Morrison, 2342 Bowker Avenue. The former signed on as an able bodied seaman and later became her chief officer. Mr. Morrison signed on as mess boy, later became chief engineer in the Estevan and afterwards marine agent at Victoria.

Many a pleasant hour has this writer spent listening to their recollections. Here are a few:

Lighthouses then had steam engines to operate the air compressors and foghorns. These consumed coal which after being sacked in the ship's hold and landed on the rocks by the ship's oar-powered workboat, then had to be carried up to the station, dirty and back-breaking work if ever there was such, for the crew.

Not all lighthouses are erected on the top of a steep bluff or a storm-tossed island. One, at the mouth of the Fraser River, was built (in 1866) on steel pilings. To deliver stores, the Quadra had to wait for high water. At low water the lighthouse was high and dry about a quarter of a mile from the channel.

However, it served the purpose till the turn of the century, though by then, owing to the river currents having changed the deep-water channel, it was over a mile out of position and only confused navigators. In 1905 the former sealing schooner Mermaid was converted into a lightship and placed on station at the river mouth, but a few years later a storm damaged her beyond repair and the shore installation was put back into commission. In 1914 Sandheads Lightship No. 16 (formerly the sealing schooner Thomas F. Bayard) was placed on position and notwithstanding her being driven ashore several times, continued to do duty till 1956. A tower-like structure, built of steel and concrete, now stands in her place.

Nor were all lighthouses of modern design, even by late nineteenth century standards. Amphritrite Point's first light was of real vintage. It burned kerosene on the edge of a long endless wick which revolved very slowly and required attention only once a month. The late George Fraser, one of Ucluelet's pioneer settlers, a Scottish bachelor and famed horticulturist, was its first keeper. Another light of the same type (they were made in Ireland) the Quadra placed on the bow of a wreck outside the entrance to Ladysmith harbor.

About 1902 the federal government built a wooden breakwater to protect the wharf at Port Renfrew. Quadra took the soundings, tide and current readings. The structure disappeared the first winter after completion.

CAPT. JOHN WALBRAN
. . . master of the Quadra.

In 1907 Quadra placed a large whistling and gas buoy on Swiftsure Bank and the crew had many an anxious moment handling the cumbersome object while pitching and rolling in the Pacific swells. Owing to restricted space on the foredeck they had to work with the derricks in fixed positions. Hurriedly placed timbers prevented damage to the wheelhouse as the huge buoy barely managed to scrape by, with the winchmen hunching their backs everytime they heard a hunk of rust rattling down the inside of the ship's old steel mast. A few years later, the United States Coastguard replaced this buoy with a lightship, moved a year ago to a position 15 miles further south.

A memorable trip was made in 1900 when the Quadra took Governor-General Earl Minto and Lady Minto from Victoria to Skagway. From Skagway the party travelled to Whitehorse by the White Pass & Yukon Railway, and then by the river steamer Canadian to Dawson. Quadra waited at Skagway and then brought them back to Victoria, the round trip occupying six weeks. The Governor-General's party consisted of six and included his own chef, for whose convenience a special galley was erected on deck. "Messboy" Morrison recalls the mouth-watering specialties this cook served—roast turkey basted with champagne, for instance.

Another vice-regal trip, also to Skagway, the Quadra made in 1909, when His Excellency Earl Grey was Governor-General. In addition to Earl Grey and his two daughters, the party included Lord Lascelles, who afterwards became the husband of Princess Mary. They also travelled over the White Pass & Yukon Railway to Whitehorse, and by river steamer to Dawson. By special invitation, the Quadra's master, Chief Officer McDonald and the Chief Engineer also went along.

At Jervis Inlet, on the way south, a guide took Lord Lascelles on a hunting trip. He shot a mountain sheep and took the head home as a trophy. It is recorded that while awaiting Lord Lascelles' return, Lord Grey took a walk in the woods and became lost. However, he finally made his way back to the shore, but some distance away from where he had landed. This episode made headlines all over the world.

When the Grank Trunk Railway was seeking a suitable site for its western terminus, the Quadra took President Charles M. Hayes, who later lost his life in the Titanic disaster, and ten company officials, on a very hush-hush trip up north. Not a man in the Quadra's crew had the faintest inkling of its purpose. The party in turn visited Quatsino Sound, Kitimat, Port Essington and several other places. When they went ashore they took the ship's steam launch and had their own man to run it. The site where Prince Rupert now stands was subsequently selected, but the Quadra's crew didn't even know they had been there. The GTP subsequently became the CNR.

In 1901, Quadra formed part of an escort, the others being ships of the Royal Navy at the time stationed at Esquimalt, escorting the Empress that carried Their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall and York from Victoria to Vancouver.

On February 26, 1917, the Quadra was in collision with the CPR steamer Charmer at the entrance to Nanaimo Harbor, at 3:30 p.m. in fog. Quadra was beached to prevent her sinking in deep water. Only a portion of her funnel and masts were visible at high tide. That ended her career as a lighthouse tender. She was later refloated and sold to Britannia Mines, who used her to carry ore concentrates from Howe Sound to the Tacoma smelter.

The Quadra afterwards became a rum-runner and after making several very successful trips out of Vancouver, on October 24, 1924, was seized by the United States Coastguard cutter Shawnee while discharging liquor to a speedboat off the California coast, and towed into San Francisco. Ship and her cargo valued at $1 million on the San Francisco market were confiscated and her captain fined $1,000 and given two years in jail. Twelve other defendants (mostly her crew) were also given jail sentences, but all jumped bail and returned to Canada. Litigation over the seizure lasted several years, during which time the biggest part of her cargo "evaporated." As the vessel itself hadn't been drydocked for several years she suffered considerable deterioration. She was subsequently sold at public auction by the United States marshal for the sum of $1,625 and broken up for scrap.

Quadra Rocks, Houston Channel, Queen Charlotte Islands, was named after this famous old vessel. Hitherto unknown, she found this menace to navigation the hard way, by running aground there in May, 1902, while on a cruise to the Bering Sea in the interests of the sealing industry. Quadra Island and Quadra Street, Victoria, were named after the Spanish capitan.

Mr. McDonald recalls that when Captain Walbran left the Quadra, at a gathering held in the Driard Hotel the ship's company presented him with an illuminated address, which they all signed, and a gold-headed cane. He wonders where they are today, if still in existence. They should be in the provincial archives.

Doyen of Salesmen 45 Years in His Job

"I edged over to him and persuaded him, as a last chance, to try and shove me over. If successful I would haul my wife in and then him. He agreed," Mellin said.

With frantic effort they succeeded. Mellin then pulled in the other two.

Due to lack of communication it was a long time before help arrived. A Royal Navy destroyer finally approached. Sailors jumped into the sea and swam over to help the survivors.

Upon returning to Ireland Mrs. Mellin found her collarbone had been dislocated.

Loss of life had been nearly 700.

A month later the Mellins celebrated Armistice in London. Two months later they were back in Canada.

After settling down Andrew approached Thomas Plimley, the auto pioneer, and was placed on the staff. The firm had just moved from Johnson Street to their new location in the former Coach Lines building on Broughton. Mellin found the world of automobiles considerably changed. Packard was making a 12-cylinder job and Plimley's were selling it. Ralph de Palma had set a new world's record in another model at 149.9 miles an hour.

"I wanted to start as a salesman but they didn't have an opening," Mellin said. "Plimleys operated a branch at the end of the Oak Bay street car line. I was chief cook and bottle washer there. I had one assistant, a Japanese boy, Tommy Kosimoto, who later did well in the dry cleaning business."

After a year in Oak Bay Andrew returned to headquarters and shortly afterwards was made salesman. The auto world was buzzing with excitement for the glassed-in sedan had arrived. The following year it was improved by the sloping windshield hinged for ventilation. Packard found the 12-cylinder was too big to sell so they came out with a six and eight.

"They were a thoroughbred line of cars," Mellin recalls. "Plimley had a wonderful clientele."

Mellin made an interesting sale awhile later. "Admiral Sir Guy Gaunt arrived from the Orient in a large four-masted sailing ship, The Four Winds. The vessel, with its all-Chinese crew, was anchored near the Yacht Club at Cadboro Bay. I had heard that he was a wealthy man, maybe a prospect for a Packard. I rowed out in a dinghy and he asked me on board. He was interested and a fortnight later took delivery of a new touring model, which he used between cruises. The car was too big to put on deck so I sold him an Austin Seven. I think it was the first time a Victoria car salesman had closed a deal at sea."

The 1920s saw "Cap" Mellin selling Overlands, Coles, Chandlers, Willys Knights, Maxwells and Chryslers. Victoria's street cars were hauling 210,000 passengers a week but many were beginning to leave the trams to drive their own cars. The auto industry gave them plenty of inducement, as Mellin recalls.

"Four-wheel brakes appeared on the scene as an extra safety measure. Prospects were impressed. Power operated windshield wipers became standard equipment. Radiators were nickel-plated and cylindrical headlights came into fashion. The family began to drive for the first time."

Each new model bought eye-popping changes. Shatter-proof glass and dual taillights made their appearance. Chrome and lacquer were applied to bodies. The foot-controlled dimmer-switch was incorporated in 1929. And when auto radios appeared drivers felt like kings.

"We had our good times and our bad," Andrew recalls. "Salesmen had to really hustle duirng the depression of the thirties."

The Second World War came and Mellin did a tour of duty with the Canadian Army Reserve.

"I didn't do anything more serious than fight some heavy battles at Nanaimo—manoeuvres," he recalls.

Mellin returned to Plimleys and was promoted to sales manager, then manager from 1949-51. Then for health reasons he stepped down from that position and resumed his duties as a car salesman.

"Salesmanship has changed,' Mellin affirms. "In earlier times people expected us to call at their homes. You knew every car salesman in town, for they used dealer plates. When one parked outside a prospect's home others noted the place and called with their models. Today people shop for cars at the auto showroom."

This year is his 45th with Plimleys.

He has given up his hobby of shooting but continues cruising in the Nomad I, a powerboat he has owned for 30 years. When not cruising Mrs. Mellin enjoys fishing. The Mellins virtually raised their daughter, Doris, now Mrs. J. G. Mills, on this boat.

With This Little League Team

by JIM BRAHAN

There's a Lady In the Dugout

It would be difficult to argue which of the Esquimalt and Victoria West District Little League baseball teams has the best coach, but the Cougars can lay undisputed claim of having the prettiest.

The Cougars, a team in the minor division, have a lady boss. Mrs. Vi Palmer is serving her second session as pilot for a team of 15 boys between the ages of nine and twelve in Little League competition.

At the start of last year's play the league's executive was having difficulty in filling a vacancy on the coaching staff. John Ireland, their vice-president, asked Mrs. Palmer if she would consider the position.

"I told him my knowledge of baseball was practically non-existent, but I would try to fill the bill," Mrs. Palmer said.

After two nights of studying the Little League rule book, and receiving instructions in the art of baseball from her husband Don, and their 13-year-old son Gary, as well as the team's manager, Art Braaten, Mrs. Palmer entered the dugout to take charge of her pint-sized competitors.

"At first the boys were not too keen on the idea of having a lady coach," Mrs. Palmer said. "I heard one youngster remark to a teammate, 'I guess she'll be OK. Anyways we still have a man with us,' as he pointed to Mr. Braaten."

It did not take the youngsters long to realize they had advantages which the other teams were lacking in the coaching department. Aside from piloting them to their share of wins on the diamond, and cracking the whip like a professional during practice sessions, if any lumps and bruises were received an experienced mother was found to come in very handy. A woman, they discovered, knows how to look after cuts, abrasions and the damaged egoes of little boys far better than a man.

KIM PHILLIPS and HAROLD NASH, both 10, with Coach "George" Palmer.

However, the Mrs. in her name bothered the boys for awhile. They considered it did not sound tough enough for a baseball coach. This problem was solved when they nicknamed her "George" by which name she is known among her players.

Ten-year-old Richard Burton, playing his second season with the Cougars under the direction of Mrs. Palmer, has no doubts about the team coming out near the top of the league. "We came third last year and that's real good for a girl coach," he said.

But Get-Away Car Just Wouldn't Budge

career gave his point of view for nine hours. Two hours of cross-examination meant nothing to Sir Charles, and in addressing a jury he sometimes took all day.

RIGHT OFF THE BAT he attacked the indictment because McNamara had been extradited for bank robbery, and was now charged with something else. Anyway he claimed there was a doubt about the breaking and entering, and as for the car—it wasn't taken anywhere.

"No matter," ruled Morrison, and the Crown steam rollered on.

It did seem curious, however, on the issue of a car theft, to see witnesses proving how the Deans lived, how McNamara rented the house, how there was a bank robbery, what the manager said about the loss and of course how McNamara was seen cranking Trapp's car on Royal Avenue.

In cross-examination Tupper sneaked in all sorts of innuendos and inferences, hinting that the Chinese janitor had a hand in the robbery, putting emphasis on the fact that Hong had visited China the year before. He almost suggested the bank employees had a hand in it too; hinted that the safe wasn't blown, that it was left open and burned for effect. He attacked the accountant's bank figures, claimed some of the recovered bills were never in the vault and in fact did everything but suggest that Chief of Police Bradshaw pulled the job! Poor old Bradshaw felt badly enough anyway, seeing his night man was sound asleep in the police station while the boys were at work.

THE UNSHAKEABLE WITNESS was teamster Donald Ferguson, so Tupper tried his luck with Greenwood, bedevilling him for about two hours until finally Judge Morrison crossly suggested "there's such a thing as going too far in cross-examination and it is the judge's duty when he thinks it has reached that limit to interpose." The suggestion fell on deaf ears for Sir Charles went on for another half hour.

In his defence McNamara brought witnesses from New York to prove that on the night of the robbery he was attending a prize fight in Madison Square Garden. One of his spokesmen was Harry Pollok, fight promoter and manager for boxer Freddy Welsh. Crown Counsel MacNeill made rather swift work of him.

At one stage he asked how many people Madison Square Garden could seat.

"10,000," said Pollok.

"How many were there the night of the fight between Carl Morris and Jim Flynn?"

"About 3,000."

"And you picked out McNamara from 3,000 people?"

"Well, he was in a box seat, in the front row."

Briefed no doubt by Pinkerton men at the extradition hearing, suddenly MacNeill asked Pollok if he knew a man called Jack Rose. Seems he did.

As the examination continued it developed that Jack Rose was one of the four gangsters directed by New York police Lieutenant Becker (then awaiting execution) to knock off gambler Rosenthal; and Pollok had to admit that for 36 hours after the Rosenthal killing Jack Rose laid low in Pollok's New York flat! Exit Mr. Pollok.

Finally the issue was turned over to the jury, and at the end of two hours deliberation they said McNamara was guilty—of b. and e. and theft of a car.

BY HIS REMARKS when passing sentence it was evident that His Lordship felt he was dealing with more than just an ordinary criminal.

"There is little to say to a man of intelligence, as you doubtless are," was the way he prefixed his remarks, before referring in the usual terms to Tupper's "very able defence." Then he said: "This is not an ordinary case of theft, if there is such a thing as an ordinary case of theft, because my mind is charged with the feeling that this was part of a very grave crime; and under the circumstances I feel justified in imposing the full extent of the penalty which the law permits in cases of this sort. I therefore sentence you to nine years in the penitentiary."

"You may be successful in an appeal," he added, "and therefore it may not be amiss for me, talking as one intelligent man to another, to express the hope that, should you regain your liberty, you will remember this particular occasion . . ."

"I certainly will, your Lordship," broke in McNamara.

"And," continued the Judge, "endeavor to turn your talents to better use. I am extremely sorry, but I have a certain duty to perform and I must perform it. But no hard feeling of any kind prompts me in the passing of this sentence."

Later, through the weakness of identification, McNamara's pals got the benefit of the doubt. If it was the last word on B.C.'s biggest bank robbery, it was only the start of motorized crime.

Dainty Bessie Tang

SQUARE DANCERS' FASHION ARBITER

By GINNIE BEARDSLEY

If you want to start something, just say to a devotee of square dancing, "They usually wear blue jeans for that, don't they?"

They most emphatically do not, as I learned more or less by accident while talking of other matters with Mrs. Jack Tang, who is by way of being square dance fashion arbiter for Victoria, the rest of Vancouver Island, and for a host of customers from Nome to Nova Scotia and all the way south to the Mexican border.

Only the prettiest, fussiest and fullest-skirted of dresses is fit for an important square dance party. And even a regular week-night meeting of a square dance or round dance club calls for a gay, bright dress which will swirl satisfyingly around the wearer as she dances.

You could have observed the fact for yourself if you attended the Vancouver Island Western Square Dance Round-Up May 18 in the Memorial Arena. About a hundred "squares" (not a derogatory term but a description of a group composed of four dancing couples) performed, according to Jim Allen, president of the Western Square Dance Association. Forty of the squares consisted of new dancers who had just completed a course of instruction and were being initiated.

One of the most colorful features of the annual event for square dancers from Duncan south consists of the bright and pretty dresses worn by the girls.

Which brings us back to Bessie Tang. "Jack and I took up square dancing seven years ago to get away from business and relax," Bessie told me. But when you're as clever and resourceful and versatile as Bessie, nothing you get into turns out to be sheer relaxation. As the season's lessons drew to a close, 50 newly-trained dancers started the eternal feminine moan about having nothing to wear. Where did they turn for help? Why to Mrs. Tang of course. Where else? The Tangs' shop did not stock square dance clothes, but Bessie was equal to the occasion, as she is to most challenges.

Daughter of Charne Hope, who for half a century made Victoria almost as famous for fine hand tailoring and fast service as Hong Kong is today, Bessie has been sewing since she was eight years old. She designed and made the costumes she wore in high school as a member of the Golden Dragon Concert group, the exotic outfits with which she brightened her song and dance numbers presented for the troops by Pro-Rec concert party groups, and countless costumes for plays, pageants, festivals and parades.

The satins and brocades of Oriental costume have of course no place in the repertoire of the designer of square dance dresses, which must be: (a) cool, and (b) washable; in addition to being bright and full-skirted. Gay cottons, including Italian imports, nylons and arnel blends are favorite fabrics.

Bessie Tang's original creations were so sensationally successful on all counts that her fame as a designer spread far beyond her home town. Square dancers get around. Clubs (there are 52 of them on Vancouver Island alone) are invited to out-of-town centres. And when they go girls say "Where did you get your dress?" Increasingly, the answer is: "Bessie Tang made it. It's the only one like this." So the next time the questioner visits Victoria, one of Bessie's square dance dresses is high on the shopping list.

How do you go about designing a square dance dress? Just about the reverse of the way one would think. Most other dresses start with pattern; and material is selected to suit it. Mrs. Tang works with printed fabrics. She spreads out her material (enough of each fabric is bought for just one dress, whether seven yards, or seventeen as in the fancy party number Mrs. Tang models in the picture). Next, she tries out various trims—braids, laces, eyelet embroidery, and so on. (Trim is an old story to Bessie. During the war, she sewed hundreds of miles of gold braid on uniforms for officers "from the admiral on down." Time required was from two to six hours per uniform—depending upon rank.)

MRS. TANG MODELS one of her square dance creations for friend and fellow dancer Mrs. Isabel Wood.

Having found the trim which best sets off the dress fabric, the next step is to decide the cut which will show the colors and designs in the material to best advantage. The dress is then cut to pattern, and sewed.

No temperamental artist, Mrs. Tang admits that sometimes the process of creating a dress doesn't go entirely smoothly. If study of a piece of fabric doesn't bring an idea within a reasonable time, she puts that bolt aside and turns to another. Later, the solution will come. It always has, and probably always will. Such is the happy combination of much natural talent and the long training that gives practice in visualizing a finished product. You have to have the inspiration first, but you still need the infinite capacity for taking pains.

The results of both were amply demonstrated at the Square Dance Round-Up, which, besides being a fine demonstration of dancing, undoubtedly was in part at least a fashion show of Bessie Tang originals.

And the designer? Oh, she was dancing. The Round-Up wouldn't have been complete without Bessie, who has been bowling 'em over in shows of all kinds—ever since the time in her school days when she walked off with highest honors in the English, Scottish, Irish and German folk song classes at the Music Festival.

structional flight. He flies, too, of course. He got his wings by way of a scholarship when he was with the Kinsman Squadron of Victoria Air Cadets.

"She'll go solo before the summer's over," Ted said. "That's the big thrill. I remember when I went solo the first time I had my headset on and the intercom open, and I was shouting and singing up there quite unaware that the people down below were listening in and getting a great kick out of it."

Gordon Jeune came and sat down with this flying family. He has taught all four of them—there are two daughters who don't fly, Vicki, 16, at home, 3320 Cedar Hill Road, and who probably will be soloing before long, and Judy, 25, Mrs. K. W. Kirkwell of Port Alberni—and some 250 other learner-pilots at the flying school.

He's been instructing for nine years now, with expert assistance from George Kersey.

Victoria Flying Services' biggest business is charter flights. They have four Cessna 150s, three 172s, one of them on floats, a Cessna 185 float plane, a Super-Luscombe on floats, and a Twin Apache on their tarmac.

"Business is getting better all the time," said Mr. Jeune. "I wish there were more families as enthusiastic about flying as this one."

During the Long, Cold Winters

SHE'S THE GUARD ON PRAIRIE FARM

DEAR MR. EDITOR:

This little dog is of no particular breed, or a medal winner; just an ordinary little dog to some people, but to us she is a pillar of patience and loyalty.

We spend the winters in Victoria each year, and enjoy reading the Colonist during our stay there and home here in Saskatchewan. The Islander often contains a little story of an episode in the life of someone's beloved pet, so we thought you might accept our little story.

We leave Brownlee, Saskatchewan, around December. Lock up the farm and off we go, on our journey to British Columbia, leaving Susie in full charge. We have no idea what she does during the long winter, but neighbors passing by say she is always around the farm. A bed is made in the loft of the barn for her to sleep, and to spend those below zero days. She lives on what she hunts and a box of bones which is brought to her. We fetch a good supply of bones from the butchers before we leave. She does not eat them at the time, but spends a very busy day carrying them one by one and burying them in a safe place. She seems to sense when we are going away, and works doubly hard to store extra food supplies away.

When we arrive back in the spring, there is Susie waiting to greet us, with tail wagging and teeth showing in one big happy smile. After taking care of all our worldly possessions through the winter, she still remains the same lovable little dog. She has the opportunity to turn into a wild dog being on her own during the worst time of the year, but all she asks for when we arrive back is a pat on the back and her ears rubbed.

It is as if she has dedicated her life to this farm, and prefers to spend those below zero days and nights waiting to greet her humans back in the spring. She refuses any other persons' attempts to befriend her at any time.

One feels very humble as she sits at one's feet and looks at you with eyes filled with adoration. Can one blame us for spoiling her by giving her certain privileges around the house when we are on the farm. The faithfulness and devotion she has given us for six years is hard to match. DOROTHY A. LINDELL.

FAITH ANGUS' Stamp Packet

KENNEDY MEMORIALS FOR MAY 29

An initial printing of 250 million stamps, exactly double the usual number for a commemorative, was ordered by U.S. Postmaster General Gronouski for the Kennedy Memorial issue to be released on May 29, the forty-seventh birthday anniversary of the late president.

Partly due to the widespread interest felt in this issue and because May 30 is Memorial Day and a national holiday, the stamps will go on nation-wide sale the first day, but cancellations marked "First Day of Issue" can only be obtained from Boston, the city chosen for the first day ceremony by the Kennedy family.

The 5c blue-grey stamp carries a portrait of President Kennedy and a reproduction of the eternal flame on his grave, his name, dates of his birth and death and the following inscription—"And the glow from that fire can truly light the world."

On May 29 the United Nations will release a 2c and 10c regular (redesign and reissue) and a 7c regular new issue. Norway issued two stamps on May 11 to honor the 150th anniversary of the Constitution of Norway. The 50 ore stamp depicts the Eidsvoll Building where the Constitution was adopted on May 17, 1814. The 90 ore features the Storting (Parliament House) built in 1861-66. Jamaica's 16-value definitive set was released on May 4.

Canada's new stamp seems to be causing more discord than unity since becoming involved in the flag dispute. Some overwrought citizens even want to have it banned. However, it would not be possible to answer questions or comments in this column.

There might have been a political finger in this philatelic pie, or there might not; one guess is as good as the other, but the stamp was definitely listed in Canadian issues for 1964. Later on, two usually reliable sources of information published the list with a note stating that the "Unity" stamp would not be released. A little later, daily papers carried an illustration and full description of the promised stamp, also the flag theory.

'Tommy, Go Home!' Their Battle Cry

active service. Cyprus had become a battle zone.

Troops were now confined to their camps and except for the transport units and the infantry who went on anti-terrorist drives in the hills looking for Col. Grivas and his band of merry Greeks, the old Cyprus of a few months ago had ceased to exist. The whole Greek population was behind the terrorists, and behind the population was Archbishop Makarios.

I saw him preach once in the village of Paphos and he is a very impressive looking man, with his black church robes, a thick, bushy, greying beard and the tall headdress of the Greek Orthodox Church. Not understanding too much Greek I didn't find out until we slapped him in jail that he had been all over the island preaching blood and thunder against the British.

Everywhere the soldier went his gun was sure to go. The Sten gun only weighs about eight pounds but with five pounds of ammo it adds up to 13 pounds that never left you until you were asleep; and even then, if you were out on a curfew patrol you had to sleep with it strapped to you.

These curfew patrols were quite a novelty at first. A village would be suspected of aiding terrorists or having an arms cache, so one quiet, sunny afternoon a peaceful, mountain village would be surrounded by 300 soldiers and all the inhabitants would be ordered into their homes. Then would start a house-to-house search done by a specially trained squad, who, as far as I know never found anything. Depending on the size of the village this curfew could go on for 48 hours and the people would remain in their houses all this time except for a few little, old Greek women who would go to the village well for water escorted by a couple of Tommies armed to the teeth. The whole business was a bit silly because the mountain grapevine was a lot faster than our trucks. But it kept them on their toes.

The bombings were the real terror for us transport drivers. They would hang the bombs in trees over the road, throw them into the trucks from the orange groves and—as with a convoy I was in—roll them under our trucks in the middle of town. My company lost more men than any other unit on the island for the simple reason we were exposed more often.

Every Greek was now viewed with suspicion. Every Greek was now a potential murderer as far as we were concerned and they were good at killing. That was one thing you had to give them credit for. They fought 26,000 troops on their island, their way, and won. Cyprus became independent and most of us went home.

Now I hear on the radio and read in the newspapers that once more the bullets are whining over the countryside of that beautiful island and that the soldiers of my adopted country are running over those same hills, driving through those same villages, trying to do exactly the same thing we tried to do. Except that now it's a civil war they are trying to prevent.

I hear that the Turks are holed up in St. Hilarion castle. Well, they have picked a good spot for a battle. Although it has seen about 1,500 years and about as many battles, it can probably stand a few more.

There is a beach in Cyprus where, legend has it, Venus came riding the foam on a cockle shell. Venus, the mythical Goddess of love. I think its about time she returned to her island. They can use some of her medicine right now.

Small Comfort From An Ally

Reviewed by JOHN BARKHAM

U.S. BLUNDERED IN SUEZ CRISIS

. . . Finer's Indictment

John Foster Dulles died in 1959. The Suez Affair, in which he cracked the whip over our two principal allies, Britain and France, bringing them ignominiously to heel, occurred three years earlier. With the passage of time and the crystallization of later events providing a perspective, historians are now beginning to assess the correctness of the policies followed by the nations involved.

DULLES OVER SUEZ, by Herman Finer. Chicago: Quadrangle Books. 572 pp. $7.50.

In a recently published book, Barren Victory, a British writer, Basil Collier, categorized Washington's disciplining of Britain and France as the worst in a series of damaging decisions. In this far more formidable new study, Dulles Over Suez, a distinguished political scientist, Professor Herman Finer of the University of Chicago, shifts the attack to Secretary Dulles himself with devastating results. During the two terms in which he served as President Eisenhower's Secretary of State, Dulles virtually made his country's foreign policy. Finer's book constitutes the most unsparing indictment of the Dulles performance on Suez yet published.

Nor can this be dismissed as a partisan attack. The book is an extraordinarily detailed, heavily documented reconstruction of the entire Suez imbroglio. Since the State Department files on the subject will not be open for examination until 1970, Professor Finer spent two years interviewing the principals involved from President Eisenhower and Premiers Eden, Pineau and Ben Gurion down—all, indeed, except Dulles himself, who was dead. The outcome is a unique historical study whose significance—whether or not the reader accepts the author's conclusions—will be of inestimable value to future historians.

The book lifts the veil on many aspects of the Suez affair hitherto shrouded in secrecy—the unpublicized meeting in Paris between Eden, Pineau and Ben Gurion (denied by everyone), the strong personal reactions by Eisenhower and Dulles to the news of the Suez invasion, the angry accusation thereafter flung by Dulles to French Ambassador Herve Alphand—"The action and intervention of France and Britain is just the same as the behavior of the Soviet Union in Budapest"—and much more. It is this unwritten history, recorded here on a day by day basis in the capitals concerned, which gives the book its remarkable X-ray character.

Finer's assault is mounted on two principal fronts: one against Dulles as Secretary of State, the other against U.S. policy over Suez. Against Dulles the author's case is merciless and supported by massive evidence. He indicts Dulles for

- not protesting with adequate vigor the Egypto-Soviet arms deal of 1955, which gave Moscow its first foothold in the Arab world;
- for the offer to Nasser of the Awan loan, and then brusquely withdrawing it, thus directly precipitating Nasser's seizure of the Canal; and
- having no policy to make Nasser disgorge, he turned the full pressure of the United States against Britain and France to prevent them restoring what they deemed to be their legal rights in the Canal.

Finer's case against Dulles is not easy to rebut. The Aswan platter Dulles offered and then snatched from Nasser unquestionably drove the latter to seize the Canal "in hot blood," which in turn sparked the military intervention of Britain, France and Israel. Nevertheless, most Americans at the time backed Washington in its refusal to condone the Allies' military intervention, probably because of the attitude of the vast majority of the press and radio comment.

Finer suggests that Dulles backed down in the face of the Russian threat to use rockets, a threat repeated several times thereafter until President Kennedy finally called this bluff in October, 1962. For this the author accords Kennedy full marks and Dulles a black mark for not having done it earlier.

HERMAN FINER

Britain and France (especially France), he says, "will remember those humiliating and harmful days." Never again, he adds, "could they wish to be so much at the mercy of an ally."

The independent line France is now following could be the chickens coming home to roost.

Dulles Over Suez is a case study in diplomacy, dissected in depth by a professional political scientist from original sources. It is far and away the best documented book on its subject yet published, and will remain an essential volume in contemporary history.

MERCURIAL IRISHMAN

By PERCY ROWE

SCHOLARS AND GYPSIES by Walter Starkie; Macmillan; $6.50.

Here's a call to insurrection for all good Irishmen. Take a day off, perhaps the 17th of the Green, forget about the world's crises and settle down to Professor Starkie's book.

It is a spring-wet fresh biography with glint-hard shards of memory—a look into the nearly will-o'-the-wisp world that existed before the First World War.

It is mainly the tale of a boy and a youth. If you have ever read Starkie's Raggle-Taggle, you already know much about the man, the man who became an itinerant fiddler with Gypsy bands in Europe, the fiddler who was an outstanding violinist, the violinist who was fluent in Romantic languages, the student of modern tongues who was also the classical scholar.

But back to the boy in Dublin's suburbs where there were daily swims, year-'round, in the sea and a tinker at the garden wall, to the boy at the summer fairs of Cork and Kerry; to the schoolboy at Shrewsbury finding acclaim as a musician; to the youth at Trinity College, Dublin, where his own godfather had been Oscar Wilde's tutor, and where each day was a blend of Tartini, Vivaldi, Hegel, and the Greeks.

But if you think this is too academic a shot of Irish coffee, look at the people the lad met, the events he saw. Synge, looking lost, at the uproar caused by his Playboy of the Western World on its opening night at the Abbey; the dwarf-poet James Stephens, fresh from his success with The Crock of Gold, reading new verse in a tearoom; Casement, Oliver Gogarty, and the street battles of the Irish rebellion.

With so many people and scenes crowding in on the young Starkie, you can even forgive him the odd error, like a college room discussion of Ulysses four years before it was first published.

In any case you hardly notice it, he is off and away to Italy to hook up with that other fantastic romantic Gabriele D'Annunzio, and roaming down the spine to Brindisi with a Gypsy tribe, and mixing with the Mafia on their homeground, Sicily.

It is very difficult to realize that, one war later, this mercurial Irishman had the august title of head of the British Council in Spain.

The Kennedy Daughters had a Giddy Whirl

by James K. Nesbitt

But Only Elizabeth Found a Husband

A few weeks ago the story of Elizabeth Henrietta Kennedy was told here. She was the daughter of His Excellency Arthur Edward Kennedy, 1864-66 Governor of the Crown Colony of Vancouver Island. She married Lord Gilford and later became the Countess of Clanwilliam.

It would appear Elizabeth and Gilford met here, for he was stationed at Esquimalt during the Kennedy years, as captain of HMS Tribune.

Provincial Archivist Willard E. Ireland, in the pursuit of his public duties, wrote to the present Earl of Clanwilliam, grandson of Elizabeth, to see if he had any family pictures of value to the history of British Columbia.

Back from Clanwilliam's ancestral home in Ireland came photographs of the Kennedy daughters, Elizabeth and Georgina. They are what might be called historic "finds."

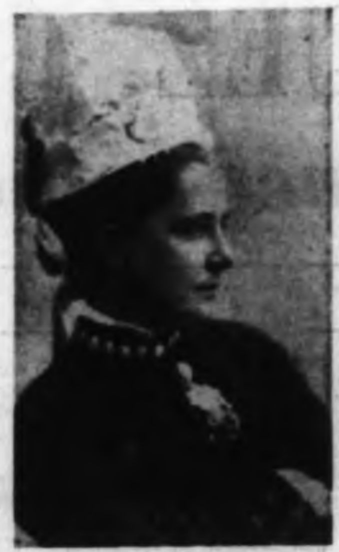
Georgina, never having married, did not reach the prominence of her sister. She did have, however, judging by old Victoria newspapers, a splendid time during her two and a half years in Victoria. Indeed, she had a whirl, was a belle, went everywhere. No dance or concert, parade, or review of the troops did she miss. She rode horseback into the country and on one memorable occasion rode into the hills and dales of Sooke to see what was going on in the gold-rush to the Leech River.

The Kennedys were very social. When their father was governor his daughters would be in their early 20s. They were constantly surrounded by people. They went everywhere. They had parties galore at draughty old Cary Castle.

Kennedy, an Irishman, was enraged when he arrived here to find no official residence for the Governor. The House of Assembly kept him in a suite at the Hotel St. George. He became exasperated, finally, and rented "Fairfield House," the residence of Joseph William Trutch. .

But the Governor found this place far too small for all the entertaining he wanted to do.

There is, preserved in the archives, a letter written by Mrs. Kennedy that shows impatience with their make-shift quarters: "My dear Mrs. Trutch—Admiral Kingcome is coming to dine with us tomorrow, but you know the size of our dining room, which precludes my asking you and Mrs. O'Reilly to dinner, but if you will kindly waive ceremony and join us in the evening it will give the Governor and myself great pleasure to see you . . .



MISS GEORGINA KENNEDY . . . she rode horseback with father to Sooke. (This photograph was taken by Bradley and Rulofson, Montgomery St., San Francisco.)

"My daughter desires me to thank Mrs. O'Reilly for the newspapers and to ask her if she has a song—'Goodbye Sweetheart, Goodbye'—and would lend it to her, in the hope of inducing Capt. Sullivan to sing, as it is one of his favorites."

On his own Kennedy bought Cary Castle and moved in, and so shamed the House of Assembly, which bought it from him as official Government House.

The two New Year's Days the Kennedys were here, the daughters of the Governor held court at the Castle: "As usual, the day was observed by all classes as a general holiday. The customary visiting took place and pleasant friendships were renewed under the influence of lavish hospitality. A constant stream of guests set out for Government House where His Excellency, Mrs. Kennedy and their daughters graciously received in person the compliments of the season."

Here are just a few of the events attended in a short time by the Kennedy girls:

"Masonic Ball—The ball given by the Masonic Fraternity came off in the House of Assembly. His Excellency the Governor was present with his family . . . The music was under the direction of Prof. C. G. St. Clair and Mons. Driard supplied the wines and refreshment."

"The ceremony of laying the cornerstone of the Collegiate Institute School for Girls on the Church Reserve . . . Among those present were Mrs. Kennedy, who laid the stone, and her daughters, Mrs. Needham and her daughters . . . The Lord Bishop Hills presented Mrs. Kennedy with a silver trowel on which was a suitable inscription."

"Mrs. Kennedy's Cup . . . The rifle contest for the silver cup presented by Mrs. Kennedy . . . took place at Beacon Hill . . . Twenty-one of the Volunteers competed for the honor of claiming the very elegant cup, a prize of which the winner, Pte. Newbury, may well feel proud. At the close of the firing Pte. Newbury was congratulated by Mrs. Kennedy on his success."

THE COUNTESS of Clanwilliam, taken by W. and D. Downey, 57 and 61 Ebury Street, London, in 1880, three years before her father, Sir Arthur Kennedy died at sea off Aden.

"Mons. Sandrie and Madame Lange's vocal and instrumental concert took place . . . The Governor, his wife and daughters occupied their usual flag-draped, flower-banked box."

A. W. Rogers, a miner at Leechtown a century ago at this time, left an account of the time the Governor and Georgina visited the mines of the Sooke area: "They were received with distinguished cordiality and hospitality by the gold commissioner, Richard Golledge, who had been private secretary to Sir James Douglas.

"On their return to town the next day Golledge accompanied them part of the way on the road. And it was said in town, with some amusement, that because the gold commissioner had no house of his own, and it was unseemly for him to trot the road beside the equestrians, the young lady graciously permitted him to mount her horse behind her, and so they two, comfortably and happily seated on the one horse, made the journey in close companionship, until the exigencies of official life told the gold commissioner to leave his distinguished visitors and trudge back to duty."

This sounds as if there might have been a bit of a romance going on between Georgina and Golledge, but, if so, it was soon nipped in the bud, as we may gather from Rogers: "But the pleasure of that ride, however great it may have been, turned out to have been dearly bought. In a very short time after his return from Leech River, Governor Kennedy was informed that an uncertificated Mrs. Golledge sat at the head of the gold commissioner's table, when canonical guests were not present . . ."

Next time Kennedy rode out to the Leech gold diggings Miss Georgina was not with him. Anyway, the miners had not forgotten her, for they were so excited by her first visit and enchanted by her smiles that they named Georgina Flat in her honor.

Georgina went with her father on a state visit to Nanaimo: "The town appeared gay beyond precedent and the inhabitants vied with each other to demonstrate their loyalty. A triumphal arch was erected on the wharf . . . and when the shades of night drew in, bonfires were lighted throughout the town, and the houses illuminated."

The Kennedy girls went several times a year to Beacon Hill and Clover Point to see the soldiers: "The shooting having terminated, His Excellency, with his ladies, appeared, the company presenting arms when His Excellency's lady alighted from her carriage, and from a raised platform presented the prizes" to the very flower of Victoria's young manhood in uniforms bespiashed with red and gold, while the Kennedy girls, their glorious smiles at their sweetest, smiled and waved their posies and nosegays, and tossed their beribboned heads.

A really big event at Government House during the Kennedy terms was this, quaintly described in The Colonist:

"The large and respectable audience present at the concert at Government House in aid of the funds of the Female Infirmary reflects on the incessant energy of the ladies of Victoria and the liberality of the people on whom it was extended.

"The better half of the audience were ladies. All were in a humor to be pleased, yet we must do them all justice to say that on no public occasion here have we seen a nicer discrimination shown by a Victoria audience in the bestowal of their plaudits."

It would appear, however, that there were some sour notes that day, and some grumblings from the ladies about the performances of the men: "To hint that any of the gentlemen, by shrugging their shoulders and gulping their breaths, reminded the spectators in the remotest wav of a blacksmith's bellows painfully taking wind, or that the gushing crescendo of a pretentious masculine solo bore the faintest resemblance to the spasmodic swell of a dilapidated bagpipe would be so rude as to render us disagreeable that we hasten to apologize for even mentioning it. There was plenty of what was melodious and pleasing:

"The best solo by a gentleman was given by Lumley, Franklin, Esq.—'Fra Poco'—a well-chosen operative air, admirably suited to his voice. It was sung with the utmost ease, good taste and withal in a manly, sensible style.

"In the duet 'Home to Our Mountain' the soft, smooth voice of Mrs. William Searby, gliding through the melody, accorded admirably with the bolder and more soaring notes of Miss Jessica Pidwell. A. T. Elliott relieved the occasion of sameness by giving 'The White Squall' in a hearty, manly voice."

As we can see, Miss Georgina Kennedy had a gay and giddy time in Victoria, even if she did not find a husband, as did her elder sister.
